U-Boat Activity Practically Paralyzed Before End Came, Says High U. S. Naval Official

Assistant Secretary Roosevelt Declares if War Had Lasted Six Months Longer, German Undersea Craft Would Have Been Put Entirely Out of Action—North Sea Mine Barrage Disheartened Commanders.

WASHINGTON, March 15.

IF the European war had lasted six months longer the German submarines would have been out of business.

This is the conviction of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who returned on the steamer George Washington with President Wilson, after having spent six weeks in England, France and Belgium in connection with the demobilization of our naval forces.

Perhaps the United States navy did not give the final death blow to submarine warfare on the sea, but the toll of the German undersea asasins went down steadily after April 6, 1917.

GERMAN officers and men knew that they took their lives in their hands every time they attempted to leave the North Sea. This was becoming increasingly true before the mine barrage was half finished. The ceaseless vigil of the aerial patrol, the sub chasers, destroyers and other craft was getting on the nerves of the Germans. A submarine must come to the surface occasionally to recharge its batteries and give its crew air, as well as to make an attack. It was becoming hazardous for a U-Boat to show its periscope anywhere within the waters through which troop and supply ships were compelled to pass to reach British and French ports.—FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

When the armistice was signed on Nov. 11 last the U-boats were decidedly on the run. Allied and American destroyers, submarine chasers, aircraft and other implements and devices were making it so unhealthy for submarines that the most daring commanders seldom showed their craft on the surface.

As Marshal Foch, Gen. Pershing, Gen. Petain and Marshal Haig gave the enemy no quarter and no rest on land in the last months and weeks of the war, so the allied-American sea forces gave the U-boats no rest on the sea.

"How did we manage to land so many men in France without the loss of an occasional transport and many lives?" Mr. Roosevelt was asked.

"We simply so developed the anti-submarine patrol on the water and in the air as to make it suicidal for U-boat commanders to come anywhere near the shore or the channels leading to ports of debarkation," was the reply.

How Transports Evaded U-Boats

"It worked about like this: Most of the transports passed through the waters between the Spanish coast and the Irish coast. That stretch of water was patrolled as no other stretch had ever been patrolled before.

"Gradually, with the building of a series of aviation stations and bases along the French coast from the English Channel to the Spanish frontier, submarines were forced further out. The seaplane pilots and observers became highly proficient in spotting submarines.

Supplementing the aerial patrol were the 110-foot submarine chasers, which proved of the greatest possible value for inshore work. These hunters would go out on their respective beats and listen for U-boats. The moment the tell-tale sounds were heard the chasers were off after their prey.

"Frequently they would follow a submarine for 24 hours or longer, dropping depth bombs when there appeared to be any chance to make a hit or embarrass the enemy. By this means the U-boats were forced to remain under water for self-protection. They had no opportunity to come to the surface for observation, and consequently it was the exception when they found a target to shoot at.

"The speedy destroyers also engaged in the thrilling hunt for submarines. Many destroyers were constantly employed in the patrol of the waters between Ireland and the Spanish coast, which takes in the entrance to the Irish Sea through St. George's Channel, the entrance to the English Channel and to all principal British ports, as well as French channel ports and Bay of Biscay ports.

Gave Patrol Fleet Wide Berth

"All our troop and supply ships passed through these waters. Sometimes they entered the zone of greatest submarine danger via one and sometimes via another. Always they were escorted by destroyers and other swift convoying or patrolling craft. Occasionally the U-boats got a returning transport or supply ship en route home and far out to sea. On a few occasions a British steamer was successfully attacked while transporting American troops—and they carried about one-half of the American troops to France—but the number of men lost was negligible in comparison with the size of the force transported.

"For months before the armistice was signed U-boat commanders gave the English, French and Irish coasts a wide berth. They did not dare come in close enough to threaten the neck of the bottle leading to any port in the zone of our operations. This means the operations of the allied forces as well as those of Admiral Sims.

"When the armistice was signed the submarine mine barrage, extending virtually from the northern extremity of Scotland to the coast of Norway, was approximately two-thirds completed. This was an American idea and most of the mines were laid by American naval forces, the British co-operating effectively.

"German submarine were still able to get in and out of their home bases, but it was extremely hazardous even before the barrage was completed ,and we know several U-boats weer lost trying to run through the mines.

"That this great barierr of high explosives contributed very largely to the breaking down of the morale of the German navy is amply proven by statements made since the armistice was signed. The German navy personnel went to pieces long before the morale of the land forces broke.

"German officers and men knew that they took their lives in their hands every time they attempted to leave the North Sea. This was becoming increasingly true before the mine barrage was half finished. The ceaseless vigil of the aerial patrol, the sub chasers, destroyers and other craft was getting on the nerves of the Germans. A submarine must come to the surface occasionally to recharge its batteries and give its crew air, as well as to make an attack. It was becoming hazardous for a U-boat to show its periscope anywhere within the waters through which troop and supply ships were compelled to pass to reach British and French ports.

"In the face of this situation, with the German sailors already grumbling, came the mine barrage. It was one too many for the enemy, and was in no small part responsible for the widespread mutiny in the German navy, which rendered impotent that once proud and arrogant service.

"Much has been published about the German submarine bases at Zeebruegge and Ostend, Belgium. This is a mistake. Those two bases were not used by the German Admiralty for supplying U-boats sent into the Atlantic. The English Channel was effectively closed against submarines soon after the United States entered the war, although a daring U-boat commander occasionally made an attack somewhere in the channel. Some of the older and smaller U-boats based on Ostend and Zeebruegge, but these were used for attacks on British ships in the North Sea, mostly coasting steamers, fishing boats, etc., and occasonally to shell an unfortified community on shore.

Visited the German Channel Bases

"Most of the cruising submarines, of course, came out of German bases and home ports. This was primarily because of the fact that it was more convenient and safe to do so, and also because the channel route was closed to them. German destroyers made occasional dashes from Ostend and Zeebruegge.

"It was my pleasure to visit Ostend and a few other points in Belgium during my business tour in January and February. Some of our navy bombing squadrons operated every night from Belgian bases. It is very interesting to observe in this connection that our bomb droppers scrupulously avoided dropping high explosives on residential sections of towns and cities. With a single exception every bomb dropped by an American naval plane in German-occupied Belgium fell where it did military damage. One bomb was dropped in a residential district, but this was due to an oversight or accident. Our men bombed canals, railroad crossings, railroads, warehouses and other military objects. This was in marked contrast to the wild recklessness of the Germans, who dropped bombs indiscriminately and did little military damage, instead, destroying private homes and hospitals and killing innocent women and children, as at Dunkirk, Calais and Boulogne."

In his report to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Mr. Roosevelt pays this tribute to Admiral Sims and the officers and men who served under him:

"It is almost unnecessary for me to speak again of the work of Admiral Sims and Vice Admiral Wilson. The successful operations of Danger of Anarchy, Like That Which Rages in Russia, Seizing Germany Has Moved Allies to Plan Reparation on Basis That Teutons Can Hope to Pay Rather Than on What They Ought to Be Made to Bear.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS,

Author of "The Great War" and "They Shall Not Pass."

PARIS, March 8.

DURING President Wilson's absence in America the lines of the new treaty of Versailles have been on the larger side drawn and substantially agreed to. The fourth of the great European settlements, counting the treaty of Westphalia and the treaties of Utrecht and of Vienna, is now known in outlines; and if one may judge from past great settlements, the larger part of the work which is now being completed in Paris will endure and give form and character to Europe and to the world for a century to come.

AFTER three months of discussion, the conference of Paris has agreed upon a preliminary draft of the league of nations; it has redrawn the frontiers of Europe and substantially agreed that these lines shall be permanent; it has fixed the terms of German disarmament, conditions of German future military life; it has taken precautions against Germany, both military and territorial. Except with respect of Russia and Asia Minor, the great task is well nigh complete, although the details remain open. By another month the European phase of the liquidation of the world war should be over, but satisfactory as is this progress, fair and reasonable as is the settlement which is reaching completion, there is in the minds of all those who are in Paris, the ever-pressing anxiety alike as to German revolution and Russian anarchy, the ever-present problem as to whether western civilization will be able to preserve what it has built against the ever-growing storm of Bolshevism.—FRANK H. SIMONDS.

Most important of all the various departments of what will be the peace of Versailles is the decision with respect to Germany. This decision as to the frontiers is as follows:

Germany will hereafter stop at the Rhine and at the old western frontier of Poland preceding the first partition of 1772. In addition, Germany will lose the Danish speaking populations of Schlesswig and the Polish speaking populations of Upper Silesia. By contrast, she will probably acquire the purely German regions of Austria, the old provinces which were victims of the Hapsburg empire when it began its process of expansion many centuries ago.

Net Loss of 7,000,000 People.

Expressed in statistics, Germany will lose between 60,000 and 70,000 square miles of territory, with a population of between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 and will acquire between 20,000 and 30,000 square miles, with a population of 7,000,000. This means that Germany will in any event suffer a net loss of 30,000 square miles of territory and upwards of 7,000,000 people. Instead 212,000 square miles, her area before the war, which was slightly in excess of that of France, she will have about 173,000 square miles; and instead of a population of 67,000,000 a population of 60,000,000.

Conceivably the Rhenish Republic which is to be created on the left bank of the Rhine may ultimately return to Germany, but even with this ultimate accretion Germany will still be smaller in area than Spain. But the measure of her loss is not expressed in square miles. She will lose the great iron deposits of Lorraine and the coal districts of the Saar outright to France; she will also lose her highly industrialized iron districts of Upper Silesia to Poland. Thus, while the restriction of her area is comparatively small the reduction of her industrial resources is enormous.

On the military and naval side, Germany is to be compelled not only to abandon her claim to her war fleet, which has already been surrendered, but also to give up certain other ships, destroy warships which are building, destroy all her submarine plants and, in addition, agree not to maintain an army in excess of 100,000 as contrasted with a standing army of nearly 800,000 when the war broke out. Rigid provisions are to be made for the inspection of German industrial plants to guard against rearmament, recreation of submarine and aeroplane fleets, and the accumulation of poison gases in considerable amounts.

Rhenish Republic's Buffer Functions

In sum total, this means that Germany having already surrendered most of her heavy artillery and now deprived of her fleets and her instruments of war, forbidden to maintain a conscript army, pushed behind the Rhine on the west and the Vistula on the east, is reduced to a condition which will make a new German attack upon the Western world unlikely for at least a quarter of a century, and steps have been taken to provide for the creation of a Rhenish republic, that, when such an attack comes, if it does, its first fury will be borne not in the French and Belgian industrial districts.

As the congress of Vienna undertook to protect Europe against France after the Napoleonic wars, the congress of Versailles is now seeking to protect Europe against a new German menace, and its military and territorial guarantees are absolutely of the most formidable character.

Clearly defined and still approaching settlement is the very vexed question of what reparation Germany must make. Calculations as to the utmost Germany can pay vary as widely as $10,000,000,000 for a minimum and $40,000,000,000 as a maximum, and I have encountered no credible witnesses who believe that Germany will be able to pay more than $20,000,000,000 in any relatively near future; and even such payment will have to be stretched over a period of years.

In these years, following the precedent of the German occupation of France in 1870 and thereafter until payment of the indemnity, the allied troops will occupy the left bank of the Rhine with the bridgeheads as a guarantee against payment. Moreover, even a better guarantee is the utter dependence of Germany upon the outside world for food supplies, which will leave her completely at the mercy of the allied blockade. It is a fact little mentioned but widely perceived here that the payment which Germany can make even in the remote future will hardly cover the cost of restoring the devastated districts, with a smaller payment for the destroyed merchant marine of the allied nations; yet the fact is obvious and ominous that colossal debts which Germany has compelled her enemies to incur in self-defense will still have to be borne, not by the German aggressor, but by the people who had to defend themselves against German assault.

Allies Now in Full Accord

After many hesitations and much debate, the allies have not merely come to a substantial agreement on the terms of peace which are to be imposed upon Germany, but they are now in accord that the terms which are to be final shall within the next few weeks be served upon Germany in the shape of preliminary peace terms. There is general agreement that far too much time has been wasted in settling the relatively simple and enormously important problem of what to do with Germany. In this period Germany has gone through a stage of political recovery which made her a new menace for the moment, at least in appearance, and, following this, she has already sunk into a state of chaos and revolution which can hardly be arrested unless such German leaders as remain are able to begin the business of national life on a fixed basis; and this fixed basis must be the terms which the allies have decided upon.

In all probability by the last of March or the first days of April the Germans will be invited to come to Versailles and sign the preliminary treaty of peace terms, which I have in general outlined above. With very minor modifications this preliminary treaty will express the final decision of the allies exactly as the treaty of Frankfort registered with insignificant changes the armistice signed many months before as the closing act of the Franco-Prussian war. We are then very close to peace, and when the preliminary peace has been signed the German phase of the war will be over.

In addition to dealing with Germany, the allies had before them the gigantic task of erecting on the ruins of Austria and Hungary and on the western frontiers of Russia new states which should in general follow the lines of ethnic division.

Middle Europe Enters New Phase

This task also has been pushed in recent weeks and we can now see in map substantially what are to be the limits of the new states of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Hungary. Similarly it now seems to be settled that the German-speaking provinces of Austria will join Germany; thus Middle Europe has at last been resolved into its component racial elements and European history enters a new

Engineer, in Charge of United Railways Valuation, Tells How the Work Is Being Done

Though Inquiry Has Been Under Way for Five Weeks, Such Is Its Magnitude, Says Harrop, That it Is Just Now "Getting a Good Start—" Result Will Determine the Fare Charges—100 Items Enter Into Determination of the Condition of a Single Car.

ALTHOUGH the entire engineering corps of the Missouri Public Service Commission is in the fifth week of its valuation of the physical property of the United Railways, such is the magnitude of the task that the accomplishment so far is virtually only a good start. The 6-cent fare expires automatically on June 1 and the commission then will be called upon to fix a rate.

The valuation, which is to be a basis of making the rate, compels a minute inventory of every item of the property and an application to them of three different sets of figures, from the totals of which is established a "fair present" value.

The car rider who daily is condemned to observe one or more hours the interior of a street car can eenumerate no more than a set of trucks, topped with a car body that contains a coin box, which exacts 6 cents from him; a register which exacts honesty from the fare box, a stove, hot or cold; some straps with which he is overfamiliar, and a voice, male or female, prodding him to "move forward."

Feeling the Bumps to Determine the Condition of the Company's Tracks

An engineer for the Commission is spending his time riding street cars. He sits in the motorman's vestibule, note book in hand. He jots down the condition of the track over which he is riding. Bumps mean only discomfort to passengers. Harrop says each bump speaks of some certain condition to the eingineer. "He can learn more by feeling the bumps," Harrop says, "than by walking the track and looking at the bumps." When notes have been compiled on all the bumps—the magnitude of the work again appears—engineers will visit the bumps noted and determine the condition of the track.

Yet J. L. Harrop, chief engineer of the Public Service Commission, who is directing the valuation, says that an inventory of a street car will list 100 separate items. None can be missed if the valuation is to serve its purpose.

In the Power House

When asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter to detail the manner of making inventory of a public utility, Harrop led the way to the power house of the company at Thirty-ninth street and Park avenue. The power house has eight generators that carry the peak load of rush hours, dynamos that furnish the lighting for the company's offices, transformers that change the character of the current as it is received to current as it is needed for the operation of street cars, long switchboards that control the distribution of power and several batteries of boilers—a large plant, each integral part made up of countless other integral parts, all of which must be taken into account in an inventory.

Harrop went to the boilers. Then he handed over "Commission Form No. 26," captioned "Boilers." The sheet contained 45 questins on the type of boilers, the kind and condition of their attachment, the character of their foundation, how often they are cleaned—all to be answered in detail.

"When our engineers have finished that sheet, we will have a complete analysis of each and every boiler," Harrop said. "Under 'remarks' he will put his comment on the general condition and efficiency of the boiler.

"There are 11 such forms for the power plant alone, so that when all are filled in we will have an exact record of every iota of work or material that has contributed to the existence of that power house."

As to the Tracks

The magnitude of the ork is further apparent from a glance at the skeleton heads of the inventory—land, including right of way and other than right of way; roadway, including grading, straight track and special track; paving, roadway machinery and tools, bridges, trestles and culverts, crossings, fences and signs, telephine lines, poles and their fixtures, undegfound conduits, distribution system, including the miles of wire that net the city, general office buildings, shops and car houses, stations and miscellaneous buildings, passenger cars, service cars and utility equipment, carpenter and woodworking shops, furniture, miscellaneous general equipment, such as horses and wagons and auto trucks, power plant buildings, substation buildings, substation equipment and transmission system.

Under these general headings, in some instances, are a score of subheadings, each supported by a mass of detailed survey.

Minuteness seems to be the working watchword. Two engineers were encountered just as one was applying a measure to a ladder to determine its exact dimensions.

The first work of appraisal being done is on the tracks. Engineers in the company's offices are copying from track atlases descriptions of every foot of the 460.9 miles of street car tracks in St. Louis and St. Louis County, getting the type of rails, the size and kind of ties, the character of their foundation, when the rails were laid, the location of curves, wyes, switches, sidetracks.

Meanwhile the company's track foremen are furnishing daily a record of places in the city where repair work, necessitating the opening of tracks exposing their construction, is being done. If the track is open at Grand and Olive, one of Harrop's engineers takes the description of that particular piece of track as recorded in the company's atlas and visits Grand and Olive, there to check the correctness of the company's statements. Before the track appraisan is complete, Harrop says, his engineers will have had opportunity to examine thousands of spots where track construction is exposed.

Another engineer is riding street cars. He sits in the motorman's vestibule, notebook in hand. He jots down the condition of the track over which he is riding comfort to passengers. Harrop says each bump speaks of some certain condition to the engineer. "He can learn more by feelings the bumps," Harrop says, "than by walking the tracks and looking at the bumps." When notes have been compiled on all the bumps—the magnitude of the work again appears—engineers will visit the bumps noted and determine the condition of the track.

When all this is completed will come the task of converting the mass of information into dollars and cents, the figures that go to determining how much of the company's $100,000,000 book value is real value.

That part of the work, Harrop says, is governed by precedent set by Public Service Commissions of this and other states, and by court decisions. The practice adopted by the Missouri commission is that a "fair present" value for rate-making shall be based upon due consideration of the original cost of construction, the cost of reproduction and the cost of reproduction less depreciation, together with, as court decisions say, "all other elements of value."

The Three Elements

Harrop defines the three elements as follows:

Original cost of construction—Actual expenditure of money at the time of construction.

Cost of reproduction—Actual expenditure of money necessary to reproduce the property on the basis of the average price for material and labor for the 10 years preceding Dec. 31, 1915.

Cost of reproduction, less depreciation—Actual expenditure same as above, less accrued depreciation , depreciation being the shrinkage in value due to wear and tear, obsolescence and inadequacy.

The cost of any particular portion of property listed will be determined by reference to company vouchers, showing money actually expended, contracts showing the cost of construction, and other documents, which, Harrop says, he has been assured, are complete in the offices of the United Railways from the time of consolidation of the various independent lines.

Depreciation is reckoned technically and directly from the notes made by the engineers while engaged in inventory and from the experience of many years set down in engineering records.

"It will not be completed," he said, "until it is so thorough a valuation that it will stand up."

Harrop is rated "a good engineer" by the profession in St. Louis. He was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1[illegible]06, was the assistant engineer in 1907-08 on the Pennsylvania terminals in New York City, the work at that time being the construction of the notable tunnels under the East River. He later was resident engineer of the Wisconsin Central Railroad, now a part of the Soo system, and in 1909 was made chief engineer of the Wisconsin Public Service Commission. He came to the Missouri Commission upon its establishment in 1913, and has been in that body since.

The engineers now at work on the United Railways valuation under his direction are of his regular staff—S. R. Hatch, H. R. Gass, Paul Bayless, W. K. Freudenberger and W. F. Kidd.

Heroes Want Living Jobs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The boys have done their bit and for the past few months have been returning to civilian life. How different their return than their departure! Months ago they "shoved off" amid wild demonstrations. They were made to feel that they were "it." And weren't they? They, or at least the large majority of them, were voluntarily giving up good homes and good positions; each one was leaving some loved one behind. But the signs of "Good-by, Good Luck and God Bless You," and the reassuring cries of "Atta Boy!" and "Bring me home a helmet" pushed down the sob lump and replaced it with a swelling of the chest. Their loved ones would be here when they came back and their employers assured them that their old positions would be open for them. So they left St. Louis full of confidence and the "stuff" that turned the German empire from a dominating world Power into a cringing, helpless nation.

And now they return, wearing their little gold chevrons, or maybe their crosses for distinguished bravery. These are their only rewards for months of hard sacrifice. If only those who were fortunate enough to get here first could get word to those who are coming of the big disappointment that awaits them, we are sure that many of them would be content to stay "over there." If we, who are already here, cannot get work because all the decent positions have been snappd up by the girls and the slackers, what will the fellows over there now do?

Is the man in uniform being cast into the discard because his work of fighting is done? It seems as though this is the case, because the most of us have been trying week after week to get something to do. The only jobs that are open are those that do not pay enough for the girls and the slackers who played the game safe. Such jobs are held as the prizes for the fellows who gave.

Cheery, Helpful Advice.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I am upon the sundown slope of life, with the milestones of three score, ten and seven, and old Father Time has but few records left for me, and then I will say:

"Flowers of yesterday am I Laden with the fragrance of days gone by."

But before I go, I speak to you, listening in the rays of morning's manhood. Many hills and valleys of resistance have I trod, the bridge of pleasure has ever been to remember:

He who malice bears,
A withered conscience wears.
A smile, the gift of God;
A frown, an inspiration bad.
He who loves, is blessed;
He who hates, is cursed.
Friendship's memories ever dear,
Sweet flowers of goodness near.

And I charge you, my dear boys, to remember that one of the saddest thoughts of human life is the death of friendship.

Truth, my darling buds of manhood, lies at the heart of American civilization. And the home of Truth is in the bosom of God. Give your unqualified assent to no proposition that you do not know to be true.

Mileage for Country Doctors.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I just read in the Post-Dispatch an article stating that a county Representative had introduced a bill to allow doctors 25 cents a mile for their work. I had to laugh, and I could picture this second Henry Clay in my mind's eye as being 6 feet 6 inches high, hair 15 inches long, toe and finger nails 1 inch long. Lower extremity of pants in boot legs, no socks, good six-shooter, and eating raw meat; proprietor of a 10-gallon moonshine still, and having plenty of tobacker and 'lasses; his wife looking to be confined soon and his credit not the best in calling a doctor. I hope I am mistaken, though. E. A. DUNCAN, M. D.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

Although the war ceased in November, the peace treaty has not yet been completed and many of the heaviest expenses of the war continue and will continue for months.

The Government of the United States must take care of all its responsibilities in connection with our tremendous and successful effort to win the war. We must maintain the American army of occupation until peace arrangements are finally concluded. We must bring all our soldiers home and maintain them until the armies have been demobilized. There are heavy expenses connected with the closing of contracts and camps and with reconstruction. Programs for soldier employment and home building should be carried out. The war-torn, ruined peoples must be fed and their industries revived. They will need large assistance in a financial way.

This work must be accomplished and the honor and credit of the nation maintained. Hence the Victory Loan, the campaign for which will open on April 21.

The success of the Victory Loan is as important as the success of the war loans. To be sure, we are no longer menaced by powerful and unscrupulous foes, but taking care of our financial responsibilities and reaping the full fruits of the war are essential duties in which the honor and credit of the nation are involved. We cannot abandon our soldier boys or fail in any of our national obligations.

The American people ought to be willing to wind up our war work as creditably and honorably as they carried it on in the crisis of the fighting. We believe they are, and wholly apart from the attractiveness of the loan, will do their full duty in sustaining the Government until the last cent of obligation is paid.

The Victory Loan will probably be more attractive than any. Short-term notes will be issued and the interest will exceed the 4 1-4 per cent of the third and fourth loans. With the war over, with the nation safe, with a glorious record of achievement and a prospect of great prosperity, the notes should and, we believe, will be taken cheerfully. We predict a success equalling if not exceeding the best of any previous loan. It should be a record campaign.

STARVING THE BARGE LINE.

The years are full of just such object lessons as the Mississippi River barge line presents.

The conditions on which the success of this Government undertaking depended were fully understood. At least, few matters of importance to river interests have received greater publicity. This use of public funds in a field formerly reserved to private enterprise could be justified only on a plain showing that it was filling an urgent need. The old slogan, "Dig her deep through the valley," had as a complement a new slogan, "Pile the freight mountain high on river docks."

The river service from St. Louis to tidewater began Sept. 28. Reports on its business from that time to Dec. 31 have become public within recent days. They showed that the Government itself, through its Grain Corporation, operating under the Food Administrator, had utilized a large amount of cargo space on the barges' down trips. They also showed that imports of coffee, straw goods and other commodities had occupied much cargo space on the up trips.

But St. Louis will not soon forget the meager showing in cargo space utilized by interests which send out from this vicinity a freight tonnage running into the tens of thousands every month.

During the three months referred to the barges made 27 round trips. In other words, they covered the long distance between St. Louis and New Orleans 54 times. The total contribution to barge earnings by freight originating in the St. Louis industrial district in that time amounted to $2500—less than $100 for each round trip and less than $50 for each voyage between the two termini.

The contribution to the coal bill of the entire wholesale dry goods trade of St. Louis was $345, the charges on the 23 tons sent by river out of thousands of tons sent by other routes. The contribution to earnings of one great manufacturing concern in three months was $3.17, not enough to pay an engine-room hand for one day. The corporation with millions in resources controlled by the president of the Chamber of Commerce, representative in a peculiar sense of St. Louis sentiment and St. Louis commercial policy, contributed $70. Over what distance would the machine oil that might be purchased with $70 supply the power boats' engines?

The showing would be laughable but for the importance of the interests so vitally affected. Exposure of the facts conveyed a lesson by which St. Louis has already profited. But it is a lesson on which not only river ports, but all cities identified with the welfare of the valley must base their future action. Repeatedly the discharge by the Government at large expense of its duty to the river has been followed only by private apathy and failure to grasp opportunity. A climax is reached when the barge line, established in a special and unusually generous recognition of river needs was followed by a course which, however intended, had starvation as its inevitable consequence.

Support from the shippers of the whole valley is invited by joint rail and river rates and a differential of 20 cents in favor of the river.

Private co-operation is the one condition on which a continuance of congressional help in the restoration of the rivers can be expected. The barge line must have not a grudging and niggardly, but an unhesitating and highly liberal support from the terminal cities and the entire valley. Lacking that support it will cease to exist.

THE AIRPLANE GETS INTO STATUTE.

In revising the motor vehicle license laws, the Kansas Legislature has expressly exempted flying vehicles from a tax. The law formerly provided that all motor vehicles, which are designated as those "propelled by other power than muscle," should be provided with a license plate bought from the proper State official, and that certain regulations as to light be observed.

But the amendment exempts farm tractors and other farm machinery from these laws and also those machines which travel through the air. The debate developed that it was the idea of the Senators that it would be unwise to tax airplanes as yet, but they thought that the State should go on record as recognizing these vehicles, which are likely to be an important factor of the near future, and thus open the way for a suitable tax or regulations when airplanes become so numerous as to demand public landing places or require regulation as to routes.

AMERICANISM VS. ZIONISM.

From the New Republic.

Though most of the leaders of Zionism in America are sincerely and profoundly convinced of the compatibility of Zionism and Americanism, they are none the less profoundly mistaken. Nationalistic Zionism demands not complete individual liberty for the Jew, but group autonomy. What this may mean in practice can be gathered from a recent editorial in our Jewish Chronicle, denying to Prof. Adler, or to any other person born a Jew, the right to follow his conscience and to abandon the Jewish religion. Indeed, how could a Jewish Palestine allow complete religious freedom, freedom of intermarriage and free non-Jewish immigration, without soon losing its very reason for existence? A national Jewish Palestine must necessarily mean a state founded on a peculiar race, a tribal religion and a mystic belief in a peculiar soil, whereas liberal America stands for separation of church and state, the free mixing of races, and the fact that men can change their habitation and language and still advance the process of civilization. The supposition that the Jews in Palestine will be more fortunately situated to make contribution to civilization than the Jews of America is contrary to all human experience. There is not a single opportunity offered by Palestine that is not open, to a larger extent, here. Even the Jewish University of Jersualem will not offer a single course that a student could not just as well, or better, pursue in one of our American universities. The fact, however, is that the American ideal of freedom is just what the Zionists most fear. At bottom they have no confidence that with complete toleration and full freedom Judaism can hold its own in the open field; hence the plea among the more candid of the Zionists that "Americanism is our greatest danger."

America Saved Ideals.

MAURICE MAETERLINCK in Current History.

AMERICA understood that the issue at stake was not only a matter of elementary justice and pity, but that it was still more a question of high duty toward the eternal conscience and morals of mankind. Thanks to her intervention, it will not be declared and taught to our children hereafter that honesty, loyalty and heroism are only dangerous lies and the stock in trade of dupes; that wrong, always and everywhere, is right if it has might to sustain it; and that the only reward permissible here below for duty magnificently performed is a sum total of sufferings, disasters and death by hunger. An example of iniquity on so immense and triumphant a scale would have dealt a blow to human ideals from which they could not have recovered in centuries. You Americans have not allowed that blow to be dealt, and the future, which belongs to you more than to any other, will never forget it.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH by Clark McAdams

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Things are going
Much as might
Have been foreseen;
One could hardly Have expected
Everything
To be serene.
After centuries
Of license,
Counting fighting
As a sport,
Just imagine
All our motives
First submitted
To a court!

True, the thing
Is highly moral,
And we know it
To be right;
All the same
We hate to think of Yielding liberty
To fight.
Inasmuch
As our opponents
As a rule
Are weak and small,
What have we
To gain from others
Saying if
We fight at all?

Politics
My little girlie,
Find but little Use for peace;
Politicians
Fairly shudder
At the thought
That war may cease.
People who
Have kept the eagle
Fairly screaming
Right along
Hate to make it
A canary
Having nothing
More than song.

Those who lead us
With bravado
Lead us more Than those
With brains:
Theirs is always
To exhort us
To the Armageddon plains.
Even though
We seldom follow,
Being for
The most part tame,
Still their lusty
Calls to battle
Serve their purpose
Just the same.

Thus we have it,
Sweet Luella—
Merely this
And nothing more;
Those whose purposes
Exploit us
Militarily
Are sore.
Well they know
That like Othello,
Once the better
Day shall dawn,
They shall stand
Before us also
With their Occupation gone.

The Senators who signed the round robin are home now trying to square themselves.

Sir: As far as I can see, Just a Minute alone is working to a practical solution of the crime wave in St. Louis. It fairly makes one laugh to read that almost all of the day police have been put on at night. Are we to believe that if thieves are arrested at night they are any more likely to be sent to prison than if they were arrested in the day time? I can't believe it. I subscribe wholly to your plan of having stealing validated in some such way as the Treasury Department has validated gambling. That will give us the support of the better element among thieves, and we can regulate the worse element. Of course, I quite agree with you that it is a pity to have any stealing at all; but inasmuch as it seems to have become a necessary part of the form of politics under which we live, we must make the best of it. I know a few thieves, and there is quite a good deal of feeling among them that too many people are stealing and that much of the thieving now going on is such as can only prejudice the profession. These people, who have nothing to do with the wave, but are merely caught up in it, will gladly support us in some effort to hold all thieving within tolerable bounds. As a matter of fact, unless something of that sort is done, the higher grade thieves, who are those in mesh with the community rather more intimately than the mere pikers are, will strike on us some of these days and the city will fall. Health and Life and Divine Healing.

I am healing the sick, raising the dead, cleansing the leprosy, unstopping the deaf ones ears and letting them hear and cutting loose the stammering tongue and letting them talk, curing the paralyzed and I am curing the dropsy, moving cataracts, opening the blind eyes, removing the tumors, straightening out drawn limbs, curing cancers, removing winds and cures of heart trouble. Now you would like to know what I am charging. When you find my work has done your good or cured you, then whatever you think that I am worthy you place it in my hand, then if you don't find where my work did you any good or cured you, then I don't expect anything from you more than seven pennies. God says tell the people after finding my work has done you good or cured you, then if you fail to place something in my hand you would as well to be in the sea with a mill stone around your necks.

How to Pronounce Bolsheviki.

"Bolsheviki" is pronounced correctly as follows: "Bull-shay-vee-kee," with the strongest emphasis on the last syllable. This was the rendering given recently by Count Ilya Tolstoy, son of the eminent Russian philosopher and novelist when he was in the city.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Chu Chin Chow" Described as the Most Colorful Arabian Nights Spectacle

How Animated Pageants of the Orient Reproduce the Fabled Bagdad of Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves.

By CLARENCE STRATTON.

(This is one of a series of articles by Mr. Stratton to be published in the Post-Dispatch, on plays now running in New York and Chicago, and which have not yet been seen in St. Louis.)

"THE Arabian Nights' Entertainment" has been plundered so many thousands of times by story tellers that it seems only fair that dramatists should appropriate its never-palling tales for stage presentation. In Paris a few years ago the Opera Comique was producing "Maroufe," in which an attempt was made to transform the Aladdin tale into lyric opera. Every night one poor lone donkey stood outside the stage door patiently awaiting his turn, and that one little Oriental detail was about so close as the entire opera came to reproducing the real atmosphere of the ancient East. When its composer was brought to New York the opera was produced at the Metropolitan, but again something vanished in the presentation; the Arabian Nights' Entertainment was gone.

The reason is that the spirit of the "Thousand and One Tales" is not dignified, not serious. The East is crafty, suspicious, satiric, scoffing. When a dramatist deals with its essences he had better frankly accept its bantering flavor or run the risk of almost inevitably producing such trash as the "Omar Khayam" of a few years ago. When Oscar Asche, the celebrated London actor who portrays roles varying from Shakspeare to Shaw, turned to "The Arabian Nights" he frankly constructed a spectacular extravaganza based on the delightful miracle of Ali Baba and his 40 thieves.

"Chu Chin Chow" a Diversion.

The most superficial knowledge of conditions in London during the war will emphasize what a tremendous effect such a treat to the eye must have been. With actors and audiences strung to such a pitch of apprehension from air raids that a performance of "Tristan and Isolde" had to be stopped because performers were unable to continue, "Chu Chin Chow" at His Majesty's Theater must have proven more than a welcome diversion; it was a necessary cure. During three years it has been drawing crowded houses.

In New York it ran for months before it moved to the adequate spaces of the enormous stage and audience accommodations of the Auditorium Theater, Chicago, where, so great is the demand for tickets, that suburban matinees are given on Sundays, and frequently so-called "convention matinees" on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, in addition to the two regular afternoons.

From the moment when the spectator gazes contentedly upon the panoramic view of old Bagdad against a deep blue sky, showing above an elaborate screen reproducing the one presented to Lord Kitchener by the former Empress of China, until that same curtain slowly descends upon the blossom-decked, moonlit orchard where stand the tall jars in which the 40 thieves now huddle scalded to death, one gorgeously colored and vivaciously animated scene follows another in an almost unimaginable climax. Color and gorgeousness are the themes of the beautiful musical settings to the songs, processions and dances. The entrance of the robber disguised as a Chinese potentate is a remarkable composition, while the cobbler's solo in the third act, sung by Felice de Gregorio is the equal of many a much more highly bepraised number from opera.

Gorgeous Stage Settings.

To an even greater degree do color and gorgeousness enter into the stage settings. The opening scene requires the full extent of the largest stage, with double stairways, elevated platforms and stately columns leading to still wider stretches. For here Chu Chin Chow comes in all the state of the far East to visit the miserly Kasim Baba, whom he means to plunder. So into the wonder city of Bagdad come the splendors of China, the sombre seductiveness of Egypt, the exotic weirdness of Java. There are combinations of costumes, nationalities and races such as one could hardly believe ever existed.

Later scenes displaying the same prodigality of invention are the Slave Market, The Blue Hall of Kasim, Baba's Palace, the Cave of Abu Hasan (disguised as Chu Chin Chow), a Bagdad Bazar, the Orchard by Moonlight. While these are overwhelming in their miscellaneousness, there are relieving pictures among them that impress the eye more by their smallness and unity.

Immediately following the crowded finale of the first scene there appears in the wide black fore-curtain a small opening cut with the curved top and straight sides of an oriental window. This gradualy widens until the beautiful small vignetted scene is disclosed, high above the stage floor. The stone walls of the huddled houses flank the narrowest of torturous streets. One window glows dimly in the light from within. Here Marjanah, the singing slave girl, is serenaded by the worthless Ali Baba's son until she promises to flee with him to the cactus grove without the city. It is thus that the entrance to the robbers' save is discovered.

Other Scenes.

This small stage is one of the most beautiful details of the entire production. There are several others disclosed and arranged in the same way, but none produces quite the same impression that this first does. In one, Ali Babi sits in a silk stall, and as he drapes costly fabrics about himself he humorously sings of his changed fortunes. In another, representing the Kasim's harem, where Ali Baba frolics while his brother goes to find the robbers' cave, the small alcove is inclosed by transparent stained glass windows in shades of green. The last of these charming inserts shows the rose terrace where Kasim's relieved widow celebrates with her lover-brother-in-law her recent release from her miserly tyrant-husband. In colors and composition this might have been designed by Maxfield Parrish.

Through all these 13 varied scenes pass and repass the 25 members of the cast, surrounded by the Forty Thieves, Javanese dancers and fanners, Nile girls, desert dancers, jewel dancers, Circassian and Turkestan slaves, pot girls, fruit sellers, mannequins of the Fashion Show, carrier girls, peddlers, water carriers, pedestrians, merchants, wedding guests, donkeys, and even a camel. If the plot and action make an extravaganza, the costumes constitute a phantasmagoria.

After the kaleidoscopic shiftings of the feast in honor of Chu Chin Chow, the Slave Market, the Blue Hall and the Robbers' Cave, the jaded eye of the spectator feels that there can certainly be no more striking combinations of costume color, no more unusual motives for dress, no more parts of the body either decked or uncovered. Yet the eye is mistaken. Into the Bazar of Bagdad in the last act, where at first only an old cobbler sings at his work, comes the little shrewish wife of the now fabulously wealthy Ali Baba to look at creations for herself. To display his marvels the merchant brings forth a blue background before which his mannequins strut and pose.

The Acme in Costuming.

In these groups the costumer has reached his acme. Human ingenuity can certainly go no further. The exhibition beggars description. No mere man could begin to give the slightest idea of its dazzling variety, its uniqueness, its daring color and form, its underlying beauty. The mannequins enter singly, but later form groups. One series presents Egyptian motives of costuming. Another suggests birds which pose and plume themselves. Other ideas have been taken from animals—one woman is a long, graceful, lithe tiger. Persia contributes a group. India offers the peculiar architectural features of its temples. But China outshines all the others in originality of design and harmony of color. At the end of this the eye is so atrophied that one wonders whether the Briton with his love of music hall shows and recurring Christmas harlequinades and pantomimes cannot stand more of such spectacularness with less fatigue than an American.

The mass effects are the most imposing, yet they are not the entire production. Every member of the vast organization is adequate; many are excellent. They are too many to single out; but from Boston (Tina Russell), the half-witted servant of Ali Baba's wife, who almost laughs her shiny white teeth out of her head, up to Abu Hasan (Lionel Brahan), the robber chieftain, not a single performer, leaves anything undone. Even the three mutes in a palace entertainment act the farcical situation capitally.

Acting Very Creditable.

Of come of the actors a great deal is demanded. Lionel Brahan has to sing, act and look a robber leader. When he enters in the first act he appears fully 12 feet tall. From then until his former slave and confederate inside the town stabs him, he dominates every scene in which he moves. This aid, the desert slave woman, seemed to be actually lived by Majorie Wood, who is quite as beautiful as she is tigerish.

Albert Howson as Kasim Baba, the doddering miser of Bagdad, carried the audience off its feet in one scene of climactic emotion which no one suspected he could muster up. An idyllic note was added to the elaborate story by the love passages of Ali Baba's son with a singing Slave Girl, both of whom, Clare Stratton and George Rasley, sang beautifully. Besides the foregoing, credit for the rendition of musical numbers must be accorded to Stella St. Cloud as the chief-wife of Kasim Baba; Lucy Beaumont, the shrewish mate of Ali Baba; the already cited Felica de Gregorio; and Eugene Cowles, who rollicked about as a thoroughly incompetent steward.

The entire production at the Auditorium left nothing to be asked for. The orchestra was large enough for the Nibelungen cycle. The stage is so vast that great numbers of people seemed natural for such a crowded city as Bagdad. The lighting on the stage was the result of the long run in one house. At the rear of the audience a large battery of spot and flood lights emphasized the stage picture. On a smaller one, with fewer people and restricted equipment, "Chu Chin Chow" might lose some of its spectacular effect, but under the conditions afforded by a large house it is one of the most colorful and gorgeous productions America has ever seen.

Events in the Social World

National Suffrage Convention Which Will Meet Here a Week From Tomorrow Will Bring Busy Days for St. Louis Society Women, When Yellow Ribbons Will Be on Display and "Votes for Women" Will Be Heard on All Sides.

THE convening, a week from tomorrow, of the fiftieth annual convention of the National Suffrage Association in St. Louis, will make the week one in which the topic of the moment will be "Votes for Women." It will be a week of yellow ribbons and womanly deliberation and will require much in the way of entertainment for the diversion and proper honor on the part of social St. Louis for the distinguished guests who are expected to attend.

The convention will exist five days, being called to order Monday morning at Hotel Statler and ending the following Friday. This naturally means a program of friendly intercourse and social splendor that will fill each of the five days of the convention's duration. Principal among the many events scheduled in accordance with this requirement is the formal dinner of Tuesday, the first of its kind to be given on so elaborate a scale in St. Louis in several years. It will take place at the Hotel Statler at 7:30 o'clock with Mrs. David Thompson as chairman of the reception committee.

DAUGHTER AND FATHER MEET AFTER 15 YEARS' SEPARATION

Post-Dispatch Item Attracts Attention of Woman Who Thought She Was an Orphan.

Andrew Hunsacker of Cincinati was reunited Thursday with his daughter, Mrs. Laundia Allison, who lives in St. Louis, following publication of an item seeking trace of her which was published in the Post-Dispatch last Monday.

Hunsacker sent word from Cincinnati asking the Post-Dispatch to aid him. He said that 15 years ago he was forced to separate from his two children after the death of his wife and he soon lost trace of them. The other child, son named John, was of army age and enlisted when America entered the war, going across with the Rainbow Division. Through the Red Cross the father and son were united upon the son's return.

Arriving at her father's home, Thursday, Mrs. Allison said: "It does not seem possible. I thought I was an orphan. I bought that copy of the Post-Dispatch and there was the item about my father looking for me. I telegraphed immediately and followed in person as soon as possible."

64 ST. LOUISANS AMONG ARRIVALS AT NEWPORT NEWS

Members of 412th Telegraph Battalion Part of 1074 Officers and Men Brought Home by Battleship New Jersey.

RECRUITED FROM TELEPHONE COMPANY

Entered Active Service in France in January, 1918, and Saw Hard Fighting While Attached to British Force.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 15.—The battleship New Jersey arrived here today from Brest with 1074 officers and men, including the 412th Telegraph Battalion, Missourians, complete, and casual companies from Illinois, Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi and Nebraska.

Among the casual officers was Lieut. Stewart McDowell, aviator, of Philadelphia, who was captured by the Germans while bombing behind the German lines.

Four Officers and 60 Men of Battalion Are St. Louisans.

The 412th Telegraph Battalion was recruited in the summer of 1917 from among employes of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. Four of its officers and 60 of its men are St. Louisans, who worked in the local plant and office of the company prior to entering the service. Two of the St. Louis officers, Lieutenant-Colonel F. A. Montrose and Capt. Earl H. Painter, were promoted from the rank of Major and Lieutenant, respectively, while overseas.

After six months of training in a Texas camp, the battalion entrained for Hoboken, N. J., from whence they sailed Jan. 10 for Liverpool. They arrived in England, Jan. 18 and remained in camp at Winchester until Jan. 26, when they crossed the Channel to France. Their first work in active service was the building of a main-wire telegraph system from American General Headquarters at Chaumont to Dijon, on the road to Bordeaux, the great army base.

The work was completed March 29 and the battalion, after being supplied with steel helmets, gas masks and revolvers, in addition to equipment necessary to carry on their regular duties, was loaded into trucks and sent to Fruges, where, on April 26, it became attached to the British Fourth Army, then engaged in a desperate battle in defense of Amiens, at which the great German offensive was directed.

Battle Service of Unit.

The organization's actual battle service began at this point. The men worked night and day for several weeks, maintaining telegraphic communications for the British near Amiens. They worked constantly within earshot of the guns, and at night the flashes from the field pieces on both sides were plainly visible.

From Fruges the outfit was transferred to Camiers, on the English Channel, where they were subjected to frequent night raids by enemy planes. Company E of the battalian was detached at that time and assigned to duty on the battle line back at Amiens. The remainder of the organization went to Beauval and then into the firing line at Mericourt-sur-Somme, the famous Somme battlefield. From that time on they were in the line until the famous Hindenburg defense system was broken.

The battalion was sent to rest quarters for a few weeks and had started forward to the front when the armistice was signed. They went to Aulaines, northwest of Paris, on Nov. 29, and remained there until orders to sail for America were received.

The list of St. Louisans who served in the battalion follows:

Dear Friends:

In my last open letter I said I would try to inform you with regard to the world-wide shortage of Player-Pianos, Grand Pianos and Upright Pianos and its causes.

But let me digress just a bit and say that one feels a slight delicacy in using the same terms to express the lack of quantity in pianos as are used to express the same meaning with regard to automobiles, plows, baby carriages, etc., etc.

The first above mentioned—pianos — rightfully belong to the artistic class, while the latter are of the utility class.

The instrument from which music is produced is something apart from ordinary manufactured articles, for it must combine in itself all the artistic elements of the musician's requirements so that he may faithfully portray his art.

For the past four years quantity production in player-pianos and pianos has been entirely out of the question.

With all our genius and great steel plants, at the breaking out of the war only one small factory in this country was making tuning pins; a certain country in Europe was making tuning pins for the world. This halted the output of pianos. Then came government instructions limiting the output to about a third of former years. Then came the shortage of skilled labor in our industry. Altogether the production in this country was reduced to a very small quantity, and in Europe there were practically no pianos made.

In all eruptions, conditions that we call bad, there is always some good derived, hence this country will never be caught again without tuning pins or piano hardware, as it is commonly called. Then, too, these conditions, while they prevented quantity production, created a breathing spell that permitted our geniuses to improve the product and perfect some wonderful things in the way of foot and electrically played player-pianos in Grands and Uprights.

The upshot of it all is that these player-pianos and pianos while fairly high priced, have been snapped up by the purchasing public as soon as displayed. But in the sale of these better class instruments, a large number of the purchasers had other pianos to "trade in."

This brings us back to the subject of my first letter, that is, our stock of "trade-in pianos"— their splendid character, their very low price, considering their real value these times, and the very easy terms upon which we offer them for sale.

We have just to say that it presents an opportunity for the frugal housewife who either has children to educate in music, or personal pleasure to gratify, that can scarsely be equaled elsewhere.

These good "trade-in" pianos—like new in many instances—are being taken quickly now. We invite you to call and see them tomorrow.

Out-of-town folks should write for complete list, prices and terms and our plan of safeguarding your interest against any dissatisfaction whatever.

KIESELHORST PIANO CO.
By E. A. Kieselhorst, Pres.
1007 Olive St.

P. S.—In my next I will endeavor to tell the story of a "Trade-in Piano" and how it had to do with the fame of a now celebrated pianist.—Advertisement.

HUNTED U-BOATS IN AN AMERICAN SUBMARINE

St. Louis Boy With Flotilla in Irish Waters Credited by British With Two Sinkings.

James A. Crowdus, 23 years old, a second-class radio electrician and the son of Mrs. J. C. Crowdus of 5047 Washington avenue, is home on furlough, having recently arrived in this country from Irish waters, where he saw more than 10 months' service patrolling for U-boats in the American submarine AL-3. He was to have come home in a surrendered German submarine, but the plans were changed and he was sent home with his own flotilla.

Crowdus was stationed at Berehaven, Bantry Bay, Ireland, where seven submarines of the AL type had their base with the mother ship Bushnell. This was the only American force there and it was their duty to patrol a large area of water, going out for eight days and resting eight days, with infrequent periods of longer rest. Queenstown, the destroyer base, was 90 miles away. In the 10 and one-half months which the flotilla spent on this duty but 11 torpedoes were fired by the seven boats, three of them firing all 11. It was not necessary to expend much ammunition in the deck guns.

Chased U-Boats.

"We used to chase 'em, though," Crowdus said. "Some people thought submarines were useless for chasing U-boats, but we were not really useless. The most good we did was to keep them away from land. Towards the end of the war all the ships the Germans sunk were lost 200 miles or more from land. We would stay submerged during the day and run on the surface at night. England gives our flotilla credit for sinking two U-boats. The AL-3 did not get any.

"The only submarine the American navy lost was the F-1, and that was due to an accident, it having been rammed by its sister ship, the F-3. It is our understanding that the English lost 59 submarines in the war, 39 of them going down by enemy action. About 30 of the boats they lost had their base at Harwich, England, and half as many were at Berehaven.

"The AL-1 part of our flotilla, came nearest getting a U-boat without succeeding. One afternoon they were cruising along just below the surface, and saw a German sub running on the surface, with a number of the sailors out on deck smoking. The AL-1 let go with two torpedoes at once, but the crew saw them coming, and the German skipper, who must have been an old hand, turned bow on, and the torpedoes went by his boat, one on each side. He had six shots fired at the AL-1 as that boat was making its getaway, but none was effective. We heard that the German came back looking for the AL-1 that night."

Friend Drowned at Sea.

Horace E. Whitaker, 20, the son of Mrs. Charles W. Fisher, 3427 South Jefferson avenue, who was drowned accidentally on June 8, was stationed on Crowdus' boat. Crowdus said that Whitaker had been sent up on deck to make fast a mooring cable which had become loose, and that he was washed overboard by a heavy sea. His body was not recovered.

Last December a number of men, including Crowdus, were sent from Berehaven to Harwich, England, to prepare four surrendered submarines to be brought to this country as prizes, as was told in the Post-Dispatch, Jan. 20. The men spent 48 hours at Harwich charging the storage cells, and familiarizing themselves with the manner of operation of the German boats. Then they took them under their own power to Portland, England, a feat which the English had been unable to accomplish.

The American naval constructors spent several weeks at Portland learning the details of design of the U-Boats. It is not known why the order to bring the four U-boats here was cancelled. It is expected, however, that half a dozen will be brought to America later.

Came Back on Surface.

The flotilla returned to this country under its own power, riding on the surface all the way. Going over the submarines were all towed by the Bushnell in order to save their engines. Both trips were made by way of the Bermudas and the Azores.

Crowdus said that the universal name for a British sailor, corresponding to the "Tommy Atkins" of the army, is "Limie." Collectively the British navy is "The Limies." Formerly lime juice was much employed by the English to combat scurvy, and hence the nickname.

Crowdus was a radio and hydrophone operator. The hydrophone is a very sensitive instrument used when under water for detecting the proximity of other boats.

Crowdus enlisted in June, 1917, and was trained at the Harvard Radio School. This is the first time he has been home since before he went to Ireland. His flotilla is now at Philadelphia navy yard and he expects to be discharged shortly after his return to it. He studied electrical engineering at Washington University for two years prior to his enlistment, but does not expect to return.

William Warren Crowdus, a brother, is a law student at Washington University. He was recently discharged from the Field Artillery Officers' Training School at Camp Taylor, Ky. The boys are sons of the late James C. Crowdus, who was in the hide and fur business here.

D. S. C. TO 2 ILLINOIS MEN, ONE MISSOURIAN

Capt. Mershon Honored for Gallant Leadership at Exermont —Sergeant and Private Named.

The following Missouri and Illinois citations for the award of the Distinguished Service Cross appear in the War Department's official announcement for today and yesterday:

Capt. Vance Mershon, 28th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Exermont, Oct. 4-11. After the battalion commander and all the senior officers had been killed or wounded, Capt. Mershon (then a First Lieutenant), took command of the battalion and led it successfully to its objective, remaining with it after being painfully wounded, until properly relieved and the new commanding officer thoroughly acquainted with the situation. He then had his wound dressed and returned to his company, actively supervising the laying of barrages by indirect fire. On the third day he was ordered to the rear, there had his wounds dressed, again returning to his company, remaining with it until it was relieved and reorganized. His courage, self-sacrifice and utter disregard for his own personal danger was a material inspiration to his men while under the terrific bombardment by enemy artillery. Ward Mershon, father, Buckner, Mo.

Sergt. Hubert C. Morris, Company H, Sixty-first Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Dun-sur-Meuse, Nov. 5. Advancing alone, Sergt. Morris attacked a machine-gun nest, capturing the entire crew, and preventing a surprise fire on an exposed flank of his company. Mrs. Grace Morris, wife, 111 Viana street, Anna, Ill.

Private Harry Kennedy, Company C, Twenty-sixth Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Soissons, July 19. Armed with only his rifle and bayonet, Private Kennedy alone captured a machine gun after killing the entire crew. He then turned his captured gun on the enemy, causing the retreat of an entire platoon. Mrs. Anna Kennedy, mother, R. F. D. No. 4, Fairmont, Ill.

MALEKULA'S MAN-EATING MEN CHASTISED WITH MACHINE GUNS

Australian Naval Vessel Lands Punitive Party to Insure Safety of Whites.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, Feb. 3.—The Australian naval vesel Fantome was sent to the New Hebrides islands recently to chastise a tribe of cannibals accused of having committed murders. The maneaters occupied the northern side of Malekula Island and were accused of the murder of a French cocoanut planter.

As the New Hebrides are owned jointly by France and Great Britain, the Australian warship was selected to punish the savages. The Fantome landed a punitive force of 65 officers and men at Malua Bay, where the party was joined by 18 native guards.

Having reached the outskirts of the village where the murderers were supposed to be hiding, the commander of the expedition sent an interpreter to parley with the villagers for the surrender of the men suspected of the murder.

Groups of armed savages from the interior were hiding on the hillsides overlooking the village and two of their chiefs shouted to the villagers that if any of them surrendered to the expedition the village would be fired upon. Seeing that these island tribesmen were making all the trouble, the punitive party opened fire upon them with machine guns and followed this with a charge by a detachment of bluejackets, who took the ridge and drove the savages out. This ended the affair, the expedition suffering no casualties.

British and French residents declared the cannibals had been taught a severe lesson which would insure the future safety of the white residents of Malekula.

$14,000,000 FOR GOOD ROADS

Plans All Made by Illinois to Meet Federal Demands.

Illinois expects to have $14,000,000 available by July 1 for the construction of Federal-aid roads, as it is considered certain that the Legislature will appropriate the $7,000,000 which represents the State's half of the expense. More than that amount is now in the State treasury waiting to be used, having been realized from automobile license fees.

The plans of the State highway department call for construction during the present year of 700 miles of hard-surface road, to be built of brick, concrete or bituminous macadam, at an average width of 15 feet. Among the roads on the schedule for construction as soon as the funds are available are the Ivy Trail, from Chicago to East St. Louis, via Peoria and Springfield, and the Cumberland Trail, from East St. Louis to Marshall, in Clark County, via Effingham and Vandalia.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive, and is sold by Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., in St. Louis, and most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health. Miss Georgia Hamilton, who was once thin and frail, reporting her own experience, writes: "Bitro-Phosphate has brought about a magic transformation with me. I gained 15 pounds and never before felt so well."

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh. —ADV.

SIMONDS EXPECTS PEACE CONCLUSION IN ANOTHER MONTH

phase, which must be shaped largely as the new states which have been created succeeded in achieving national existence or fail in the task and fall victims again to the Teutonic and Russian aggrandizement.

In constructing these new states, Europe is following in the East and with respect of Germany the policy of the Congress of Vienna in 1855 and of the treaty of the Utrecht a century before. Then an effort was made to put barriers along Eastern and Northern frontiers of France to make new French wars of conquest impossible. Now Europe is seeking to put Polish, Czecho-Slovak, Rumanian and Jugo-Slavic obstacles along the highway of German expansion to the East and upon the success or failure of these obstacles depends the future peace of the world.

We have had and we still have in Paris a number of relatively minor disputes over boundaries which are approaching, but have not yet reached solution. The most serious of these is the clash between the Jugo-Slavs and the Italians over Fiume, Dalmatia and the Adriatic islands. There is at present a possibility that Italy will compromise her claims by taking Fiume and the Adriatic islands, leaving Dalmatia to the Slavs. This would be, perhaps, the fairest solution; the second awkward difference of opinon exists between the Greeks and the Italians and grows out of the possession by the Italians as a consequence of their Tripolitan war of 12 Greek islands in the Aegean, together with Rhodes and the Italian claim on behalf of Albania which is the consequence of Italy's occupation of the port of Valona. Here again there has been in recent days a marked improvement in the direction of compromise and there seems to be a geenral agreement that Italy will surrender most, if not all, of the Aegean islands and accept Greek claim to northern Epirus.

The Polish-Ukrainian Controversy.

In addition to the foregoing disputes, Rumanians and the Southern Slavs have clashed over a minor area in Banat, the Poles and Czecho-Slovaks are at odds over the district of Tesschen on the western fringe of Galicia, and the Poles and the Ukranians have actually been fighting for many months, interrupted by brief truces, over Lemberg.

Of all these difficulties, only one is really serious and remains unsettled; this is the break between the Poles and the Ukranians. It is serious, because it represents part of one significant failure of the conference at Paris. For a variety of reasons it has been impossible to adopt a policy toward Russia. This inability to face the Russian problem as a whole has resulted in a failure to reach a decision as to the eastern frontiers. I am told that Lemberg will ultimately go to the Poles and that further dispute between the Poles and Lithuanians will be decided mainly in favor of the Poles, who will certainly acquire Grodno and probably Vilna; but it will be impossible for Europe to fix the eastern boundaries of Poland unless it can make up its mind concerning the whole Russian situation. Equally true is the case of the Baltic states with Lithuania. In these regions the Bolshevists and several races inhabiting the shores have been fighting steadily for more than a year. Sometime, perhaps, Europe will take courage and go to the rescue of these peoples. When this time comes we may expect to see at least one more state developed along the Baltic between Neva and the Gulf of Finland; as yet nothing has been done or agreed upon. Elsewhere the map of Europe is substantially remade.

Disposition of German Colonies.

As to the matter of the German colonies, they will be divided among the victors who will hold them as mandatories if there shall be a league of nations, but, in any event, Japan will acquire the northern Pacific Islands and the German title to Kiaochau. Australia will have New Guinea, New Zealand the German Samoan Islands, Great Britain German East Africa, the Union of South Africa will have German Southwest Africa, France practically all of Kamerun and of Togo, very minor fractions of which will go to Great Britain. France will obtain some modification of the terms under which she holds Morocco and probably the right to include Tangier in her Moroccan colony.

There remains the great problem of Asia Minor, which carries with it the question of Constantinople, of Armenia, of Syria and of the Arabian regions extending from the Mediterranean to Mesopotamia. It remains the hope of Europe that the United States will accept both Constantinople and Armenia as mandatories. The Anglo-French differences over Syria have not yet been resolved. Greece will certainly receive Smyrna and a portion of the west coast of Asia Minor inhabited by Greeks. Italy is equally likely to become the mandatory for the south shore of Asia Minor from Rhodes to the Gulf of Alexandretta; but these questions of the Near East are less settled than any others as yet and I shall reserve them for a later discussion.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL EVENTS OF THE WEEK

WARFIELD IN REVIVAL OF "THE AUCTIONEER"

Famous Actor Reverts to First Stellar Role of His Brilliant Career.

David Warfield's revival of "The Auctioneer," tomorrow night at the American Theater, turns back the clock 18 years in the career of one of the most successful of American actors. It was during 1901, in this same drama by Charles Klein and Lee Arthur, that he first emerged into stardom; it was this play that first signalized the alliance between Warfield and David Belasco which has made history on the stage, and proved lucrative to actor and producer alike. Warfield presented "The Auctioneer" in this city during the month of April, 1902.

Like Belasco, Warfield was born in California. He began theatrical life as a program boy, and later rose to be an usher. His first professional appearance was with a traveling company, as the specious, rascally Melter Moss, in "The Ticket-of-Leave Man." The company was disbanded after one week, and thereafter Warfield appeared in various San Francisco variety halls, giving imitations of Tommaso Salvini and Sarah Bernhardt. In 1890 he went to New York and found parts in divers minor plays, in which he presented several variations of substantially the same identity—an expert semblance of the New York East Side Jew. In 1898 he joined the burlesque company managed by Weber and Fields, appearing in various travesties of contemporary theatrical successes, and presenting, in different lights, as William Winter records, "his photographic copy of the huckstering, acquisitive, pusillanimous Jew of low life."

Three years later Belasco chose him for a similar part, that of the old Hebrew peddler, Simon Levi, in "The Auctioneer." It proved extremely popular, and ran for three years. But it was in later and better plays that Warfield won his position as an actor of deep sincerity and exceptional merit—"The Music Master" (1904), "A Grand Army Man" (1907), and "The Return of Peter Grimm" (1911).

Role With Heart-Interest.

That the popularity of "The Auctioneer" still endures was proved by its long run last season at the Manhattan Theater in New York, and its success later on tour. The character of Simon Levi indeed has that touch of humanity, of heart-interest, which is one of Warfield's specialties. Levi, during business hours, is as keen and shrewd a huckster as ever drove a sharp bargain; but when it comes to affairs that concern the poor and distressed, and his own loved ones, he is a different Levi altogether. He has a philosophy that sustains him when disaster comes.

In the company are several players who were with Warfield when "The Auctioneer" was first brought out. Among them are Marion Bates, Louis Hendricks, Harry Rogers, Horace James, William Boag and Tony Bevan.

The first appearance here of Eleanor Painter, formerly a singer of distinction in light opera, will occur tonight at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater in a revival of Edward Locke's comedy of a decade ago, "The Climax," in which she has a speaking role. But the part is that of a young woman ambitious to be a great singer, and a well-known air, "The Song of the Soul," has been provided for her by Joseph Carl Breil. According to the plot, an unscrupulous suitor for the heroine's hand convinces her by the power of suggestion that she has lost her voice, but his treachery is eventually discovered, and matters are brought to a satisfactory conclusion. The cast includes such capable players as Walter Wilson, Effingham Pinto and Mitchell Harris. The last was at one time the popular leading man at the Park Theater and at the Players Stock Theater, now the Rialto.

"Fiddlers Three," a successful musical comedy, will be the attraction at the American next week. Harry Lauder will give three matinee and three night entertainments at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater, beginning on the afternoon of March 24. The remainder of the week will be taken by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew (themselves) in Richard Walton Tully's comedy, "Keep Her Smiling."

Impersonators at Orpheum.

Clifton Crawford of "Three Twins," "Fancy Free" and other comedy and musical successes, captions the bill this week at the Orpheum, with a program of songs. Mme. Doree (Mrs. Dore Lyon), gives impersonations of Metropolitan Opera Co. stars, among them Caruso, Destinn, Farrar, Homer and Scotti. She is said to have been at one time president of the Federation of Women's Clubs in New York. Venita Gould gives impersonations of Anna Held, Emma Trentini, Nazimova and George Cohan. A political allegory, representing Washington, Lincoln, Grant and Lee coming to consult with President Wilson, is one of the items.

At the other downtown theaters: Columbia, Viola Knapp and a company of dancers, as headliners; Grand, "The Follies of Today;" Garrick, the veteran George Primrose and a minstrel troupe; Gayety, "Girls de Looks;" and Standard, "Girls From Joyland."

Glee Club to Be Enlarged.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce Glee Club is to be enlarged and placed under the supervision of G. E. Knapp of the War Camp Community Service, to be used at formal occasions for the welcoming home of troops.

HEIFETZ WILL PERFORM MENDELSSOHN WORK

Phenomenal Boy-Violinist Gives Recital Tomorrow Night at Odeon.

Second in importance only to the Rachmaninoff recital during this season will be the concert given at the Odeon tomorrow night by Jascha Heifetz, greatest of the young pupils whom Leopold Auer has sent to the United States during the last two years. This will be the second recital given here by Heifetz. The first, during last season, aroused an interest which only the local debut of Galli-Curci was able to rival.

His program, the chief essay of which will be the popular Mendelssohn concerto in E minor, will be as follows:

Tartini ....Sonate in G Minor
Mendelssohn ....Concerto in E Minor, Op. 64.
  Allegro molto appassinato.
  Andante.
  Allegro, molto vivace.
Chopin-Wilhelmj......Nocturne in D Major.
Brahms ....Dance No. 7
Paganini ....(a) Caprice No. 13
  (b) Caprice No. 20
Tschiakowsky-Auer—
  Andante Cantabile
Bazini ....La ronde des lutins.

Heifetz, now 18 years old, has been recognized after a year of trial as not only an amazing prodigy, but one of the two or three most eminent of living violinists.

Program of Four-Minute Singers.

Lansing F. Smith of the International Sunday School Association will be the speaker and Mrs. H. H. Haeussler, local chairman of the Four-Minute Singers, will have charge of the singing at the Boys' Triangle Club this afternoon at Grand and Franklin avenues. Smith's subject will be "Reminiscences and Stories of Eugene Field." A four-reel movie will conclude the program. All boys over 12 are welcome. In lieu of a ticket this article clipped out will be accepted at the door.

GRAVEURE IS CHOSEN TO BE SYMPHONY SOLOIST

Belgian Baritone Retained When Stracciare Could Not Keep Engagement.

Another difficulty regarding a soloist has beset the preparation of the Symphony Orchestra program for the concerts of Friday and Saturday of this week. Because the Chicago Opera Association has prospered so satisfactorily on its Eastern tour as to extend its season, Riccardo Stracciari, its leading baritone, who was engaged by the orchestra, was compelled to cancel his contract. After much telegraphing, Louis Graveure, baritone, was secured in his stead.

Graveure, a polished and expert concert singer, was heard in St. Louis last season as soloist with the Morning Choral Club. By a coincidence, his wife, Eleanor Painter, is here this week as leading woman in "The Climax," at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater.

There is a mystery connected with Graveure which he has never cleared away. When he first appeared on the concert stage about three years ago, numerous persons declared that he was no other than Wilfrid Doughitt, a musical comedy singer of celebrity, who had strangely vanished. Doughitt was an Englishman and smooth-shaven; Graveure sported an ample beard, declared he was a Belgian, and spoke in a plausible Franco-English medley. One person after another, including Doughitt's former singing teacher, came forward in public to affirm that both were one and the same person; so far as is known, Graveure has never publicly denied or confessed the impeachment.

He will sing the Prologue to "Pagliacci" and the aria, "Vision Fugitive," from Massenet's "Herodiade." The complete program will be as follows:

Symphony No. 6, in F Major, "Pastoral" ....Beethoven
  I. Allegro ma non troppo (Awakening of serene impressions on arriving in the country).
  II. Andante molto moto (Scene by the Brookside).
  III. Allegro (Jolly gathering of counary folk; thunderstorm).
  IV. Allegretto (Glad and thankful feelings after the storm).
Aria, "Vision Fugitive," from "Herodiade" ....Massenet
Scherzo, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," after Goethe's ballad......Dukas
Prologue to "Pagliacci"..Leoncavallo
Rimsky-Korsakoff
  —Cappricio Espagnol

This symphony of Beethoven is notable as being the only one of the nine in which "program" music is essayed. It bears the general title, "Pastoral Symphony, or a Recollection of Country Life," and the famous warning, "More an expression of feeling than a painting."

The scene by the brook foreshadows Wagner's "Forest Murmurs" in "Siegfried," and is so realistic as to introduce the bird calls of the cuckoo, nightingale and quail. In the gathering of peasants is caricatured a band of seven musicians to whom Beethoven always listened with delight when visiting the inn of "The Three Ravens" outside Vienna. He noted with a humorous eye their habit of going to sleep while playing, of laying down their instruments to light their pipes or drink their beer, in the midst of the music. At one time he wrote a set of dances for them, arranged so that first one musician and then another would have an oportunity to rest, or take a drink, or doze off for a few moments. The scene of the storm is a celebrated example of nature-painting in music.

The solist engaged for this afternoon's popular concert at the Odeon is Miss Edna Stoessel, pianist and former St. Louisan. She is the sister of Lieut. Albert Stoessel, violinist, who, but for the war, would today be concertmaster of the Symphony Orchestra. Both had their early training in this city. She will play the first movement of Grieg's Concerto in A Minor, and Liszt's Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody. The program follows:

Gounod ....Overture to "Mereille"
Debiles..Ballet Music from "Coppelia"
  (a) Nocturne.
  (b) Dance of the Automatons.
  (c) Waltz.
  (d) Czardas.
Grieg....Concerto in A Minor, Op. 16.
  I. Allegro moderato.
  (First Movement Only.)
Pierne........... Suite for Orchestra, from "Izeil."
Liszt.Rhapsody No. 6, for Pianoforte.
Massenet—......Prelude, "Le dernier sommeil de la Vierge."
Grieg..........March of the Dwarfs.

The Friday and Saturday concerts this week close the Symphony's season of regular programs. There will be three more popular concerts, including the one today, the final one being on March 30. The soloist next Sunday will be Miss Minerva Komenarski, contralto.

FORTUNE GALLO'S SAN CARLO OPERA TROUPE IS COMING SOON

It is announced that Fortune Gallo's San Carlo Opera Company, which has frequently filled engagements here, but has skipped St. Louis in its peregrinations during the last two years, will open a series of six night and two matinee performances at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater on April 7. The usual popular scale of prices is promised.

Among the new members of the cast announced are Marcella Craft, a few years ago a solosit with the Symphony Orchestra, and Haru Onuki, a Japanese singer, who, like Tamaki Miura, specializes in "Madame Butterfly." Manual Salazar, tenor, and Angelo Antola, baritone, are two old favorites here who still remain in the troupe. The repertory for the engagement has not been selected.

C. P. HIGGINS SOON TO LOSE HIS SENATE JOB

Republicans More Than Likely Will Replace St. Louisan as Sergeant-at-Arms.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—St. Louisans who have visited the Capitol in recent years are familiar with the formula, passed from one to another as a helpful bit of information—"See Charlie Higgins." For Charlie (on the Senate rolls Charles P.) Higgins of St. Louis, former Excise Commissioner of that city, has been for six years, while sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, the guide, philosopher and friend of Missourians in Missouri and St. Louisans in particular. The advice to go to the "Missouri corner" of the Capitol and consult Higgins has proved good, whether one wanted to see Webster's desk and the famous snuff box in the Senate chamber, procure a ticket to the Senate gallery or receive expert instruction in the tortuous ways of the Senate corridors and the great and near-great who walk therein.

"Col." Higgins, as he is known to those who don't call him Charlie, will continue to be sergeant-at-arms till the Republicans come into control at the opening of the next session. Then the 246 employes on the Senate side who come within the jurisdiction of his office—all except a few old soldiers and some employes of long service who are on the permanent rolls—will give way to Republicans. There has been some talk about the Capitol that the Republicans might retain "Col." Higgins, who is popular and of proved efficiency, but it is more likely that the old doctrine of the victor and the spoils of politics will rule without exception.

Has Had Grandstand Seat.

"Col." Higgins has watched the Senate from a grandstand seat during one of the most interesting periods of its history. He has served through the longest session of Congress, has provided cots for tired Senators during the longest filibuster—the 60-hour verbal attack on the Ship Purchase bill in 1915—and has handled the largest crowd that was ever in the Capitol at one time—the crowd that packed the galleries and swarmed through the corridors on the last night of the session just closed.

It is estimated that 10,000 persons, attracted by the fight between the President and the Republican Senators that culminated in the successful filibuster against the big supply bills, visited the Capitol that day.

Preserving order at the Capitol and protecting Government property is but one of the many functions of the Senate Sergeant-at-Arms. He is, in fact, the executive officer of the Senate. He serves subpenaes on persons summoned before investigating committees, makes arrangements for the inaugural ceremonies when a President takes the oath of office, checks up accounts with the telegraph companies for official messages sent by Senators at the Government rates, directs the work of the Senate folding room, where thousands of public documents are handled; has supervisory care of the Senate Telephone Exchange, and on top of his other duties, by no means all of which have been enumerated here, he is a sort of boss carpenter, charged with the oversight of the cabinet shop where the Senators' desks are made.

What the Job Means.

As the job is interpreted by Higgins, the Sergeant-at-Arms is diplomat, doctor and funeral director. As diplomat, he is the official buffer of the Senate, protecting its members from cranks and other pestiferous persons who want to send in their cards; he must be able to distinguish the welcome from the unwelcome caller.

As doctor, he is prepared to give first aid for headaches, colds and other minor ailments, whether of Senators or mere citizens, from a medicine chest in his office stocked with such things as aspirin, quinine, salts and aromatic spirits of ammonia. As funeral director, he has charge of all arrangements whenever a Senator dies. Higgins has taken senatorial parties to the funerals of 10 members who have died during his term of office. He arranged also for the Senate's participation in the funeral of Col. Roosevelt and attended the ceremonies.

Dukes, princes, actors, ballplayers, premiers, army chiefs have passed through his office. All the foreign missions which visited this country during the war period called at the Senate and were welcomed and guided by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

It was during Higgins' term, on July 2, 1915, that Holt planted a bomb under the telephone switchboard in the corridor just outside Higgins' office. The bomb exploded at about midnight, eight hours after it had been placed, and littered up the corridor without doing much actual damage. Then for the first time, tickets were required for admission to the public galleries of the Senate. With the attempted blowing up of the capitol in mind, Higgins and his staff were under a considerable strain throughout the war. Their relief was great when the armistice was signed and the danger of an outrage reduced to normal. Precautionary measures, though not so rigidly enforced, are still in effect. Suit cases must still be left at the door and the galleries are searched at night.

Buffer for Suffragettes.

One of the incidents of Higgins' term has been the picketing of the Senate by militant suffragettes. It was his duty to see that Senators were not annoyed and that no damage was done to property. Acting under a Federal law which prohibits any demonstration in the capitol building or grounds, he directed the capitol police to "detain" suffragettes who approached the Senate with banners. The women were not arrested, but whenever a demonstration was attempted, they were taken by policemen to the guardroom of the capitol and held there till the Senate adjourned for the day. Then they were released—minus the banners.

Higgins is only the sixteenth man who has held the job of Sergeant-at-Arms in the 130 years of senatorial history.

U-BOATS ALMOST STOPPED AT THE END OF THE WAR

the American naval forces in Europe are their monument. Under them officers and men alike have done well. To name individuals would be to name nearly every one."

Mr. Roosevelt has this to say of his visit to the headquarters of Major-General Lejuene, commanding the Second Diivsion at Neu Weid, in the Coblenz bridehead area:

"The Second Division, of which the Marine Brigade is a part, holds the left of the bridgehead across the Rhine. They are billeted in various villages. I had the pleasure of reviewing the greater part of the brigade and of visiting a part of the remaining on the actual line of outposts.

"Officers and men were in their usual excellent condition and everything pointed to the highest kind of efficiency. It seemed hard to realize that of the men in this same brigade whom I saw at Nancy, Aug. 5 last, nearly 70 per cent had been killed or wounded in the subsequent fighting. But the replacements that have come in are of the same splendid quality, and are living up to the high reputation of the Marine Corps.

"My return trip was made up the Moselle Valley in the American occupied area, and I passed along the line of advance of the Marine brigade in the heavy fighting of October and November. Much has been heard of their work in June and July at Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood and Soissons, but new and splendid chapters were added later on at St. Mihiel, at Blanc Mont and, finally, at the forcing of the crossing of the Meuse on the night of Nov. 10."

American naval operations in Europe were conducted from 54 bases and stations, in addition to 25 or more port offices and headquarters. Eighteen of these stations and bases were erected on the French coast. A glance at the naval charts shows that the American naval operating bases were sufficiently numerous to keep the German submarines constantly on the run. Seventy-five miles off shore was about as near as any of them came for weeks before the armistice was signed.

When the armistice was signed 250 naval seaplanes were in active use on the other side. Of the 110 foot submarine chasers, 128 were in active use, operating from bases on the English, Irish, French and Italian coasts. They were quite busy in the Mediterranean and the Adriatic as well as in the Atlantic. The French also operated a large number of American-built chasers with equal success.

The 71 American destroyers in active service on the other side when the armistice was signed did their work so efficiently that it appears to have been accepted as a matter of course.

Co-Operation Among All the Allies.

The destroyers went out to sea in all kinds of weather. Nothing was too hard for officers or men. They were over there to "get" the U-boats and see that they did not sink American troop ships. Their work, in the language of Mr. Roosevelt, "will brighten the pages of history for all time."

And this tribute is not confined to the officers and men of the American destroyer force. Mr. Roosevelt includes those of the allies as well. All co-operated to do the job and do it well. The navy was not free from shortcomings any more than the army, but its organization was smaller and more compact. Consequently it was easier to detect defects and easier also to get rid of them.

Mr. Roosevelt's visit to France, England, Belgium and the American occupied area on the Rhine was primarily one of business. Like the army, the navy entered into numerous contracts on the other side. Admiral Sims, Vice-Admiral Wilson and officers under them built up a far-reaching organization.

It was necessary to commandeer land and other property in some cases. This was done, in most instances, with the assistance of allied governments and local governing bodies. In other instances the official representatives of Uncle Sam adopted direct methods, not having the time to approach the project through Government channels. All this means that there are claims to be settled in England and France.

There are claims in Italy also, but Mr. Roosevelt reports that "The Italian Minister of Marine has generously offered to bear all liability for claims incurred by the U. S. Naval Aviation forces in Italy.

The amount involved, of course, is not relatively large, but that does not detract from the generosity of the offer.

A large volume of repair work was done on American naval vessels in British yards. All this work had to be paid for. Enormous quantities of equipment had to be disposed of. Many contracts were still in existence when the armistice was signed and had to be adjusted.

Mr. Roosevelt found the work of demobilization so well in hand upon his arrival in England that little remained for him to do besides the signing of approvals and certain agreements with the British Government.

The British Government will take over the two mine bases in Scotland—at Inverness and Invergordon. The American naval force has virtually evacuated Invergordon but will maintain the organization of Inverness for the purpose of conducting mine-sweeping operations during the spring and summer.

Gen. Pershing took off the hands of the navy the greater part of its appraised value. The army agreed to reimburse the navy with an equivalent value in motor equipment in this country.

The army also took over nearly all navy barracks and portable houses at the aviation stations and will reimburse the navy for their appraisal. In addition, several units of portable houses have been sold to the Commission for the Relief of Belgium and Northern France under Hoover. A unit of 250 naval volunteers, chiefly from the northern bombing squadron, was asssisting in the erection of the houses in Northern France and Belgium during Mr. Roosevelt's visit.

Just before leaving for home he authorized the creation of another volunteer unit. The army has taken over the great assembly and repair base established by the navy at Pauillac, France, thus relieving the navy from any continuing liability. Most of the land occupied by this station was devoted to grape growing and was highly valuable. It was taken over with great regret for war purposes. It belongs to many owners, and settlement for its use cannot be made until it is evacuated by the army. The aggregate claims for Pauillac, Mr. Roosevelt says, will probably be larger than for all the other stations. Another naval station, the disposition of which presents some difficulties, is an assembly and repair base at Eastleigh, near Southampton, England. This plant originally was contracted for by the British Air Ministry, and involves a total expenditure of about $1,250,000, of which the Navy Department has spent to date about $250,000. The British Government may decide to take over this station; it not it will be sold to the best possible advantage of both Governments.

The American naval personnel will evacuate it today.

EXHIBITION OF GREEK DANCES

Will Be Given Tonight by Former Royal House Member.

An exhibition of Greek dancing will be given at the Odeon tonight by Vasilios Kanellos, formerly of the Royal Opera House at Athens. He will be assisted by Mlle. E. Phyllis.

It is asserted that Kanellos was at one time a dancing partner of Isadora Duncan and was also in Pavlowa's company. A life-size marble statue of Kanellos in his cymbal dance was made by Zettler, the American sculptor. It won a prize at the Chicago Art Exhibition and was purchased by the Chicago Art Institute for a sum said to be $10,000. A replica was sent to the Art Institute at Athens.

There will be a small orchestra and motion pictures showing phases of life in modern Greece and scenes on the Macedonian front.

Eighty-Ninth Auxiliary Meeting.

The general meeting of the Relatives' Auxiliary of the Eighty-ninth Division, planned for last Friday night at Soldan High School, will be held instead next Friday night in the auditorium of Central High School, Grand avenue and Windsor place. The women of the auxiliary will meet Thursday afternoon in the assembly room of Central Library, Thirteenth and Olive streets.

TELLS HOW HE GOT RID OF HIS CORNS

Well-Known Man Relates Remarkable Experience.

"By George! I never saw anything like the effect of that new treatment, Ice-Mint, for removing corns and bringing quick relief to tired, swollen, aching, burning feet. It acted like a miracle in my case," said a well-known man yesterday, in speaking of this discovery which has caused such a big stir among Foot Specialists. "I had carried a pet corn for years that simply took all the joy out of life. I tried plasters, salves, ether compounds and all of the other "dope" that is supposed to be the trick, but the pestering thing simply would not leave me. I began to think there was nothing on earth that would kill my corn, when I finally read about the remarkable results obtained by foot sufferers from the use of Ice-Mint. I decided to try it for myself and before I hardly realized it my corn came out—root and all—and without causing the least pain or soreness. Believe me, it seems mighty good not to be afraid some one is going to hit my pet corn—and the relief—well that just seems like Paradise."

Ice-Mint is a pure, snow-white, creamy preparation made from a genuine Japanese product and is highly appreciated by women who wear high heel shoes and by men who stand on their feet all day. It draws the inflammation out of swollen, tired or burning feet and loosens hard or soft corns so they can easily be lifted out with the fingers—root and all; besides it imparts such a delightful, cooling, soothing sensation that you will just sigh with relief. It is selling like "Wild Fire" here. Try it. Just ask in any drug store for a little Ice-Mint and give your poor, suffering, tired, aching feet the treat of their lives.

There is nothing better, or nothing just as good.—ADV.

G. O. P. ALDERMEN'S PLATFORM SILENT AS TO U. R. DEAL

Indorsement for Kiel and Mill Tax Agreement Subscribed To by 14 Ward Candiates and Louis P. Aloe.

RECALL MOVEMENT IS NOT MENTIONED

Municipal Loop for Free Bridge Terminal and Extended City Limits Advocated.

The platform on which the Republican candidates for the Board of Aldermen will make their campaign does not mention the city administration's deal validating the United Railways franchise. It indorses the mill tax settlement, although that was a part of the franchise-validating deal.

The 14 candidates for seats in the board and Louis P. Aloe, candidate for re-election as President of it, voted for the adoption of the platform, which was made public yesterday, as the State law requires. The platform indorses the administration of Mayor Kiel, while avoiding the franchise deal, which is the issue on which the Mayor's recall is sought by the Civic League and Citizens' Referendum League.

Alderman Luke E. Hart of the Twenty-eighth Ward, chairman of the committee that drafted the platform, said the validation deal was considered a "gentleman's agreement" between City Counselor Daues and Thomas Francis, attorney for the United Railways Co., and, therefore not an issue in the campaign. Daues is an appointee of the Mayor, and both the Mayor and Aloe actively participated in the mill-tax settlement.

Value of Opinions.

"The City Counselor is a sort of a law unto himself," Hart said. "He hands out opinions here and there, some of which we approve, and some of which we don't. Nobody but him knows why he signed that stipulation. He says himself that it is not binding, and so do a good many other lawyers.

It was pointed out around the city hall yesterday that Aloe could not consistently have stood on or voted for a platform approving the validation deal, as he has repudiated the deal. It was suggested that this might have something to do with the absence of any reference to it.

Preamble of Platform.

The preamble of the platform follows:

"The administration of the Hon. Henry W. Kiel and his Republican associates has been one of signal achievement in the history of our city, and the war record of our citizens, without regard to party, under this administration has been one of which St. Louis will be forever proud. In the number of men serving the colors on land and sea and in the air; in the support of every Government activity; in the contribution to every war philanthropy, our citizens have taken a part in the front rank of American municipalities. Never has the nation called that the city has not freely responded."

Praise for Kiel.

Achievements of the Kiel administration are then set forth as follows:

Municipal docks as the first step in the development of an inland waterway system of the country.

The municipal farmers' curb markets, which have brought the products of the farm convenient to the consumer.

Municipal coal stations, where, during emergencies, coal has been sold to the needy at cost.

The completion of the Chouteau avenue viaduct for the convenience of traffic and safety of life.

The completion of the Washington avenue cutoff, at Grand and Washington avenues, a relief to congested traffic and an adornment to the city.

The enactment of a building zone ordinance stabilizing real estate values and improvements.

Practical completion of the great King's highway boulevard, from river to river.

Motorization of the Fire Department, placing the department among the best in the United States in equipment and personnel.

The passage of an ordinance against false weights and measures which has for the first time completely protected the public from intolerable fraud.

Co-operation in the establishment of a Government hospital for the care and rehabilitation of wounded and convalescent soldiers.

A municipal hospital for the care of negro patients, operated by negro attendants.

The expansion of the zoo in Forest Park, the development of the municipal theater and playgrounds and the establishment of community centers.

The ending of the protracted and expensive litigation forced upon the city by the United Railways Co. and securing of every dollar of mill tax accrued in the past and the guarantee of the payment of every dollar to accrue in the future, making available during the next 10 years for municipal purposes more than $5,000,000, payable in annual installments of $500,000, with interest.

On U. R. Transportation.

"Street railway transportation," to the platform states, "is a matter of the most vital interest and a subject of heated controversy not only in St. Louis, but in practically all cities throughout the entire country. We pledge ourselves to use our best endeavors to secure the most adequate service at the lowest possible rates and we pledge diligent and persistent efforts to have the valuation of the street railway properties reduced to pledge the lowest basis the facts will justify and to have the temporary fare, imposed by the State Public Service Commission as a war measure, over the protests of the City Administration, set aside and the 5-cent fare re-established or even a lower fare fixed if conditions will justify it and permit the maintenance of adequate service and needed extension and improvements.

For Railway Extension.

"We demand necessary street railway extension into newly built territory and the construction of connecting cross-town lines to provide for the needs of our growing population.

"The Supreme Court of Missouri has so interpreted the State Constitution as to deprive the city of the right by franchise to fix fares and make contracts for service, and has declared that jurisdiction of both fares and service regulations rests in the State Public Service Commission. The city administration resisted both the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission and the need of increased fares, insisting on maintenance of the 5-cent fare pledged by franchises. After the city's contentions were defeated by the Supreme Court's decision, the city administration has taken every necessary step to safeguard the interests of the city in the work of revaluation, which will in the final analysis determine the rate of fare."

Clauses of the Platform.

The Republican platform states the candidates are "in favor of vigorously accomplishing" the following:

Construction of a municipal street car loop as a terminal for the municipal free bridge.

Extension of railroad facilities in connection with the free bridge and the perpetual freedom from charge of all traffic over same.

Abolition of special tax for street sprinkling.

A speedy and permanent settlement of the garbage problem.

Abatement of the smoke nuisance.

Establishment of a municipal farm to take the place of the workhouse, where the delinquents of the city may be adequately cared for humanely and economically.

Further extension of our present city limits.

Further elimination of grade crossings.

Establishment of aerial mail service and proper terminal facilities therefor.

Establishment of public comfort stations wherever needed throughout the city.

Development of community centers in accordance with the needs of our population.

Advocates Return of Soldiers.

"We advocate and recommend the early discharge and return of our soldiers, who have been called into the war during the recent emergency," the platform states. "We pledge ourselves to do everything within our power to provide employment for returning soldiers as a partial recognition of the debt of gratitude which the city and nation owe to their heroic sons.

"We pledge ourselves to the economic and efficient management of all departments of the city government, and to a maintenance of the policy established during this administration of paying the prevailing rate of wages and providing reasonable hours and proper working conditions for city employes as being necessary both from the standpoint of fairness and efficiency.

"We invite the co-operation of all men who find themselves in substantial agreement with these principles."

CHILDREN'S CARFARE NEEDED

Funds Asked to Help Promote Community Gardening.

Additional appeals were sent out yesterday for funds to pay the carfare of school children to and from the community gardens which will be under the direction of the Board of Education, the University of Missouri, the United States Department of Agriculture and the Junior Garden League.

These gardens will be located in parks and public tracts of land, and will be principally for the poorer children who have no back yards in which to make gardens. Each child will have its own plot, with free seeds, plants and utensils, and volunteer leaders are now being trained by garden experts to take charge of the children's work.

As the gardens are to be some distance from the public and parochial schools and no carfare funds were included in the budget, the public is asked to contribute. The garden work is to begin very soon, and all who wish to help are asked to send their contribution to Mrs. A. C. Arnold, chairman of the volunteer leaders, 905 Locust street.

WILL START SUIT TO TEST STATE OIL INSPECTION FEE

Boyle & Priest Law Firm Declared to Plan Action Over Charge of 12 Cents a Barrel on Gasoline and Coal Oil.

BRINGS IN $250,000 REVENUE ANNUALLY

Its Loss, if Suit Is Successful, Declared Likely to Bring Demand for Other Tax Measures.

A suit to test the constitutionality of the State oil inspection fee of 12 cents a barrel on gasoline and coal oil, which nets the State an annual revenue of $250,000 will be instituted within three or four days, Robert E. Moloney of the law firm of Boyle & Priest, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

The suit, if successful, will further deplete the funds available for State expenditures, a reduction of $1,500,000 already having been made certain by the enforcement of prohibition after July 1.

Moloney said that in filing the suit his firm would represent the Pierce Oil Corporation, the largest oil inspection fee payer in the State.

Says Fee Operates as Revenue

"We shall proceed," Moloney said, "on the theory that such an inspection fee should be only sufficient to meet the costs of inspection. As a matter of fact the State derives revenue of $250,000 a year above the cost of inspection. If it can levy a tax of 12 cents a barrel bringing in such a sum, it could as well levy a tax of $1 a barrel and bring in several million dollars a year revenue.

"We do not believe such a tax is legal and, representing our client, will institute a suit to test the matter."

It is known that several days ago R. Perry Spencer, actuary in the State Insurance Department, was sent to St. Louis by Gov. Gardner to learn whether such a suit would be filed. Moloney said he learned from Spencer that the State administration had under consideration a recommendation that the inspection fee be increased.

Governor Shows Concern.

The loss of the liquor revenue has been a cause of much concern to Gov. Gardner, and information that there was a possibility that there would be a further loss of $250,000 a year in oil inspection fees has aroused the Governor to a decision to demand of the Legislature the enactment of more revenue-raising laws.

There already are under consideration by the Senate and House measures increasing the State income tax and the inheritance tax and placing a tax on the recording of all mortgages. Opposition to all these measures has developed in the Senate, some Senators demanding that instead of collecting such indirect taxes the Governor should boldly face the embarrassing tax situation and make a fight before the State Board of Equalization for the full assessment of real estate and personal property throughout the State, which, according to statistics in the office of the State Tax Commission, is assessed at little more than one-fourth its value.

TROOPS PATROLLING BORDER ON WATCH OF VILLA ACTIVITIES

Americans and Mexican Ranchers and Other Refugees Cross at Hachita and Columbus.

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., March 15.—Col. James J. Hornbroo, former commander of the El Paso district, left here today for Hachita, N. M., to investigate Villa activities south of the border. Maj.-Gen. De Rosey C. Cabell, commander of the southern department, ordered Col. Hornbrook to take command of the Hachita subdistrict during the time Villa's men were immediately south of the Gadsden purchase. Twelfth Cavalry troops are patrolling the border south of Hachita.

Martin Lopez and Ramon Vega were reported in Ascension and Janoa; 65 and 75 miles respectively south of Hachita. American and Mexican ranchers and other refugees were crossing the border at Hachita and Columbus late yesterday and last night.

"Bunk" Spencer, the negro ranch foreman at the Ojitos ranch, was being held for 5,000 ransom by Lopez and the American ranch foreman left the border late last night with the ransom money. A number of Mexicans were also being held. The ransom was demanded of the Warren Brothers, of Three Oaks, Mich., who own the Ojitos ranch.

Sir Horace Plunkett Analyzes Irish Crisis From All Points Of View

"Ireland Cannot Get Into Peace Conference, but the Irish Question Cannot Be Left Out," He Says

He Discusses the Various Remedies Suggested and the Merits and Demerits of Each—Does Not Believe an Independent Republic Feasible.

NEW YORK, March 15.

Sir Horace Plunkett, who is in the United States on a brief visit, which he is careful to explain is not in any sense official, is widely known to the people of this country, as well as to Irishmen everywhere.

Last year the eyes of the world were focused on him, when for eight months he sat as chairman of the Irish Convention, representing all political factions.

He is a son of the sixteenth Lord Dunsany and an uncle of the playright, Lord Dunsany. He was knighted by King Edward. He enjoyed close friendship with Theodore Roosevelt, and numbers President Wilson in his large list of acquaintances and friends in the United States.

At the request of the New York World and the Post-Dispatch the followingstatement of his views on the present aspect of the Irish question was made by him.

By SIR HORACE PLUNKETT.

THE question of Ireland's future, submerged briefly in the convulsion of the world, has again become acute. In Ireland itself, and in every country where Irishmen form an important element of the population, it lifts its cry for settlement. The time has come when something must be done for the "Distressed Isle" and what that shall be deserves the most earnest consideration of thoughtful men everywhere.

Ireland cannot get into the peace conference, but the Irish question cannot be left out, and it is well to have in mind the chief solutions of the Irish promlem which are now seriously proposed. These are:

1. Establishment of Home Rule by means of an Irish Parliament for disposing of the country's international busiress, with, athe same time, fair representation in the Imperial parliament.

The latter is held by many, for the present at any rate, to be necessary for the protection of Irish interests.

2. Setting up an independent Irish Republic.
3. Partition of Ireland—the Lloyd George plan.

Favors Immediate Offer of Measure of Self-Government.

To indicate at the outset my own position, before entering upon detailed consideration of the three plans or discussing recent symptoms of the Irish question, I submit that there should be made at once a firm offer of a reasonable measure of self-government.

Were such a measure, whatever its detail, put forward seriously with clear intent to carry it through in the face of all opposition, I believe that the common sense of Ireland would force both sides to its acceptance, thereby giving to Ireland what she so needs first of all—a corporate and national body which, however defective in its constitution, would enable Ireland to take the course of her own aspirations and genius before the world.

That would not be a final settlement, but if the difficulties of a half settlement—and it could be much more than that—are courageously faced, out of it will come in due season, from the only possible source, a united Ireland, the proper atmosphere for a lasting reconciliation. The thing is to give something now without any restrictions on what may be given later as the result of a united demand.

In the hour of civilization's greatest peril in the spring of last year there seemed to me to be the greatest opportunity in all history for an Irish settlement. There was a tremendous force of opinion in Ireland at that time which would gladly have taken the beginnings of a settlement if only to enable the Irish people to play their full part in the war, partly because their would have made a full settlement comparatively easy.

For the half-loaf of a united Ireland and without its full national requirements England substituted the stone of conscription. The opportunity was lost and the problem again made more difficult.

There appears to me to be one treatment of the problem which does not present any insuperable difficulties. The first step would be to introduce and press through Parliament a bill based upon the report of the Irish convention which, after eight months, reached as close an approach to unanimity on a plan of home rule as has ever been achieved.

The Irish Convention Plan.

The report of that convention shows that while it was not found possible to overcome the objections of the Ulster Unionists a majority of Nationalists, all the Southern Unionists and five out of the seven Labor representatives were agreed. The scheme upon which they reached this agreement is set out in paragraph No. 42 of the convention report, and their agreement included the desire that it should be immediately passed into law. Paragraph No. 42 is in substance as follows:

1. Irish Parliament to consist of two houses, a Senate of 64 members and a House of Commons of 200. The principle underlying the composition of the Senate is the representation of interests effected by giving representation to commerce, industry and labor, the county councils, the churches, learned institutions and the peerage. In the constitution of the House the Nationalists offered to guarantee 40 per cent of its membership to the Unionists. The paragraph calls for an executive responsible to the Irish Parliament. Full powers over all international legislation, administration and direct taxation reside in the Parliament. Pending final decision, it is provided that power to impose customs and excise duties should remain with the imperial Parliament, but that the whole of the proceeds of these taxes should be paid into the Irish exchequer. A Joint Exchequer Board is to be set up to determine the Irish true revenue and Ireland is to be represented upon the Board of Customs and excise of the United Kingdom.

An essential part of this scheme is Irish representation in the Imperial Parliament. This was insisted upon from the first by the Southern Unionists, and the Nationalists conceded it. It was felt, however, that there were strong reasons for providing that the Irish representatives at Westminster should be elected by the Irish Parliament rather than directly by the constituency, and this was the arrangement adopted. It was accepted in principle that there should be an Irish contribution to the cost of imperial services, but owing to lack of data in those moments of war it was not found possible for the convention to fix any definite sum.

Ulster and the Fiscal Questions.

The results of this representative Irish convention constitute the solution of the Irish problem which seems to me most worthy of support of all that have been framed.

The two great points of divergence were the attitude of Ulster and the fiscal question. As to the former, there was a portion of Ulster where a majority claimed that if Ireland had the right to separate herself from the rest of the United Kingdhom, they had the same right to separation from the rest of Ireland.

But the time had gone by when any other section of the Irish people would accept the partition of their country, even as a temporary expedient. Hence the Ulster Unionist members in the convention remained there only in the hope that some form of home rule would be proposed which might modify the determination of those they represented to have neither part nor lot in an Irish Parliament. The Nationalists strove to win them by concessions, but the Ulster delegation found themselves unable to accept any of the schemes discussed, and the only scheme of Irish government they presented to the convention was confined to the exclusion of their entire province.

His View of U. S. Opinion.

The development of the fiscal question into a paramount issue of agreement was in the nature of a surprise. The view was presented that without separate customs and excise, Ireland would fail to attain a national status equal to that enjoyed by the British Dominions. Upon this view the Nationalists made a strong case. To avoid any serious disturbance of the trade of the United Kingdom they were prepared to agree to a free-trade arrangement between the two countries.

On this point, however, the Southern Unionists agreed with the Ulster Unionists, in the fear that a separate system of customs control, however, guarded, might impair the authority of the United Kingdom over its external trade policy. It was essential to any agreement that a compromise on this vital point be effected. Both sides proved willing, in order that a parliament should be at once established, to postpone a legislative decision upon the ultimate control of customs and excise. This compromise, as noted above, was incorporated in the report.

It appears it was too much to hope since the question is as far from settlement as ever.

Independence Not Practicable.

Not understanding this, I do not find the absolute independence plan either likely of realization or desirable, whether for Ireland or for England.

When wars are a thing of the past and the world is disarmed an independant Irish republic may be considered seriously, but not until then. As civilization is at present constituted, absolute independence for Ireland is distinctly impracticable.

If Ireland were to set herself up as an independent nation she would either have to defend herself or some outside Power would have to do it for her in the event of war. Her isolated position invites attack from an unfriendly Power and it would be dangerous for Great Britain to leave this door open to invasion.

Suppose Irish independence had been established previous to 1914. How well it would have suited Germany to have had a chance to set up another Heligoland on the other side of England.

My own intimate touch with American life enables me to gauge the opinion of the United States on this question. I feel competent to say that Americans of all races and classes feel a keen concern in the subject of home rule for Ireland. Before the armistice the Government gave four reasons for a further and apparently indefinite postponement of self-government, namely, a newly discovered German plot; a bitter hatred of England, expressing itself in disloyalty and treason; the attitude of the Roman Catholic Church, its hierarchy sanctioning and approving resistance to the law of the land, and the supposed failure of the convention, the last based on what seems to me an exaggerated consideration for the minority reports referred to above.

German Intrigue Amounted to Little.

Prussian intrigue in Ireland likewise received an undeserved amount of attention on this side of the Atlantic. It was not generally realized that 999 out of every thousand Irishmen knew nothing about it. To say that a plot which was kept a secret from all but a very small and select band of conspirators affected in the smallest degree the arguments for or against an immediate Irish settlement was really an insult to Irish intelligence.

That Irish hatred of Great Britain is most virulent just now than in living memory before, aggravated as it is by contempt for British statesmanship and utter distrust of British promises, must be admitted. It is a serious factor in the situation. It constitutes a disease for which a remedy must be correctly diagnosed.

The apparent bad faith of Government in withhoding the concession of self-government is undoubtedly the cause of the recrudescence of the historic hatred, which had almost disappeared. It was the belief that self-government was at last secured that justified the description of Ireland in 1914 as the one bright spot in the darkest prospect England ever faced, and sent thousands of Irishmen into the British army in the first year of the war.

It was the shattering of that belief—the strengthening of the fatal impression that no pledge to Irishmen, unless given in one favored section, was binding—that brought to an end Ireland's willing support of England and her allies. With that feeling must the mass of Irishmen have regarded the Government's proposal to exact from Ireland the greatest sacrifice a free people can make—the giving up of her young manhood to war under conscription—while at the same time they denied to her the very principle for which she was asked to fight—government with the consent of the governed? Answer this question and their will be no need to proclaim Sinn Fein.

No Blame for Catholic Church.

As to the third reason, the part played by the Roman Catholic Church in opposing conscription, it fades away before the light of reason. The truth of that situation is, first, that the bishops did not lead their flocks, but responded to the call of the flocks for moral sanction to the resistance they intended to offer to the proposed conscription; and, second, the bishops to my certain knowledge believed, and I think they were right, that if they held aloof the country would be plunged into a violent agitation which could not have been ended without grave disorder and probably bloodshed. Their action was strictly emergency action, and it is absurd to see in it such an ecclesiastical invasion of the secular domain as would justify a further postponement of home rule.

Offer of Measure of Self-Government Immediately Would Relieve Tension if Put Firmly Into Effect, Says Plunkett

I SUBMIT there should be made at once a firm offer of a reasonable measure of self-government. Were such a measure, whatever its detail, put forward with clear intent to carry it through in the face of all opposition, I believe that the common sense of Ireland would force both sides to its acceptance, thereby giving to Ireland what she so needs first of all—a corporate and national body which, however defective in its constitution, would enable Ireland to take the course of her own inspirations and genius before the world.. That would not be a final settlement but, if the difficulties of a half-settlement—and it could be much more than that—are courageously faced, out of it will come, in due season, from the only possible source, a united Ireland, the proper atmosphere for a lasting reconciliation. The thing is to give something now without any restrictions on what may be given later as the result of a united demand—SIR HORACE PLUNKETT.

BISHOP TO REMOVE LIBRARY

Quayle Collection to Be Made Adjunct of a Kansas University.

Bishop William A. Quayle has announced that he intends to remove his library from his present quarters, in his apartment at 14 North King's highway, to Baldwin, Kan., where Baker University is located, and where he expects to live at some future time when he shall have retired from active duty. He was formerly president of the university.

The announcement was made at Baldwin, according to an Associated Press dispatch, which said the books would be housed in a new home which Bishop Quayle is building. Friends of Bishop Quayle here said that the library would probably b emade an adjunct to that of Baker University. Bishop Quayle's collectio nincludes a volume of part two of Eggenstyln's Latin Bible, the companion volume to which is in the British Museum; the Rodtet-Richel Bible, 1470; the Cobenger Bible, about 1471; the Foben Bible, 1495; a Venetian Bible, 1497; Tyndale's New Testament, 1526; Coverdale's Bible, 1535; Matthews' Bible ("the Bugge Bible"), 1539; the Geneve or Breeches Bible, 1560; the Bishop's or Parker's Bible, 1568, and a King James Bible, 1611.

It was scheduled by a corporation for $5,000,000 as its first quarterly payment.

14,114 Freight Car Theft Arrests.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Activity of the Railroad Administration in stamping out train robberies was indicated today in a report showing that in the 10 months ending Feb. 1 14,114 arrests for freight car thefts were made by the Railroad Secret Service. Of these 5475 were of railroad employes. Convictions totaled 9891, and $838,000 of the $1,120,000 worth of stolen property was recovered.

WASHINGTON U. TO GIVE 'HIRE AND FIRE' COURSE

Will Begin March 25 for Benefit of Employment Managers of Large Concerns.

A course of lessons in how to "hire and fire" will be given at Washington University, beginning March 15, for the benefit of employment managers of large establishments, and those desiring to learn such work. The number of students will be limited at first, only those having such positions or being specially fitted for them, being eligible.

The course was arranged by the Federal Board for Vocational Education at Washington University, the Chamber of Commerce and the Employers' Association. The lessons will consist of 30 lectures, given two evenings a week and the tuition is $25. The army conducted such classes last year at Harvard and Rochester Universities.

Subjects to Be Studied.

The following subjects will be studied: Selection of men for particular work; requirements of different occupations, training of employes, fixing of just wages, maintenance of proper working conditions, protection of employes against accident, fatigue and disease, living conditions of workers, and relations between employers and employes.

Maj. William C. Rogers, formerly with the Ordnance Department, now vice president of the Employers' Association, was active in promoting the course. He said he had observed about 2000 strikes, and that two-thirds of them could have been avoided by tactful management on the part of employers. One of the longest strikes on record, he said, was due to the fact that a stubborn employer refused to provide a system of ventilation that would have cost a small sum. Another bad strike resulted from the refusal of an employer to install drinking fountains, he said.

Labor Leaders Interested.

Labor leaders are much interested in the course, particularly in the lectures to be given on wage-fixing, and are exhibiting considerable interest in what advice will be given to employment managers about setting fair scales, and what methods of inducing employes to accept the wages fixed will be approved.

Rogers said there is a great shortage of capable employment managers. The United States Shipping Board last year sent out a hurry-up call for 150, and could only find 75 available in the country, he said.

Application for entrance should be made to Dean W. F. Gephart of the Washington University School of Commerce and Industry.

THIEVES LEFT ONE-FOOT SHOES

Discovered Contents of Six Sample Cases Were All "Lefts."

Thieves who stole six sample cases of shoes Friday night abandoned their loot when they found it wasn't all right. The shoes were all left shoes and when the thieves discovered that they had no rights they left the lefts in the automobile in which they had been left.

The machine, belonging to the Johansen Bros. Shoe Co., and driven by Fred Marx of 3141 South Grand avenue, was left standing in front of his home at 8:30 p. m. That was the last of the left shoes, so far as he was concerned, until the machine was found early yesterday in a driveway leading to St. John's Hospital, 315 South Euclid avenue.

BROTHERS IN ARMY MEET IN FRANCE FIRST TIME IN YEAR

Sergt. A. O. Kruse Had to Walk Most of 20 Miles Back to His Camp After Meeting.

Two St. Loupisans, brothers, who are serving with the army in France, have written their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ronert Kruse of 3944 Louisiana avenue, of meeting at Lorouville, France, early in February. The two had nto seen each other since entering the service more than a year ago.

The meeting is described in letters written on the same day by the two brothers at different places. One of them, Sergt. Albert O. Kruse of the eHadquarters Company, Fourteenth Infantry Brigade, said that the meeting was made possible through an assignment that took him from Villers-en-Haye to Lorouville, where his brother, Private Edwin R. Kruse of the 138th Infantry Machine Gun Company, sas stationed.

Albert made the trip to Lorouville in a staff officer's car, having been assigned as an orderly. He remained wtih Edwin two days. He had to walk the greater part of the 20 miles tht separated their camps on the return trip. Another brother, Otto M. Kruse, is a sailor aboard the U. S. S. Crozabo.

EDITORIAL COMPARES HAIG WITH THE BRITISH WELLINGTON

Criticises Him, Too, but Gives the Field Marshal Full Credit for His War Work.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 15.—In discussing the retirement of Field Marshal Haig from the Rhine command, to take charge of the home forces, the Times remarks in an editorial that in the last few months of the fighting he was "as infallible as Wellington himself."

"When all deductions have been made," it continues, "enough will remain to put Field Marshal Haig among the first half-dozen Generals this country has produced. The mistakes he may have made at Passchendaele must always be accounted one of the most tragic passages in our history. We doubt, too, if he understood as early as some others how vital was the principle of unity of command and perhaps he carried distaste of the amateur in military affairs to unwholesome lengths. He was always the typical soldier of the regular army, but when everything is said, he showed himself a great leader of men."

Maj. Freitag is only 29 years old. He entered the service as a First Lieutenant in the Medical Corps and went to France with the Eighty-fourth Division, which was organized at Camp Taylor, Ky. He has been in France since last September.

How Those Who Know

Light and Moderately Priced with Costly Car Qualities

Describe the Essex

Those who have seen and ridden in the Essex understand why everyone is so enthusiastic over it.

There has been a veritable burst of approval for the Essex from motorists who have heretofore confined their interest to one or the other of the two general types of cars.

The user of the light cheap car sees in the Essex a new standard of comfort and endurance. He recognizes that at a moderate price he at last can get economical motor car service that is enduring. He sees much in the Essex to admire and be proud of instead of apologetic, for it has the beauty and refinement that distinguishes many large and costly cars.

The In-Between Car

The Essex, as everyone recognizes, combines many of the wanted qualities of both the cheap light car and also of the large costly car.

It is light, yet as comfortable and easy riding as the large heavy car. It is small, but it also is capable of performance in the way of acceleration, hill climbing and speed that few larger and costlier cars are capable of showing.

The Essex is moderately priced, but it is rich in detail of beauty and finish. It awakens the pride of ownership.

Have You Not Noticed It?

We have attempted no description of the Essex. We have said it would speak for itself and so it has. People are talking about it. In their descriptions they make comparisons. They say it is light in weight like such and such a car, referring to cars of similar weight and price.

But when they speak of Essex performance or of its appearance, comparisons are made to larger and costlier cars. They say it is speedier than this one, and that it rides as easy as another, and that it pulls the hills like——, and stands up like ——, always mentioning cars that are distinguished in such particulars and which cost a great deal more to buy and to operate.

Only One Out of Three To Get Them

Present indications point to three buyers for each Essex that will be built this year. Ask those who have seen and ridden in the Essex and you will realize how strongly it is esteemed. Orders are being booked faster than cars can be built though factory production grows greater every day.

Maybe you will be one of the fortunate to get an Essex. Delay will place you with the thousands who will not be able to get an Essex this year. The question will be decided by your promptness.

QUESTIONNAIRES SENT TO ALL U. E. WORKERS

Mutual Benefit Association Asks Members Intimate Questions as to Their Expenditures.

Questionnaires, containing a list of searching questions, designed to elcit information of a most intimate character, including, for example, yearly expenditures for shoe repairing and hair cuts—has been sent to the employes of the Union Electric Light and Power Co. by an organization of employers of the company known as the Employes' Mutual Benefit Association. The association is fostered by the company.

The information asked for is as follows: Number and ages of children and adult dependents; size and type of residence with monthly rental; yearly cost of hair cutting, shoe repairing, medical treatment, insurance, laundry, gas, coal and electricity, food, clothing, ice and dental treatment; the annual cost of replacing worn furniture, utensils and the amount expended in car fare.

One employe, in a letter to the Post-Distpatch, stated that he was of the opinion the questionnaire was personal and unfair. He writes: "The company must have some hidden interest in presenting a paper of this kind to its employes." He explained that he regarded the association as being a company institution, because of the fact that its affairs are directed by committees and officers consisting of foremen and other of the higher employes of the company.

W. D. Alderson president of the Employes' Mutual Benefit Association, said the purpose of the questionnaires was to furnish the association with information necessary to the establishment of a minimum wage scale. He declared that the time for an adjustment of the wage agreement between the association and the company was approaching, and that unless this information were forthcoming a proper adjustment would be impossible.

Alderson said no reduction in wages would result from the adjustment, but that increases probably would be granted to employes with dependents. He said that 95 per cent of the company's 1400 employes were members of the association.

Referring to the charges that the questionnaires were serving some "hidden interest of the company," Alderson said he did not believe the questions asked were objectionable, and declared that all replies would be treated confidentially by the committee receiving them.

The data obtained will be used to determine the average cost of living and employes whose dependents and responsibilities warrant higher wages will be benefited, he said. The principal adjustments will be made where the compensation paid to employes of equal ability and responsibility varies in different departments.

WEEK'S COMMUNITY SERVICES

The community gospel services which are being held under the joint auspices of the Westminster Presbyterian, Central Presbyterian, Union Avenue Christian and the Pilgrim Congregational churches, will be conducted for this week at the Central Presbyterian Church, Delmar and Clara avenues.

The Rev. Dr. W. H. Black of Marshall, Mo., president of the Missouri Valley College, will conduct them. This moning Dr. Black will preach on "Four Banquets." This evening the subject will be "An Old Greek Doctor."

Prof. E. L. Coburn, supervisor of music in public schools, will conduct the singing at the evening services. The singing will be conducted by the joint choirs of the four churches this evening.

6000 BUILDING TRADES WORKERS GET INCREASE

Wages Have Been Advanced From 15 to 33 Per Cent, Union Official Says—Others to Follow.

Six thousand members of nine unions affiliated with the Building Trades Council have been granted an increase in wages of from 5 to 20 cents an hour, which is from 15 to 33 per cent.

In addition, about 4000 others in the building trades expect similar increases by May 1, according to Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council.

Increases recently granted, effective May 1, affect 2200 men. The paper hangers, with a membership of 400, who have been getting 65 cents an hour, will receive 85 cents. Building laborers, with 800 members, have been granted an increase of 10 cents an hour, from 45 cents to 55 cents. Concreters, numbering 500 men, now receiving 55 cents an hour, will receive 65 cents, and 500 electrical workers have signed up for an increase of from 87½ cents to $1 an hour.

Increases which go into effect April 1 affect 3800 men. The 3000 carpenters affiliated with the Building Trades Council have signed up for an increase for the ensuing year of 7½ cents an hour, bringing the wage to 82½ cents for carpenters and 92½ cents for foremen.

Iron workers, of whom there are 450, will be increased from 80 cents to $1 an hour, the foremen being increased from 90 cents to $1.12½. The cement finishers and the elevator constructors have been granted increases of from 75 cents to 82½ cents an hour, with 50 to 55 cents an hour for helpers. There are 175 men in each union.

Paper Hangers' Local No. 347 was the only union affiliated with the Building Trades Council which had any trouble in getting an increase. A strike was declared March 1, but was settled a few days later at a conference of the employers and employes at which the terms of the workmen were granted.

Cassidy said that the Building Trades Council represents a membership of 10,000, and that about half of that number are unemployed. He said that the building industry is expected to be active in the next month, and that by May 1 it is hoped that all of the members of the local unions will be at work. He said that no trouble is anticipated in renewing contracts expiring April 1 and May 1, which have not already been signed up.

DANIELS SAILS FOR EUROPE

Will Make a Study of Airplanes Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Secretary Daniels, who sailed from New York today on the transport Leviathan for France, will study during his visit abroad the developments being made by France Great Britain and Italy in aircraft. Upon his return to the United States about May 1, the Secretary expects to begin preparation of an outline of experimental work in aircraft for submission to Congress with a requst for an appropriation to carry it out.

The Secretary, before leaving Washington yesterday for New York, said it was the aim of the navy to keep not only abreast of aviation in the future, but to lead the way in the development of this new art." He spoke of the proposed transatlantic flight as an event "now almost in sight." Among the naval experts accompanying Daniels is Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, who in the conferences to be held abroad, will give particular attention to aircraft affairs.

Cook, president of Scarritt Bible and Training School, Kansas City.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Luster at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—ADV.

ANTI-ROGUES' GALLERY BILL TO BE DROPPED

Police Officials Tell Senator Kinney That It Would Hamper Work of Department.

Senator Michael Kinney, who introduced in the Senate a bill to prohibit the photographing by the police of any person who had not been convicted of crime said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he would drop the bill and not push it to passage.

He said Vice President Giraldin of the Police Board had informed him it would seriously hamper the department in preventing crime, and identifying criminals.

The bill has been engrossed in the Senate, and is on the calendar for third reading and final passage. If Kinney desires to kill it he will have it placed on the informal calendar, and will not call it up, no bill ever being called from the informal calendar except by its author.

Chief of Police O'Brien said that such a law would prevent the department from photogarphing suspected criminals and that through the inability of the department to send photographs to other cities, many dangerous men would escape punishment for their crimes. He cited many instances of criminals who had been arrested in St. Louis and through the sending of their pictures to other cities, had been identified as men wanted for other crimes.

A similar measure was passed by the Legislature in 1913, and was vetoed by Gov. Major at the request of the Board of Police Commissioners.

SPENCER TO TALK TODAY TO RELATIVES OF MEN IN 138TH

Mass Meeting at Armory to Plan Welcome Home to St. Louis Regiment.

Senator Selden P. Spencer, whose son, Capt. Oliver W. Spencer, commanded a company of the 138th Infantry, will be one of the speakers at the mass meeting for friends and relaives o fthe men of the 138th at the First Regiment Armory, Grand avenue and Market street, at 3 p. m. today. Other speakers will be Charles M. Hay, Thomas K. Skinker and Lieut. Willia mH. Leahy. Skinker is the father of th elate Capt. Alexander R. Skinker, killed in the Argonne, and Leamy commanded first a company and later a battalion of the 138th in that battle.

The meeting is to formulate plans for a welcome home to the 138th. The 138th is the only St. Louis unit without a relatives' auxiliary of its own and this deficiency is expected to be made up today. Several of the individual companies of the regiments have large and flourishing auxiliaries. These are planning to co-operate in all plans made for the regiment as a whole.

DEAF MUTE BUILDS WIRELESS

Says It Has Sending Range of 1000 Miles—Friends "Receive" for Him.

Ward E. Andrews, 22 years old, of 4722 Olive street, a deaf mute, has completed the construction of a wireless telegraph outfit, which he began before the war. Andrews, who was educated at St. Joseph's Deaf Mute Institute, works as a paper cutter operator at the Continental Bank Supply Co., 1515 Pine street.

The instrument, which is built entirely of homemade apparatus, has a sending power of 1000 miles, Andrews claims, and he recently "spoke" with a ship upon the Atlantic. Andrews can send messages himself, but must have friends receive for him. He wound his own induction coils, built the aerial, and made every other part except the batteries, Andrews says, working upon the instrument in his spare time. It took him a year to complete it. He has experimented with electrical apparatus since he was a boy, and has read many volumes of articles on the wireless.

Reception for 12th Engineers.

For the reception and decoration of the Twelfth Engineers upon their return from France, probably next month, the expenditure of not less than $10,000 is being planned by the St. Louis Railway Club, the local chapter of the American Society of Engineers and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Twelfth Engineers. A medal will be given each of the men in the regiment.

Navy's Participation in the War.

"Features of the Navy's Participation in the War," will be the subject of an address before the St. Louis Electrical Board of Trade at the Statler Hotel, Tuesday, by Lieut. A. L. Faber. Lieut. Faber was on the Battleship Rhode Island and made a number of trips to Europe convoying transports. He witnessed the surrender of the German fleet to the allies.

Gentlemen—I wish to express my appreciation of the absolute satisfaction which the Starck Piano has given us. The use of a piano for grand opera puts the instrument to the severest test, and it is my pleasure to say that the Starck Piano has met every demand made upon it in our work. SOLDIER WAITS ON GARDNER 3 MONTHS FOR HIS OLD JOB

Governor Has Failed to Act in Case of Former State Sanitorium Official, Supported by Doctors.

RESOLUTIONS HAVE BROUGHT NO REPLY

Missouri Medical Association Wants Major F. W. Shaw Reinstated at Mount Vernon Institution.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 15.—Resolutions adopted by the executive committee of the Missouri State Medical Association demanding that Gov. Gardner compel State boards under his control to reinstate in their former positions physicians who resigned to enter the army, have revealed the Governor's failure to act in a case which was brought to his attention nearly three months ago.

The Medical Association is demanding that the Governor compel the Board of Managers of the State Tuberculosis Sanitorium at Mount Vernon to reinstate Maj. Frederick W. Shaw, tuberculosis expert, who resigned in 1917 to enter the army, and to whose position the board appointed Dr. Harry L. Evans of Springfield, 29 years old, a friend of Dr. E. C. Roseberry of Springfield, a member of the board and medical director of the sanitorium.

Governor's Statement in Speech.

Dr. A. R. McComas of Sturgeon, chairman of the Executive Committee of the association, in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter, called attention to a recent speech by the Governor.

"Gov. Gardner in a speech in Joplin a month ago," Dr. McComas said, "took a position that returning soldiers should have their old jobs back. He insisted that private employers should take care of their men, and we had reason to hope that the Governor intended that his remarks also should apply to State employes.

"In Joplin the Governor said. 'Every boy should be reinstated in his former place of employment when he returns with an honorable discharge from the service. It is unthinkable that an employer would withhold employment from those who have offered their lives to protect the homes and the business interests of those who have remained at home.'

"Dr. Shaw served well and faithfully in the army and came back with an honorable discharge. The Mount Vernon board refused to reinstate him in his old position, and the Governor has not required the board to do so.

"It was our belief when we appealed to the Governor that either Dr. Shaw would be reinstated or the Governor would demand the resignation of every member of the Mount Vernon board, but we had not counted on the force of political influences."

Failing to obtain action the executive committee, the other members of which are Dr. L. W. Cape of Maplewood and Dr. A. H. Hamil of St. Louis, adopted the resolutions on the subject which were sent to the Governor two weeks ago.

Text of Resolutions.

The resolutions were as follows:

"Whereas, The Honorable Frederick D. Gardner, Governor, has urged employers to reinstate in their old positions soldiers who have been honorably discharged from the military service, and the House of Representatives of the Fiftieth General Assembly adopted resolutions to the same effect, and

"Whereas, Over 1500 Missouri physicians served their country by joining the Medical Corps of the Army and the Navy in the war with Germany, and

"Whereas, Some of those physicians were employed in the eleemosynary institutions and other departments of the State when they entered the military service, therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the Missouri State Medical Association requests the Governor to use the power of his office to compel the restoration of such physicians to their former positions in State institutions and departments when honorably discharged from military service, should such action become necessary."

Inquiry by a Post-Dispatch reporter develops that in the spring of 1917 Dr. Shaw, who had done tuberculosis research work in Johns Hopkins University, and who had been given important work by the Federal Government in the Philippines and among Indian tribes, resigned as chief physician at the Mount Vernon institution to enter the army.

He entered the army as a Lieutenant and was advanced to the rank of Major. After the signing of the armistice he obtained his discharge and went to Mount Vernon with the expectation that he would immediately step into his old work.

He was informed by Dr. S. A. Newman, superintendent of the institution, and by members of the Board of Managers that his place had been filled and that there was nothing open for him.

"We are going to ask the Legislature for an additional appropriation," he said he was told by the board, "and if we get it there may possibly be a place for you, but if you stir up anything now with the Governor you won't get a thing."

In the army Maj. Shaw had met Dr. McComas, a Captain, who since has obtained his discharge, and he took the matter up with him. Through Dr. McComas the executive committee of the association became interested, and Dr. McComas made several trips to Jefferson City to urge the Governor to action, but without success.

The Governor was asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter if he had received resolutions from the committee calling upon him to restore State employes who had served in the army to their old jobs.

"No," he replied, "I did not get such resolutions, but I did receive some from the medical society highly commending me for my stand on the matter of giving soldiers their jobs."

The resolutions quoted above were those the Governor received.

The Governor said he had received several communications regarding the Dr. Shaw case, and that he had referred them to the board at Mount Vernon.

He said he considered the matter one for the board to handle and that he did not expect to interfere with the board.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out through the pores of the skin as a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—ADV.

"I have been Using Your Sulpherb Tablets More or Less for Many Years and Have Recommended Them to Many, Because I Think They Should Be in Every Home."

This writes Mr. Wm. Cameron, 1021 Ells Place, Denver, Colo., and we publish this brief statement to prove the never-ending value of Sulpherb Tablets, in the treatment of such ailments as chronic constipation, impaired kidney action, and consequent impure blood manifested in many ways, such as headaches, pimples, boils, rash, hives, rheumatism, etc. Neglected constipation undoubtedly brings on a long train of more serious ills and the way to get relief is to use Sulpherb Tablets as a laxative, tonic blood clearer.

They are made of extract of herbs and roots and contain sulphur and cream of tartar, thus supplying the essentials for a regular and effective treatment. Sold by druggists everywhere at 60c per tube.—ADV.

MAKE YOUR SHOES WEAR LONGER

Ten months ago, W. H. Kelley, a lumber salesman of Omaha, had a pair of shoes re-soled with Neōlin Soles. Mr. Kelley does much walking and has worn these shoes constantly. He says "they are still good for another ten months of wear."

Good shoe stores carry Neōlin-soled shoes in many styles for men, women and children. They cost you no more than shoes that give less wear. Neōlin Soles are also available everywhere for re-soling. Remember—these soles are created by science to be what soles should be. They are comfortable and waterproof—as well as long-wearing. E. M. HOUSE PRAISES CONDITIONS AT BREST

After Tour of Several Hours He Declares That Recent Attacks Were Unjust.

By HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1919, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, March 15.—Mud is still present at the American army camp at Brest, but it is a cleaner and healthier mud than is the sort that has been thrown at the plant in the last few weeks.

There has been a radical improvement in conditions. Not an improvement of the sort based upon negligence or mismanagement in the past, but an improvement of the sort that always follows the presence of Yankee enterprise and energy when these qualities have a chance to show themselves.

The base command, the head of which is Major-General Helmicks and Camp Pontanezen, commanded by Brigadier-General Smedley Butler of the Marine Corps, were inspected on Thursday by E. M. House and French Minister of Marine Leygus, while they were awaiting the arrival of President Wilson. Their visit of several hours took them to all quarters of the camp, and when it was over they praised it highly.

Attack Unjust, House Says.

House, who is not given to loose talk, and who rarely lets himself be quoted, said:

"I think the conditions in the camp and at Brest have been unjustly attacked. The manner in which something like 70,000 men are being handled is one calling for commendation. It is just such work as this, throughout our participation in the war that has made the Paris conference possible. The American army work has been done rapidly and excellently, and, if my words carry any weight, I should like to assure my fellow countrymen that there is nothing at Brest to cause them the least concern. On the contrary, there is much to be proud of. The men are being well treated, well fed."

The French Minister spoke in the same vein.

"I am more than pleased and impressed by my inspection of conditions in the American army at Brest and at Camp Pontanezen," he said. "Those two places afford a striking example of American efficiency. Every possible step has been taken for the comfort and care of the soldiers and the military management is above reproach."

Big Waterworks Inspected.

Minister Leygus, accompanied by his aids, drove later under the guidance of Col. Singleton, chief of staff of the base command, to Perfield, where the Americans have constructed big waterworks that probably will be bought by the French Government either for national use or to be sold to the Brest municipality. It is a triumph of engineering, and was planned and executed entirely by an American army outfit.

Conversations with soldiers in camps and in the hospitals show that they have no kick to make. In fact they unitedly give Brest a better reputation than most other camps in France or America. For two months the death rate at Brest has been about the lowest in the American Expeditionary Force, and lower than in any of the camps in America east of the Mississippi.

Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Salvation Army and Jewish Welfare workers have done good work in keeping up the morale of the men in the face of adverse conditions. Brest will not be a profitable subject for traducers of the American army and searchers for scandal.

ARMY AIR SERVICE RECRUITING TENT TO OPEN HERE TOMORROW

Men Without Dependents Who Have Been Discharged Eligible for Enlistment.

A recruiting tent for the army air service will be opened Monday on the lawn of the old Courthouse, Broadway and Market street, under the direction of Lieut. R. L. Starr. Men without dependents who have been discharged from the army or who are in the army are eligible to re-enlist for one-year periods.

Upon enlistment a 30-day furlough with pay will be granted. In addition men of the air service can get flying instruction and training with a 50 per cent increase in pay. Opportunity for training in such trades as mechanician, draftsman, electrician, machinist, vulcanizer and welder is afforded every air service man.

An interesting table has been figured out by the air service, which shows that noncommissioned officers from Sergeant to Master Electrician receive annually the equivalent of from $1942 to $2608. In civil life the average man of from 20 to 25 years of age earns $885, according to information compiled by the Department of Labor.

Men applying for enlistment have the privilege of taking the examination for flying before enlisting.

Guard Band to Give Dance.

The First Regiment, Missouri Home Guard, Band and Musical Association will give a concert and dance tomorrow night at the Armory, Grand avenue and Market street. The proceeds will go to the fund to be used for entertaining St. Louis regiments returning from France, and for the band fund. The program consists of 20 numbers, including the most popular military and naval dance music, and two descriptive fantasias, "Hunting Scene" and "The Death of Custer." George W. Kayser is band leader, and A. F. Alphonse drum major.

DETENTION WARD IS CITY HOSPITAL NEED

Authorities There Are Powerless to Prevent Escapes of Prisoners Under Present Conditions.

The escape early yesterday morning of James Bennett, a negro who was held prisoner at the city hospital while under treatment for a gunshot wound inflicted by the officer who arrested him for suspected burglary Thursday, called attention to the need of better facilities for handling prisoners at the hospital. Dr. Rolla S. Henry, the manager, said that an average of one prisoner a month escapes, and that frequenely these are being held on serious charges. There are about 50 prisoners a month brought into the hospital.

"We have plans drawn for a detention and clinic building," Dr. Henry said last night, "but the increased cost of building brought about by the war sent the estimate for its construction up from $150,000 to $250,000. We hope some day to get this building. It will be a four-story brick structure built on the north side of the present group of buildings.

"The upper floor would be reserved for male prisoners, and so arranged that adequate nursing facilities may be provided. Part of the third floor would be for women prisoners, of whom we have few. The rest of the building would be devoted chiefly to a cliniic."

Prisoners in Open Wards.

Dr. Henry said that at present prisoners who are in a serious condition must be sent to the various open wards for treatment and that it is comparatively easy to escape from these wards. Bennett escaped by forcing with a spoon the lock on the straps which held him in bed. The present detention ward is so arranged that serious cases cannot be handled in it. Besides, cases of suspected insanity are held here for observation.

It is planned to have a member of the police force constantly on duty in the detention building if it is erected. The only check kept on prisoners now is by the chief clerk, outside of observation by the nurses. Pending the erection of the new building, Dr. Henry hopes to secure the services of a policeman to aid the chief clerk.

Cannot Prevent Escapes.

A recent grand jury condemned the present housing of sick prisoners. Trouble has been experienced in getting court permission to remove afflicted prisoners from the city jail to the city hospital because of the danger of escape. Hospital authorities say that they are powerless to prevent occasional prisoners leaving as conditions now stand.

The clinic in the lower floors of the contemplated building would facilitate evacuation of the hospital wards of many medical and surgical cases. The present clinic is small and poorly equipped. It is said that the new clinic would make it possible to discharge convalescent patients from the wards and finish their treatment while they lived at home. Also, minor operations could be performed there and bed space saved in the wards.

BIBLE WOUNDED MARINE LOST IN TRENCH FOUND BY COMRADE

Writes to St. Louisan's Father of Recovering Book and Two Photographs at Chateau-Thierry.

When Lawrence Dace of Flat River, Mo., a Marine, fell wounded in the front lines at Chateau-Thierry on June 5, 1918, he lost a bible his father had given him and two photographs. The father, A. H. Dace, has just received a letter from Calvin Tardiff, of the Sixth Regiment of Marines, saying he found the bible and photographs in a trench and carried them with him throughout several big drives, and had brought them home with him to Chicago.

"The bible contains your name and that of your son, and I am writing to ask if you would care to have me send it and the photographs to you," says Tardiff's letter. "I also would like to know how Lawrence came out, for I feel like I knew him after having carried his picture and bible around with me so long."

In a letter to the Post-Dispatch, the elder Dace says he had sent for the bible and will prize it more highly than any war relic that could have been sent him from over there.

NEW JOB FOR ENSIGN BUCKLEY

Aide to Commander of the Eighth Naval District.

Ensign Horace Buckley of St. Louis has been selected as aid to Commander Nelson of the Eighth Naval District, with headquarters at New Orleans. He enlisted in the navy and after several months passed an examination for a commission.

Ensign Buckley is a brother of Harry D. Buckley, a theater manager, who also entered the ranks and later was commissioned a Lieutenant of infantry, after going through an officers' training camp at Camp Funston.

DEMOCRATS IN PLATFORM DECLARE U. R. TO BE ISSUE

Convention Pledges Party to Work for Reorganization of Company, and for 5-Cent Fare.

FRANCHISE DEAL IS BITTERLY ASSAILED

Principle of League of Nations Indorsed—Right of Public Employes to Organize Recognized.

The Democratic city platform, adopted by the convention at Knights of Columbus Hall yesterday, is as follows:

"The statesmen of all the world declare that a crisis has been reached in the affairs of the nations of the earth. It is admitted that our civilization today stands on trial. The autocratic Governments of Europe have been overturned, but the violence of the explosions by which they were destroyed has set up an international agitation, the effect of which is now being felt by every civilized Government of the world. This tension and agitation have transmitted themselves to opposing forces within our own people, and from one end of our land to the other we see the forces of reaction and repression, on the one hand, arraying themselves against the forces of destruction on the other. Both are forces of disorder and violence.

"Standing between these extremes of violence and selfishness is the great mass of the American people. These represent a wholesome and healthy public opinion whose outstanding characteristic is a belief in the doctrine of a square deal. To this sound and hearty public mind it is clearly apparent that very definite and immediate reforms are necessary in our whole economic and industrial relationship, if we are to have industrial and social tranquility. The workers of the nation must receive a larger portion of the national wealth, for through their service they are justly entitled to it.

Need of Efficient Officers.

"Such reforms as are necessary can be sanely and surely brought about by the legal, legislative and constitutional means provided in our form of democratic government, provided our Government, in all its branches, remains truly democratic and truly responsive to the wishes of the people. It will not be truly responsive to the wishes of the people if it is secretly controlled by privilege-enjoying corporations who use their great power of finance and organization to put men in office for the purpose of defeating the will of the people and of secretly carrying out their selfish corporate plans.

"At no time in our entire American history was the function of government a more serious business, a greater opportunity or a more sacred obligation than now. Every office in our land needs at this moment to be filled by a person wholly devoted to the public welfare, who has no selfish or ulterior motive in seeking office and who has a maturity of mind and a knowledge of social and economic forces adequate to deal with the vital problems now immediately facing us. This is especially true of municipal administration, which of all branches of our Government comes most intimately in contact with and most directly affects the lives of the people.

The United Railways.

"In the face of these colossal and portentous facts we stand shocked and humiliated at the examples of governmental incompetence, unfaithfulness and immaturity which have been given to us by our present city administration. We appear to be afflicted with a government of childish minded men—trifling with a most sacred function of society (self-government), and by their acts, pranks and 'deals' directly opposing the will of the people. This condition we declare to be the direct outgrowth and logical consequence of secret corporate control, which alone can successfully maintain machine politics.

"The corrupting influence which has brought about this condition of municipal incompetence can be directly traced to one chief source. The city's principal privilege-enjoying corporation, the United Railways Co., has for 20 years shown an arrogant contempt for popular government. It has bribed the city's representatives. It has openly defended such bribery. A most damnable act of crime and violence against the institution of free government, the burglary of the people's referendum petitions, has been traced directly to its door. It is openly admitted to be the controlling factor in our present city government.

Influence Called Menace.

"We declare that all such acts of violence, crime, corruption and betrayal of the public's trust are a menace to the free institutions of our land. Such acts throw suspicion upon all government, and play directly into the hands of the disciples of violence in our country who are secretly conspiring to overthrow our very institutions of government. We declare it as our conviction that all such corporate influences and all such unfaithful governmental representatives are as dangerous to our national peace and welfare as though they were in direct conspiracy with the destructionists within our gates. We declare that the intrigue, propaganda, criminality, organized force and secret control of our municipal government, built up and directed by the United Railways Co., must be utterly destroyed, for it is a menace as gravely threatening to the peace and welfare of our city as was the menace of Kaiserism a threat to the liberty of the world.

"We hereby notify and warn the people of St. Louis that there is now in control of their city affairs a government whose controlling motive in its own self-perpetuation and the secret service of the secret forces which support it. The income of the city, the resources of the city, the offices of the city, the authorities granted under the charter of the city, and actually the property of the city, are all being used and disposed of in order to widen, deepen and strengthen the vast political machine which has assumed a dictatorship over our civic affairs.

Extravagance Charged.

"We charge this administration with gross extravagance, with direct unfaithfulness and with a base betrayal of the people's interests. Instead of fulfilling its promise to use the new powers granted under the city charter to perfect and make more efficient and economical the administation of our city's affairs, it has directly violated that promise. Instead of working economies, it has developed new extravagances. Instead of eliminating needless offices and functions, it has multiplied new and unnecessary position. Each year of its administration sees new excesses added to the old.

"The heavy tax burdens resting upon the people, the property and the industries of the city have been

DEMOCRATS ADOPT PLATFORM DECLARING U. R. TO BE ISSUE

grievously increased in order to bring in more of the people's money to squander. The accrued mill tax, amounting to nearly two millions of dollars, which was looked to as a fund with which to do some useful and permanent construction in the city, has been dissipated and nothing is left to show for it, except a city hall packed with a surfeit of needless job holders, put there to make more powerful the political machine.

Declares U. R. Is Issue.

"The present city administration has weakly permitted the United Railways Co. to violate its contract with the city to carry passengers for a 5-cent fare, and has basely surrendered to that corporation one of the most powerful weapons (the Jefferson avenue franchise case), which might have been used to compel it to fulfill its franchise obligations. It has shown at every turn an obvious intention to serve the intrests of this great privilege-enjoying monopoly, and to betray the interests of the people of St. Louis. It squarely raises the issue of this campaign which we declare to be, 'Shall the city be run by and for the United Railways Co., or shall it be run by and for the people of St. Louis?'

"Under this declaration and pledge we promise the people of St. Louis, if elected to offices which grant us sufficient powers, to use our every executive, legislative and legal means to bring about the following things:

1. Compel the United Railways Co. to live up to its contract with the city and give adequate service at a 5-cent fare. They made the bargain; they bribed the city's representatives in order to get that privilege, and they should be compelled to live up to their own contract, the State Public Service Commission to the contrary notwithstanding. There appears to be clear constitutional means for accomplishing this.

Reorganization Pledged.

2. Compel a complete reorganization of the corporation through the medium of a receivership, if necessary; a reorganization brought about in order to protect the rights of the city of St. Louis, squeeze the water out of the company's capital issues, and get it down to a bedrock basis.

3. Accomplish in that reorganization an arrangement that will take the United Railways out of politics and put it into the transportation business, where its chief interest will lie in properly running our street car lines and not in improperly running the government of the city.

4. Effect in that reorganization relief from the political pressure now exerted by this corporation, so that honest men may be elected to public office pledged only to serve the interests of the people of St. Louis, and not privately pledged to protect the special privileges of this corporation.

The Efficiency Board.

5. Remove from the city payroll all the vast army of useless jobholders who have been placed there for political purposes, and bring about as promptly as possible the reorganizations, consolidations and economies in the city administration which were made possible to the city under the provisions of the new charter.

6—Restore the real operation of the Efficiency Board, the provision for which was written into the city charter as a protection to the city against machine politics. The efficiency of the Efficiency Board has been utterly detroyed by the present administration, and instead of the civil service rules of appointment provided by the charter, we now have appointment by political preferment which has been made the basis of the present powerful and unscrupulous political machine.

7—Emancipate the city from the tyranny of the present diabolical political machine which, building itself up upon an elaborate system of patronage, intimidation and favoritism, now protects special privilege, vice and crime within the city, and stifles and suppresses a free expression of the public will.

8—Should the result of this election giving us only a minority representation in the Board of Aldermen, and thereby deprive us of the necessary authority to carry out these reforms, then we pledge ourselves to give watchful attention to all that is going on in the city hall, keep the public informed of what their representatives are doing and thereby enable the people to intelligently, promptly and vigorously act whenever action is necessary in the protection of their rights.

World League Indorsed.

"And finally we welcome this opportunity to express our heartfelt gratitude to our national President, Woodrow Wilson, for his great devotion to the principle of liberty under the law, which principle he is so nobly endeavoring to carry out through the formation of the League of Nations. We herewith express our unqualified endorsement of the principle of a League of Nations for the purpose of maintaining law and order between and among the nations of the earth and thereby guaranteeing to all nations, both great and small, the same protection against the aggressions of the lawless which is now given to the individual under our individual governments.

"We herewith pledge ourselves to him, our great national and international leader, to stand with him and fight with him against the secret forces of selfishness and intrigue which conspire to defeat the peaceful purposes of humanity in order to carry out their own autocratic and imperialistic designs and to do our small part here within our own municipality to accomplish for our own people what he is so bravely endeavoring to accomplish for the peoples of the earth.

Flint Garrison.

"The Democratic party feels that in Flint Garrison, its candidate for President of the Board of Alderman, it has a man of unusual qualifications for the office. His long and successful business career in St. Louis, his constant interest in movements for the commercial advancement of the city as well as its political improvement, his sincere and earnest friendship for labor and his high moral character, all make his services to our city of vital importance at this important time, when enemies of the public must be fought who are unusually skillfull and powerful.

"In our candidates for the Board of Aldermen we feel that an unusually high standard has been set. Realizing the extraordinary importance at this time having Aldermen who have both the ability and the courage to fight the people's battles without fear or favor, we have a deep sense of pride in the men who are the Democratic nominees for the Board of Aldermen, and we pledge them for economy and against the extravagance that characterizes the present administration of the city.

Right to Unionize.

"The public school system of St. Louis is known the world over as the best in the United States. We pledge ourselves to maintain this high standard in this department of public service upon which the future of our children and the continued advancement of our city depends.

"RESOLVED, that the Democrats in convention assembled recognize the right of all public employes to organize for the purpose of collectively bargaining for their mutual benefit, or working conditions."

RENT-INCOME STOPPED. Oh, no, that's not a calamity. It's just one of those happenings which the POST-DISPATCH "WANT" ADS can remedy.

PREDICTS RACE SUICIDE FROM THE 'ARISTOCRACY OF LABOR'

London Pastor Points Out That War by Separation of Families Cost 12,000,000 Lives.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Race suicide, as the result of the "aristocracy of labor," will be the outcome of the movement by which labor now seeks to destroy capital, according to Dean Inge of St. Paul's Cathedral, in an address recently at a meeting of the Eugenics Education Society. England's dense population, he asserted, will then disappear and the country will revert to the quiet, rural England of 1750, with London, bereft of her wealth, the "spiritual capital of the world."

"Neither voluntary restriction of births, which only lowers the death rate," he said, "nor famine, nor pestilence, nor war has much effect in reducing numbers. The late war cost 12,000,000 lives from the separation of husbands and wives, in addition to about 8,000,000 killed. But these losses may be made good in a few years.

"But at home we must face the fact that the upper and middle classes probably will be destroyed by predatory taxation. We are witnessing the creation of a new privileged class, an aristocracy of labor, which will become exclusive and conservative when it has won the privilege of exploiting the public for its own profit. It probably will refuse to tax itself for the benefit of the proletariat, so that when the loot of the minority is gone, we shall no longer support the waste-products of civilization.

"From the eugenic point of view this will be an advantage, but since the cheap races must end by capturing our trade, the privileged workers must themselves decay. The trade unionist probably will be allowed to place only one son in his union and will take care not to have more. The industrial employment of women will also lower the birth rate. Thus, in every class there will be a tendency to progressive decrease."

8 AUTOS STOLEN HERE RECOVERED IN ILLINOIS

Six Found in Cairo Were Bought by Garage Proprietor From Persons Passing Through.

Eight automobiles which were stolen in St. Louis last year and early this year were brought back and returned to their owners yesterday by Detective Seargeant Helmholt, who had been rounding them up since March 3. He recovered seven in Cairo, Ill., and one in Murphysboro, Ill., after receiving a tip that machines stolen here had been taken to those towns and resold.

Six of the machines, all recovered in Cairo, were found in possession of persons there who said they had bought them from Sadi Emeal, Syrian proprietor of a Cairo garage. Emeal said he bought them at low prices from persons who were passing through Cairo, and he declared he did not know they were stolen.

After returning to St. Louis with the machines, Helmholt received by mail a clipping from a Cairo newspaper which said Emeal had started on a long cruise down the river in a gasoline launch without making known his destination.

Owners of Machines.

The rightful owners of the cars recovered in Cairo and the dates and places of thefts are: Russell Yawell, East St. Louis, March 25, 1918, from Twelfth and Pine streets; C. G. Shoelch, 4063 Magnolia avenue, Nov. 14, 1918, from in front of his home; William P. Logan, 4482A Margaretta avenue, Nov. 31, 1918, from 3126 Locust street; Rudolph Schaeffer, 3200 Franklin avenue, Nov. 29, 1918, from in front of that address; George E. Schreiner, 4236 Juniata street, Nov. 25, 1918, from 3815 Botanical avenue; Albert Wilson, 4724 North Grand avenue, Dec. 17, 1918, from 20 North Sixth street; Vance Taylor, Webster Groves, Oct. 22, 1918, from Fourth and Locust streets.

Wheels of Car Chained.

The machine recovered in Murphysboro was the property of William A. Jack of 4947 Laclede avenue. It was stolen Jan. 23 from in front of his home and was found in a shed adjoining Charles Edward's garage. Edwards refused to give up the machine, saying he had bought it from a man who passed through Murphysboro. After Helmholt had obtained a writ of replevin he found the wheels of the machine had been chained and it was necessary to break a padlock to release it. Edwards formerly was Sheriff at Jackson County, Ill. He said he did not know the car was stolen.

After recovering the machines Helmholt wired to St. Louis and chauffeurs were sent to bring the cars here under their own power. No arrests were made in connection with the recovery of the cars.

COW SLAUGHTERED NOT DISEASED

Butcher Exonerated in Letter From Health Office.

Anton Sebek, proprietor of a butcher shop at 1119 Geyer avenue, has received a letter from Assistant Health Commissioner Jordan notifying him that the carcass of a cow, slaughtered by him and held pending an investigation as to its wholesomeness, has been found to be in excellent condition and proper for human consumption.

Dr. Jordan's letter is based on a report made by a city veterinarian, who examined the cow. The examination was made at Sebek's request following a report made to the police by Andrew L. Hilgert, a Justice of the Peace at High Ridge, Mo., that the animal was sick before it was slaughtered. Hilgert has been notified that the meat is wholesome.

Sebek purchased the animal from Joseph Bohac, a High Ridge farmer. He slaughtered and dressed it himself. All doubt concerning the animal's wholesomeness has now been removed.

Airmen Attack Position.

Goluboick was wounded by a machine-gun bullet at the Argonne on Nov. 2 during an attack on the American positions by the three German airmen who swooped low over the lines and delivered a murderous fire at close range. In an attack the previous day he said his company had taken more than 100 German prisoners.

First Sergeant Callison was in charge of a group of runners of liaison men back of the first-line trenches on Sept. 27, the second day of the Argonne offensive, when a shell burst near by wounding him and another man.

Private Burke, who was in the American First Army, was hit by flying fragments of a high explosive shell at Soissons July 18. He was among the first Americans to go into the lines and helped dig the graves of the first three Americans killed—Hay, Enright and Gresham. During his training period in France his company received instructions from the Blue Devils. During the Soisson offensive 20 men in his company were killed and many more wounded, he said.

Edward P. Barker was a replacement in the Sixth Field Artillery, the unit which claims the honor of firing the first shot of the war. Barker is at the barracks hospital convalescing from illness. While he saw action on six fronts in nine months of service overseas he escaped unscathed. He saw fighting at Cantigny, Toul, Montdidier, Verdun, Soissons and Gondecourt, he said.

Mechanic Courtney was wounded by shrapnel in the left hand at the Argonne Nov. 1. He had gone over the top early in the morning, he said, and had advanced perhaps 300 yards when he was struck. The men were advancing in squad columns when a shell burst near the column he was in, wounding him and the men immediately in front and behind him.

British Editors and Authors Acclaim Leadership of President Wilson

LEAGUE OF NATIONS CALLED 'THE HOPE OF HUMANITY'

Policy of the American Chief Executive in Endeavoring to Bring About a World Organization That Aims to Prevent Future Wars Warmly Applauded by Men and Women in Forefront of English Opinion.

They See, in His Plan, an End to Militarism and Its Terrible Consequences and Many Believe It Marks the Advent of an Era in Which the Brotherhood of Man Will Be the Guiding Spirit in All International Relations.

PRESIDENT Wilson and his policy of a League of Nations are warmly supported by the enlightened part of British public opinion. The following striking expressions by men and women of many professions and nearly all classes shows how widespread is the belief that in the President's plan may be found a cure for militarism and its terrible consequences.

The Right Rev. J. E. C. Weldorf, Dean of Durham, D. D. (Formerly Bishop of Calcutta and Metnopolitan of India.)

My reason for supporting President Wilson's policy is threefold:

1. It is a democratic policy. Militarism and, above all, monarchism, has been tried and found wanting. It has proved itself to be the curse of humanity. It means war, and not peace. But democracy is pacific at heart and the President relies upon the peoples.

2. It is a cosmopolitan policy. It aims at destroying the law of force. It seeks to promote truth, freedom and righteousness. The league of nations, if it comes into being, will set itself against arbitrary, aggressive, ambitious schemes; it will follow the natural lines of division, whether geographical or racial, among the peoples; it will treat small states and great with the same equitable consideration.

3. It is a Christian policy. The need of the world is that nations shall behave each to the others like Christian gentlemen; that, they should avoid jealousy and trickery; that they should believe their interests to be ultimately not antagonistic but coincident, and that if differences arise, as they must arise from time to time, between them, they should settle those differences not by warfare, but by judicial arbitration. This, too, is the word of Jesus Christ.

The Right Hon. J. R. Clynes, M. P., Late Food Controller.

I support President Wilson's policy because if that policy is well established by larger nations it will insure continued peace in the world and exercise the necessary moral authority greatly to improve relationships between all peoples.

It will establish the practice of democracy in dealings between nations in place of the secret and harmful diplomacy previously pursued. It will by its effect and example tend to inspire many beneficial political reforms in the different countries of the earth, and would, I believe, tend also to improve the quality and level of economic changes and make more uniform the industrial legislation required for the betterment of the wage-earning classes in industrial countries.

The Rev. R. F. Horton, M. A., D. D., Chairman of the Congregational Union.

I support President Wilson's policy because Woodrow Wilson, by his mental and spiritual culture, and by his position as the head of a great nation, was able to form a far clearer and juster view of the situation than European statesmen did. He saw distinctly the great issue between the old tyranny and the new liberty, and his strong utterances were hammer blows which brought the cause of militarism to ruin.

And then he was able, as no other man was, to sketch the great conception of the nations leagued together for the good of the whole world as his own states are united in one Federal Government. With dispassionate force he laid down the 14 points of such a new world order, and before his clear and convincing intellect the turgid thoughts of militarism are more and more forced to subside.

I cannot help thinking, therefore, that he is one of those men who are raised up to be the founders of new epochs and that it will be given to him to pull humanity up to another plane.

Lady Henry Somerset, President of National British Women's Temperence Association.

It is more than 20 years ago that, standing in Mr. Edison's room, he said to me, "War will cease, because when science has put all her knowledge at the disposal of the fighting force the weapons will become so terrific, the destruction so gigantic, that war will be scientific murder, and can no longer exist." I little dreamed that I should live to see the fulfillment of his prophecy.

I support, heart and soul, President Wilson's policy: First, because, even if war can be justified, it is no longer the fair contest of opposing forces by legitimate methods. Secondly, because I believe, if it be true that our civilization is of any value, we are bound to find some sane method of settling international disputes and difficulties other than by slaughter. Thirdly, because, in spite of the agony through which the world has passed and the horror wrought during the last four years, men's minds have been gradually turning to higher aspirations and holier hopes for themselves and for mankind.

And a truer understanding of the obligations of man to man will beget a truer patriotism and a better realization of our responsibilities toward humanity.

Clement Shorter Sees, in Wilson's Scheme, a Way To Ireland's Freedom.

By Clement K. Shorter,
Editor of the London Sphere.

I support President Wilson's policy because I believe that he will provide England with a conscience at her one vulnerable point—her treatment of Ireland. England, with Great Britain, will stand shoulder to shoulder with President Wilson in protecting the small nations of the Continent; he has pledged himself to do so and we shall accept wholeheartedly his lead.

England has always behaved splendidly when there have been struggles for freedom outside of her own dominions, in Italy and Greece, for example. But Englishmen are wont to assume that Ireland is really an English country—a very troublesome and rebellious country—and she is governing Ireland at this moment exactly as Prussia governed Alsace for 48 years.

In Alsace patriotic men were imprisoned for singing their own songs, for attempting to explain their country's story; these things are being done in Ireland every day. President Wilson, with 12,000,000 of Irishmen in his own country to placate, will doubtless help us to a humble contemplation of our duty toward self-determination in Ireland.

Sir Arthur Holland, Kt. (Senior Partner of Arthur Holland & Co., Shipowners.)

I consider President Wilson's policy as regards the league of nations absolutely sound, and it will be a great thing for civilization if that league can be perfected. The difficulties I foresee are in getting anything definite from the stray elements in Russia. Yet the league cannot be complete without the inclusion of all nationalities.

I take it that the Central Powers would come in, but I have not much faith in the delegates from Russia who may meet at Prinkipo conference having any authority from the populations interested to act in the matter.

The leading Powers would have to do the necessary police work to enforce the league's resolutions.

Sir Charles Macara, Bart., President English Federation Master Cotton Spinner's Association, Chairman International Federation.

President Wilson has proved himself to be a wise, a firm and a capable administrator, and abounding in patience. When he was neutral he maintained a rigorous neutrality, quite regardless of the showers of criticism that fell upon him; and when he entered the war that determination which characterized his neutrality has been cast in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war, in order to better assist in securing an early, a satisfactory and a permanent peace.

President Wilson had to wait for America's hour to strike, and when that fateful hour came the American nation heard its clear, ringing call to duty and to sacrifice, and responded with an enthusiasm that knew no bounds.

President Wilson we now know to be a man of magnetic enthusiasm, and to his masterly diplomacy we attribute much that the Americans have done in the fight, not for this country or France, not for Belgium or Russia, but for civilization.

We welcomed the adhesion of our new ally for the moral justification which it gave to our aims, which were and still are "to defend the high cause of freedom and the rights of humanity against the gravest menace by which they have ever ben imperilled."

We recognize and fully appreciate that President Wilson and his people are not fighting for any lust of conquest, greed for territory; no selfish aims whatsoever.

We gratefully acknowledge that the co-operation of the United States—the greatest democracy in the world—with the allies in this war was the turning point of the war, and made victory for the people certain.

Finally, we regard President Wilson as a worthy successor of Abraham Lincoln. That the character and influence of his principle as a statesman, a moralist, a seeker after righteousness and peace, and as one who is doing all that he can do to further the sovereignty of the people, justifies us, in the language of the Son of Sirach, in saying: "His own memorial shall not depart away, and his name shall live from generation to generation."

Joseph King, M. P. for North Somerset.

1. President Wilson is by position, dignity and power of his actions and acknowledged achievements the greatest, most trusted statesman living. We must support such a man at this time, even if we cannot understand, or even cannot approve, all he seems to be doing.

2. The old diplomatic methods and personalities in Europe have made a hopeless mess of things and are rightly discredited. Our only hope is in Wilson and the new spirit which he brings.

3. The democratic-republican world and all it stands for needs to be extended from America to the Eastern Hemisphere. Our monarchies and aristocracies are dying and their powers are declining. But it is a slow, painful process. Wilson will quicken and ease for us the fall of crowned heads and the obliteration of privileged castes.

4. In particular, Wilson's policy of fighting Bolshevism by food, not by force, is simple, sound and sincere.

The Hon. and Rev. James Adderley, the Great Preacher.

I support President Wilson's policy because I agree with the Pope that he has a master mind. He is the one person in authority least biased by nationalism who seems determined to work for the abolition of war and the establishment of a league of Nations. He is the least swayed by popular opinion and the most aware of the sacrifices that will have to be made.

He really believes in democracy, which is more than can be said for many who are now professing a new creed in flat contradiction to their beliefs before the war. He also really knows how to wait and see, which is better than not waiting and not seeing, which is the policy of most.

If he goes on as he has begun we shall have a real peace. I cannot thin kof any one lse in the world in whom we could put so much trust.

Jerome K. Jerome, Author and Dramatist.

I pray for the success of President Wilson's policy because I am convinced it is the only policy that can give the world any hope of peace.

M. Clemenceau's opposition policy of building up again from the ruins of a hundred failures that Temple of Despair which he calls the "balance of power" is the policy of a man who has forgotten nothing, who has learned nothing. M. Clemenceau's policy, supported by the blind imperialists of Italy and England, would leave Europe still a seething caldron of hate and greed.

President Wilson's policy is the only policy that can save Europe from anarchy. If it does not succeed, then the war is only just begun.

Sir John Kirk, Organizing Secretary of the Ragged School Union.

I have a deep-rooted conviction that only a league of nations can save the world from the curse of war and prevent civilization from lapsing into barbarism.

The European compact would seem to be too near to the arena of conflict to come easily to an agreement, for did not Castlereagh go to the Vienna Congress with a draft scheme in his pocket for a league of nations and find the local prejudice too strong for him?

But 3000 miles away we have a nation of 100,000,000 unhampered by tradition and unfettered by precedent, an amalgam of the old English stock, a virile, quick-witted people, with lofty ideals and democratic interests.

It has written its peaceful principles in human blood in this war, and a man has emerged imbued with the right spirit and with gifts suited to bring about this sorely needed brotherhood of nations. Can I have a stronger reason for supporting President Wilson's policy?

Ernest Rhys, Critic and Scholar.

President Wilson's ideas appeal to me because they are the genuine outcome of what one may call the plain man's politics and working philosophy, tested by the four years' strain of war and the hard problems of peace. By working them out as he has done he has become the natural representative of aims we have all been cherishing in our own predicament, and his official cares have not spoiled the common play of his sympathies.

He comes, then, as a convinced leaguer, something more than an old style American democrat, to this big question of a parliament of nations; and one knows by his writings that he was inclined long before he became President to think of the Old World and the New as a single commonwealth.

In short, one believes in him because his statesmanship seems to give him a liberal supernational interest in states and men everywhere—the United States of the world as well as the U. S. A. And we over here, at any rate, need not be anxious lest he should not carry the good old Lincoln tradition safe back home from the Paris melting pot.

Harry Jeffs, Chairman of the Brotherhood International Committee, Editor Christian World Pulpit.

The value of President Wilson's policy lies in the fact of his clear recognition of the "wholeness" of humanity. The age of antagonistic national separative Sinn Feinism is past. Humanity is not a jungle of wild beasts preying on each other, but a fellowship each member of which contributes specific values to the common good and is enriched by the gifts pooled by the other members.

The Rev. Dr. James Lindsay, M. A., B. Sc., F. R. S.

I support President Wilson's policy because of the rich potentiality it carries for greater harmony and co-operation among the nations in matters social, political, industrial and commercial. Such international relations already

How Reactionaries Demanding "Peace of Might" Caused Dissensions at Versailles

HITHERTO UNTOLD CHAPTERS FROM THE PARIS CONFERENCE

Lust of the Continental Nations, New and Old, Adjoining the Central Powers, for the Full Territorial Spoils of the War, Was Overcome Only With the Greatest Difficulty.

Britain and America Early Found a Common Understanding and Wilson Could Not Have Won France and Italy Over Without Whole-Hearted Aid of Lloyd George, Balfour, Cecil and Smuts.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, March 14.

NO true American can leave the atmosphere of the peace conference at Paris and return to the United States without a feeling of having literally left one world to get back to another—so different are the problems of European peoples from ours, so different is the attitude of their statesmen and politicians, their viewpoint on national morality, and the partnership between Governments and private business.

Notwithstanding President Wilson's insistence that a league of nations should be the keystone of the peace treaty, notwithstanding his emphasis on the humanitarian idealistic phases of the world sentiment, and his argument that something must be done at once to prevent the world from being plunged anew into a devastating war, questions of territory and money and all the numerous desires, which are derived from those two things, were constantly being forced to the front by European countries. America wanted nothing but world peace. Other Governments professed the same thing through their spokesmen, but if the world had a stenographic record of what has been said at the private conferences between the heads of Governments, it would wonder whether the peace conference at Paris was a council of peace or a consultation of victors dividing spoils. Certainly the influence of America has been a check upon the tendency which existed at the beginning to make the Paris conference nothing better than the congress of Vienna, where peoples were handed about like so much property by Princes and Kings. And it may be said in passing that in an environment of this kind the British delegation was glad to join hands with the Americans to prevent the Paris conference from patching up only territorial squabbles and levying an indemnity on a country that was to be deprived of the means of earning that indemnity.

England Cooperates With Wilson

President Wilson was successful in getting the league of nations discussed first and made a part of the peace treaty itself. He was successful in getting a constitution of the league of nations drafted, which must, of course, be amended and changed in the next few weeks to meet not merely some of the objections raised in the American Senate, but the modifications which must surely be proposed by other countries. He was able to get something concrete done in his preliminary visit because of the splendid co-operation given him by Great Britain. It is the single outstanding fact of the peace conference—England and America are working together for the common benefit of mankind.

History no doubt will give Mr. Wilson much credit for his initiative at the Peace Conference and his indefatigable labors to keep the moral tone of the affair lofty, but unprejudiced Americans who were present will unhesitatingly declare that if the peace treaty of Paris is hailed by the world as the greatest advance ever made in international ethics, the idealism and wholehearted co-operation of men like Premier Lloyd George, Secretary Balfour, Lord Robert Cecil, Gen. Smuts and others in the British delegation. British and American correspondents have been co-operating—indeed, Britain and America with all their family quarrels found themselves kinsmen after all when they touched the atmosphere at Paris.

Some Wrong Impressions of France

So pronounced is the entente between representatives of the two English-speaking democracies that certain French politicians have deemed it wise to stir up a little propaganda, both inside England and France, to the effect that France and England must go hand in hand and must not permit any outside nations to disturb their intimacy. References are made in published articles to the effect that America is far away, wants to cut down the great British navy, and that really France and England, being neighbors, must combine and stay combined, and so on. If Great Britain finds herself closer to the Unitied States at the Peace Conference than to France, it is because she prefers to support ideals which men like Sir Edward Grey and other English Liberals have for years been endeavoring to implant in European politics and because the French Government is today dominated by men who don't have the same faith in liberalism that their colleagues do.

But it is easy to give a wrong impression of France when discussing merely the small class which is temporarily in power in Paris. France is a mixture of many things. American soldiers returning from France are bitter in their criticism of French shopkeepers and merchants—but these are not representative of France. Financiers and special interests who are in league with certain political leaders and pull the strings of intricate French politics ought not to be projected as the true France.

THERE is none of the freedom which newspaper men would have felt had the conference been held in a neutral country. And that is why every now and then a threat to move the conference gets into print. Usually some delegate—not always American—gets provoked at French handling of the censorship question, and the threat is made. Conditions may improve later on, but during the months of December, January and February, the French politicians were doing more to hurt the good opinion of France which most Americans had before reaching Paris than to convince correspondents that they meant, after all, to make a people's peace.—DAVID LAWRENCE.

French Politicians Control Press

Those Socialists who embrace President Wilson as their savior, but who merely represent elements of anarchy and Bolshevism, are by no means representative of the true France any more than the politicians who keep an inspired press busy doing their bidding and keep the critical press muzzled by a censorship, notwithstanding the fact that France is supposed to be a democracy. These same politicians control the press and what can be published in criticism of the present French administration, and they have systematically opposed attempts to have a general election, though the French Parliament hasn't been before the people in nearly four years.

Unfortunately these are some of the men who talk for France at the Paris conference, but the real France is out in the villages and towns where the brave French poilu dwells. Millions of these heroic men and women survive the most terrible war in history, and no historian probably will ever be able to picture adequately the wonderful stoicism of the Frenchman who fought for his country notwithstanding the fact that he received a few cents a day, while at his side foreign troops received $30 a month. The people who bore the burdens of the war reflect the soul of France.

For them the affection of Americans can never diminish no matter what the politicians say or do, for there is a day of reckoning coming, probably after the Peace Conference is over, when distribution of the indemnity and other questions are mooted, when the French people may ask whether the bulk of the money is to go to replenish large business interests so many of which paid such negligible excess profits taxes compared to other countries during the war, or to the people whose relatives and homes were destroyed.

Present Cabinet Near Demise

The present French Cabinet will not last very long—that is the prediction of those American correspondents of long residence in France, who know French politics well. Bolshevism is not coming in France, but a sensible liberalism is bound to get control of the Government. In the meantime, the present French Administration being really fearful of Bolshevism, is taking what seems to many observers in Paris the wrong way to check it. Instead of allowing the people to recover possession of their Government, autocratic powers given for the duration of the war are tenaciously held. Like certain American Cabinet officials, these men forget that the war was supposed to safeguard democracy and not diminish the working of its fundamental institutions.

Take the attitude of the present French Government toward freedom of the press, which is as good a test of democracy as can be offered. Although declaring that there is no censorship on outgoing dispatches, a strict censorship is maintained on everything printed in France. Even newspapers published in the English language, like the American edition of the London Daily Mail or the Paris editions of the New York Herald and Chicago Tribune, are subject to censorship.

All the dispatches of the American correspondents are read by French censors. Assurances are given that they are not in any way deleted or delayed, but the French censors read them just the same. It's like having someone over your shoulder all the time.

Some Methods of Censorship.

On one conspicuous occasion Premier Clemenceau had in his hand a copy of a dispatch sent by an American correspondent and discussed it with President Wilson before the message was permitted to go to America. How many more received that treatment can only be conjectured. The manner in which the French justify their censorship, is in effect simply to distinguish between military and political matters. And the American delegation at the peace conference hasn't had the gumption to make protest or to order the American military censors at the Bourse in Paris to cease reading outgoing dispatches.

As it works out, the French Government permits Paris newspapers to publish insidious attacks on President Wilson and to print conspicuously reports reflecting on the behavior of American troops. Not long ago one of the Paris newspapers published a report that American soldiers during the month of December had committed 34 murders, several hundred assaults, and other crimes in Paris. Also it has persistently circulated throughout Paris that an American officer had killed a French officer and had been himself shot by another in a brawl just around the corner from the American peace mission's headquarters.

Untruths Printed About Americans.

Neither the report of the murders nor the brawl was true, and Gen. Pershing himself has since issued a denial and a statement of facts. So the French censorship, which so many French officials have attempted to justify to me on the ground that it is neccesary to prevent attacks on their allies by irresponsible newspapers, didn't work out at all in that direction, and if the truth were told by the American mission it would have many a complaint to make at the treatment it has received by certain French newspapers said to be in the confidence of the present French administration.

The trouble about reporting the Paris peace conference is that many people there think the war is still on, and that war conditions should continue to prevail with respect to public expression. Up to the time I left Paris it was absolutely impossible for a correspondent to obtain from a French telegraph office a copy of any dispatch he had ever sent, so that he could determine, for example, what time it had been transmited, or whether it had been tampered with. All information of this sort was refused by order of the French Government. Many correspondents felt intimidated by the situation. Others found themselves called to book by the French in various ways whenever they endeavored to speak in criticism of French proposals.

EVERYTHING A LUXURY AT PRICES IN FRANCE

Butter and Eggs $2, Cheese 90 Cents, Cheap Suit $50, Shoes $14, Soap 30 Cents.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Americans are cheerfully paying the exorbitant prices charged them for necessities in France, while the natives pay and groan, declared an Associated Press correspondent who has been making an investigation of French high cost of living. Three American newspaper men recently paid $2 for a taxicab ride that the taximeter showed should cost about 70 cents. A meal without wine for the three hungry scribes cost $20. The following figures show the difference between the prices now prevailing in France and those of the ante-war days.

Butter, $2 a pound against 30 cents before the war; eggs, $2 a dozen versus 22 cents, and vegetables ranging from 14 to 50 cents a pound could be obtained for 4, 5 and 6 cents previous to the war. Cheese has advanced from 40 cents to 90 coffee from 40 cents to $1.90. Meat has advanced 300 per cent; chickens, which were 60 cents are now $2.

Soap 30 Cents a Cake.

The cheapest business suit cannot be obtained under $50, to which must be added $10 as a luxury tax. Silk stockings sell for $3 a pair and one must be careful not to walk through them on the first day, especially when the $14 pair of shoes which one is wearing absorb dampness like a $4 sponge. Washing comes high with soap at 30 cents a cake, and a bath is a luxury.

M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador at Washington, has recently returned after a long absence. The collars for which he used to pay 13 francs ($2) the dozen now are 39 francs 50 in the same great shop at which he has been trading 20 years, and his 16-franc hat has mounted to 40 ($8).

$2 Steak in $4 Frying Pan.

Frying a $2 steak for two in a $4 sauce pan is a privilege enjoyed only by the rich, and a glass of beer at 20 cents plus a 5-cent tip to the waiter, tastes very bitter to a thirsty wayfarer.

The laboring class at one time was eating much rice. But lately that commodity reached figures out of proportion to the salaries of the workingman.

A few days ago Food Minister Boret caused the arrest of speculators who were offering rice for sale at 40 cents per pound. It turned out that the rice had been obtained from the Food Ministry at the legal price of 10 cents a pound. But it had had a circuitous journey before reaching the consumer, passing through six alleged brokers who in turn levied a percentage on the rice. They were each fined 200 francs and costs.

WHAT THE BRITISH LEADERS THINK OF PRESIDENT WILSON

obtain, to a considerable extent in things scientific, artistic, philosophical and literary.

Such a league can subsist only on a basis of international morality, and a perfect international morality cannot be artificially made, least of all in a moment. Good intentions, said Emerson, clothe with sudden power. But not even good intentions will make international realization swift.

A serious and deliberate attempt to realize the ideal, even at the cost of some elements of sacrifice, may prove great gain and a large step forward.

A. G. G. Gardiner, Editor of the Daily News.

I support President Wilson's policy because, having won the war, I desire the allies to win the peace. The alternative to the President's policy is a new competition in armaments and more and worse wars.

The world has the choice of cementing itself into a co-operative concern or returning to the cutthroat competitive system. It must plump solid for the President if anything like civilization is to survive.

Robert Smillie, President of Miners' Federation of Great Britain.

I support President Wilson's policy because I am desirous of seeing a worldwide and lasting peace in which the peoples of the earth may combine in the interests of humanity to create a state of matters in which they will be able to advance toward civilization in its highest sense.

I feel that President Wilson is more in earnest in this desire than any of the diplomats who are representing the other nations at the peace conference.

Israel Zangwill, Author.

I support President Wilson's policy because he supports mine. The ideas with which his name has become associated may be found in my play, "The War God," and my essay, "The War Devil," written before the war and before Wilson was even heard of in England.

Whether President Wilson is, however, adequately supporting my policy has yet to be seen. He announced with great cocksuredness that the pacifists did not know how to get peace, but that he did: that his heart sympathized with them, but that his head was stronger than theirs. I can only hope that so it will prove.

Havelock Ellis, Scientist and Author.

I support President Wilson because I regard him as the most statesmanlike of the leaders at present in view and because I consider that his policy, as originally laid down, is most likely to lead to a reconciliation of nations and the peaceful development of mankind generally.

Plant!

Nature's factory whistle is blowing. Can't you hear it? It is the morning song of the robin calling to you to start your garden. The earth is waking. The first green tints of growing things suggest messes of tender peas; bunches of spicy, baby radishes and onions, new beans, spinach, chard and tomatoes; fresh, crisp lettuce; little salmon-pink carrots and sweet, crimson beets and juicy corn, to say nothing of flowers in profusion. The work shop is waiting. The old garden patch is itching for the spading fork and hoe. At a nearby dealer's store, already feeling the urge to grow, are your packets of

I Blame the Woman Who Lets a Man Drink, Says Druggist Brown

Of Cleveland. He Guarantees a Simple Home Treatment Given Without the Knowledge of the Drinker.

No wife has a right to let her husband drink; for alcoholism is a disease and a drunkard is a sick man, says Druggist Brown of Cleveland. A woman can cure this disease—stop a drinking husband in a few weeks for half what he would spend on liquor in the same time. The habit can be broken and the disease cured. Thousands of cases prove it, and every community has its reformed drunkard. Druggist Brown says the right time to stop the drink habit is at its beginning. Left to run its course it will deaden the fine sensibilities of the man you love. Begin with the first whiff of liquor on his breath, but do not despair if he has already gone from bad to worse until he has become a rum-soaked sot.

Druggist Brown knows the curse of strong drink, for he himself has been a victim. A loving sister, without his knowledge, rescued him from the brink of a drunkard's grave, and for 10 years kept her secret. She saved him from drink—rescued him from his own depraved, besotted self by giving him a secret remedy, the formula of an old European chemist. To pay his debt to her and to help other victims out of the murk and mire he has made the formula public.

Druggists everywhere dispense it daily as Prepared Tescum Powders, put up in doses. Get it of your own druggist and drop a powder twice a day in tea, coffee, milk or other drink. Soon liquor does not taste the same, the craving for it disappears, and lo! one more drunkard has been saved and knows not when or why he lost his taste for drink.

Warning Note: Tescum should be given only when it is desirable to destroy all taste for alcohol and all pleasure in its use. Those who encourage moderate drinking should not give it until the so-called moderate drinker reaches the danger line, as most of them do in time. Druggist Brown has such confidence in Tescum Powders that he personally guarantees results or he will refund out of his own pocket the price charged by the dispensing druggist. It is sold by Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Wolff-Wilson and other druggists.—ADV.

made of wheat

The total acreage of this year's wheat crop is estimated at 70,000,000 acres.

wheat is plentiful

200,000,000 Bushels—Surplus

Last year the cry was—save wheat! An edict prompted by a threatened famine. This year the situation is exactly reversed. We are confronted with an enormous surplus!

A comparison of figures of last year with this year's estimated crop reports shows a startling contrast:—

Winter Wheat,	623,000,000	Bushels
Spring Wheat,	295,000,000	Bushels
Total,	918,000,000	Bushels
1919
Winter Wheat,	735,000,000	Bushels
Spring Wheat,	340,000,000	Bushels
Total,	1,075,000,000	Bushels

Estimating on the basis of a fair average yield from the acreage planted, plus the amount of wheat on hand; and making liberal allowance for all normal domestic requirements, there will remain an approximate excess of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat!

Eat more wheat. It is economical, the cheapest food in the world. Also, because an increased consumption of wheat will tend materially toward a reduction of taxes, by relieving the government of a serious burden.

THE lid is off! The ban is lifted. Conditions have changed—the great need has passed. All government restrictions are removed on wheat. You may eat all you like—all you want—all you need!

Because we shall have wheat in abundance. More than we can mill. More than we can market. More than we can send abroad in the ships at our command.

Hence, the edict of the day is—eat more wheat! And, mind you, there is no finer food made of wheat than macaroni. It is the nearest all-wheat food.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley says:—
"The consumption of macaroni might well be increased with advantage in both nutrition and economy."

Judged by actual comparative food values, macaroni is more nutritious than bread, meat or potatoes. One single pound package contains more bodily vigor than two pounds of beef!

Eat macaroni for economy's sake. It is all food—there is no waste. The cost is very small. You can provide a family dinner for ten cents. Use it as a substitute for meat and save money on your table expense.

Perhaps you don't know how really good macaroni is—how dainty, how tempting, how appetizing when properly prepared. It can be served in a hundred tasteful ways, ranging from very simple combinations to the most elaborately garnished epicurean delights.

For a real feast, try macaroni and chicken—or prepare it with cheese, mushrooms or tomatoes. Truly—a treat to tempt the most fanciful taste, or entice the most jaded appetite.

Eat macaroni—because it is a wheat food. Because it is most economical, nourishing and appetizing. Because it is a well balanced food, neither too heavy nor too light. It gives energy without heat.

A fitting Lenten food. A splendid summer food. A food for all times and all seasons for—Everybody!

ORDNANCE CHIEF'S TRIBUTE TO INDUSTRY

Credit for Making War Program Possible Given to Engineering and American Science.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—To American industry and engineering and American science, not to the Ordnance Corps of the regular army, belongs the credit of having evolved and made possible an ordnance program for the American Army that made victory a certainty, Major-General Clarence C. Williams, Chief of Ordnance, declares in a letter to the officers of his department retiring to civil life, made public tonight.

"It was American industry and science that were on trial," says the letter. "The 97 officers of the Ordnance Department of the old Regular Army and the 11 Government arsenals they administered could never have dominated, have won the success or caused the failure of the 5000 officers from civilian life and the 5000 private industrial plants which were incorporated in the organization for the period of the war. The enlistment in industry, equally with the draft of man-power, was a success. And for that I thank you, the administrative directors and the engineering advisers of American industry who came into the service of the Ordnance Department during the war."

No other part of the American war program carried its responsibilities and effort as to design and invention or production into so many channels, the letter says, or projected them upon so vast a scale.

Problem of Production.

"When your problem is the production of 100,000 separate components in more than 5000 different plants," it continues, "with these items ranging from feed bags and star shells to complete trains of railway artillery, the judge who can competently say what your progress has been must indeed have a profound knowledge of the field."

Gen. Williams points out that his own service took him first to France for eight months ,then back to keep the work at home under constant review.

"Of such knowledge," he adds, "I say that you did exceedingly well and that I am proud to have commanded such soldiers in this war. I say this utterly without thought of any personal responsibility for that success. The tribute it not to me. It is not to the Army Ordnance Department of the regular establishment nor to the ordnance officers of the regular army. It is to American industry and engineering, to American science."

The department, Gen. Williams says, probably "exercised direction over a greater physical power than was ever concentrated on a single purpose in the history of the world."

Attainment of Objective.

"The happy attainment of our objective in the war within 19 months gave sufficient time for the complete development of that power," he adds. "Proper strategy required the projection of the ordnance program upon a scale designed to secure an ultimate, overwhelming and continuous rate of production rather than a lesser rate of production at an earlier date.

"Obviously a housewife could buy an oven and bake six loaves of bread in less time than a bakery could be built and provision made for the needs of an entire city. But the rate of production from the housewife's oven could never feed the city.

"The ordnance objective was a rate of production adequate for an army of 5,000,000 men. We could not sacrifice production in 1920 to force a quicker but lesser rate of production in 1919. We were building to make ultimate victory absolutely certain, and there never was a moment when the ordnance program did not absolutely guarantee the ultimate defeat of Germany.

Ready to Turn on Taps.

"We stood ready, during the month the armistice was signed, to turn on the taps at full force that had been made ready to provide a flow of munitions such as no nation had ever attempted.

"The fact that the American munitions program alone was greater than that which Germany could attempt after 30 years of preparation for war is apparently little realized in this country. But I have no doubt that it was realized in Germany and that such realization substantially contributed to a victory by its reaction upon the minds of the military masters of Germany."

In closing, Gen. Williams urges the retiring officers to "retain a consciousness of this problem we have faced together" as they return to civil life, to keep in mind the realization that as scientists, they control a course of power vital to their country in time of war, and to "stand ready to return to your posts and be an influence to keep your country prepared for the transition whenever it becomes necessary."

For Safety in the Future.

"Your labor," he says, "was no less for the security of your country in the emergency now passing than for its safety in the future. For, if we happily have ended wars by the winning of this one, your contribution to that victory has given your country security, and, if war should hereafter prove unavoidable for our country, the lesson you have learned, the knowledge you have acquired in your labor, should safeguard the nation against the danger of ever again entering upon a great war without knowing how to shift industrial power quickly to war channels.

"With the ability to effect that transition quickly, with adequate provision for it made in advance, I should never fear for the safety of our country. But lack of preparedness in that respect will ever be our country's greatest weakness and gravest danger so long as possibility of war exists. Avoidance of that danger lies largely in the possibility of continuing a proper contact between the branch of the military establishment charged with provision of munitions, and the industrial world. If that contact is to be maintained, it must be largely through your interest."

The Mississippi Valley

The Business Men

"Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings. He shall not stand before mean men."—Prov. xxii, 29.

When the wildest corners of it were explored and settled—when highways of steel had reached from its center to its farthest confines—when the frontier hamlets of the early days had grown into stately cities—the Mississippi Valley came into its own.

Fitted by nature to produce everything that human beings need and desire—fitted by man to distribute those products to all the world—peopled by a race that had learned to welcome hardship and scorn distance and laugh at impossibility—the Valley lacked one essential of service.

When Mississippi Valley men organized a business, projected a railroad, developed a section or built a city they had to submit their plans to bankers whose treasure and whose heart lay east of the Alleghany Mountains.

But the era from 1890 to 1914 saw this condition gradually change until today six Federal Reserve Banks are in the Mississippi Valley—one at Minneapolis, one at Chicago, one at Kansas City, one at Dallas, one at Denver and one at St. Louis.

In 1885 the first Trust Company Law of Missouri was enacted and from 1890 on, until today business in the Valley has had its own financial servants for every phase of its development. Business credits have been ample and ready. Real estate and building loans have seconded every logical development. Municipal and corporation bond issues have been promptly and economically floated. Farm loan departments have given the producer access to the same reservoir of credit that the manufacturer and distributor can use.

Financial institutions do not create prosperity. They do not build railroads, develop new countries, construct new cities, organize new enterprises. ut they do give the impetus of capital, without which such things are difficult, even impossible. They do make it possible and they have made it possible for the men of the Mississippi Valley to do most of their financing where they do their building—to "put big things across" by themselves.

Today the great banks of the East are coming to St. Louis, and other Mississippi Valley cities, hat in hand. Some of the largest of them have representatives in St. Louis. Many of them are seeking Western ability for official positions. The Mississippi Valley has come into its own.

Our next article brings us to the days of Nineteen Seventeen, when the metal of the Mississippi Valley was tried in the crucible of war and not found wanting.

Why Gray Hair Is No Longer Necessary

New, Clean, Easy, Harmless Treatment—First Bottle Gives SATISFACTION

After having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of their customers, leading stores are recommending "Canute Water for Gray Hair" to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Famous & Barr sell it, and all questions one naturally asks are here plainly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—yes. You may use Canute Water for gray hair without the slightest fear of injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye, being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur or coal tar products of any kind—making it as harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

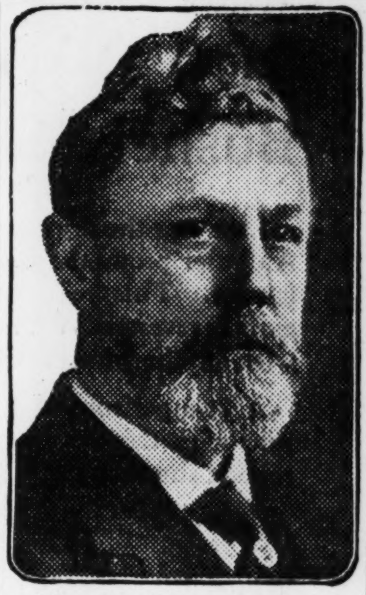
WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. Canute Water for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment — not being sticky or greasy, it restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A CRUDE DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. Canute Water is a simple method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other cause. Proof that Canute Water is not a crude dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair, while, as the reader knows, crude dyes are numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way, and simply require a retouching once every week or two as the hair grows.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become. Remember, it will only be necessary to use Canute Water for Gray Hair afterward once every week or two on the new hair that grows.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above-mentioned stores for $1.10 a bottle, or by mail direct. Friedman Canute Co., 18 East 17th st., New York City.



The Doctor's Advice
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious names will be used in any answers. The remedies can be obtained at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Mason" writes: "For years I have been taking medicine to cure constipation, liver trouble and the usual disease that comes from that source. Headaches, sallow skin, kidney trouble, dark spots before my eyes, dizzy spells and twinges of rheumatism are getting worse.

Answer: Take three-grain Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur). They are packed in sealed tubes with directions and are convenient, effective and highly curative for such ailments as arise from chronic constipation. If you are dyspeptic, also take tablets, triopeptine.

"Ed" writes: "Being past middle age and observing that my nervous system is in bad shape, I write for a prescription. I do not gain strength from my food, am weak, listless, forgetful, sleepless at times, tired and unable to act the part of a strong man of health, such as I was at one time."

Answer: Get from a well-stocked pharmacy a sealed tube of Three-Grain Cadomene Tablets, which are especially made for those needing a strong, harmless, rejuvenating tonic. Astonishing and pleasing results follow and life and hope are renewed.

"Reader" writes. "What should I do to relieve a severe case of kidney and bladder disease? Have fever, chills, pains like rheumatism and soreness in region of bladder."

Answer: For such symptoms as you describe I prescribe my favorite formula under the name of Balmwort Tablets. This is a splendid efficacious remedy for such abnormal conditions. Begin their use as per directions on each sealed tube.

"Gloria" writes. "I would like you to prescribe a good hair and scalp treatment. I am bothered with itching scalp and dandruff. My hair is faded and falling and none of the remedies I have tried have done any permanent good."

Answer: Go to your druggist and obtain a 4-oz. jar of plain yellow Minyol. Apply as per directions. The dandruff and itching are conquered with two or three applications, while it makes the hair glossy, wavy and full of intense natural color.

"Myrtle" writes: "Owing to my extreme thinness I am frequently embarrassed by slighting remarks of young people. Can you prescribe a safe remedy to increase my weight?"

Answer: I have so many gratifying reports from the users of three-grain Hypo-Nuclane Tablets that I have become to regard these valuable little tablets as a specific and prescribe them to all who are anaemic, thin, wasting, nervous and debilitated.

"Sick M. G." writes: "I have been affected for some months with rheumatism and have taken much medicine in vain. Please give prescription that will cure."

Answer: The most efficient prescription I have ever given for rheumatism is: Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, one-half ounce; comp. essence Cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid Balmwort, 1 oz.; and syrup sarsaparillia comp. 5 ozs. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and bedtime.

John R. Mc asks: "Don't you think it is wise to take medicine to reduce my weight? I weigh about 55 pounds too much."

Answer: I do think so; and a very convenient and effective flesh-reducer medicine is sold in sealed tubes with full directions for home use. It is called 5-grain Arbolone Tablets and any well-stocked pharmacy can supply them. They are essentially good.—ADVERTISEMENT.

IN THIS TREMENDOUS MARKET

Building a good name is one of the most difficult tasks in the world. Reputation for high character is, as a rule, achieved but slowly. Fortunate, indeed, is the stranger who enters a community with the commendation of one of its most respected citizens—with the support of its leader.

Imagine, if you can, a personage whose foundation in public confidence rests on three generations of intimate association with the public as a leader—who has established direct and personal connection with hundreds of thousands of people, including practically all the more important in his community—whose messages are read every day by citizens of five great commonwealths, and have been read daily three score and ten years.

Imagine this personage lending his mighty influence to your business—aiding you with his hard won prestige to build your good name with his friends.

That is what The Chicago Tribune offers to worthy advertisers. Chicago and its surrounding territory constitute the most prosperous section in the United States—and therefore in the world. Within three hundred miles of Chicago is an economic entity, a logical unit for merchandising purposes, which has no peer on earth. In this favored region (rich in manufactures, agriculture, stock raising, mining, commerce) The Chicago Tribune wields an amazing influence—reaches one family in five—sways public opinion not only politically but also in daily buying habits.

Population of the Chicago Territory

State	White Population
Illinois	6,024,942
Indiana	2,754,042
Iowa	2,203,236
Michigan	3,028,353
Wisconsin	2,485,678
Total	16,496,251

—this is a total white population twice as great as the population of Canada.

—twice that of the six states of New England.

—approximately half that of England, France or Italy.

—more than the combined total of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland.

—more that the entire white population of the eleven southern states from Virginia to Texas.

A conception of how great this population really is is gained from an analysis of one of its component parts—the City of Chicago—which has a population half that of the entire continent of Australia. Within the 200 square miles of Chicago are to be found approximately 200,000 more people than dwell in the 71,000 square miles of the following seven states which extend two abreast from Canada to Mexico:

Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico.

Not only has nature showered blessings richly on this territory, but all natural advantages are being fully developed. It is also notable that the development is being made by those who live in this territory. The tremendous volume of wealth annually created by the soil and the people of the Chicago territory is possessed or spent by those people.

This means a high average prosperity, which was sharply evidenced by subscriptions to Liberty Bonds. The Seventh Federal Reserve District, of which Chicago is the center, contains only 14% of the population of the United States, but furnished 19% of subscribers to Liberty Bonds.

A group of millionaires does not make a rich community, but hundreds of counties, each one capable of creating millions of dollars' worth of new wealth each year, do make a truly rich community and entirely desirable market.

Buying Power in Chicago Territory

These few big facts stand out when considering the buying power of The Chicago Territory.

Although The Chicago Territory occupies only one-eleventh of the area of the United States and has one-sixth of the population, it produces one-fifth of the crops, one-fifth of the manufactures and has one-fifth of the total wealth of the nation.

The buying power of The Chicago Territory is due, primarily, to these fundamental, enduring advantages:

Rich soil.
Ideal climate for crops.
Coal, iron and copper mines.
Oil and gas wells.
Clay, granite, limestone, etc.
Lake and river fisheries.
A central location.

Wealth of the five states of the Chicago Territory, as compared with the total wealth of the United States:

The Chicago Territory	$ 38,462,334,852
Remaining 43 states and District of Columbia	139,276,736,238
Total for United States	187,739,071,090
Percentage in the Chicago Territory	20½%

The increased prosperity of this section during the past two years is indicated by the following comparison of the 1916 crop with the 1918 crop, showing an increase of almost 70%.

	1916 Crop	1918 Crop
Iowa	$516,658,000	$821,920,000
Illinois	478,102,000	879,679,000
Indiana	285,384,000	507,563,000
Wisconsin	254,599,006	417,888,000
Michigan	233,748,000	336,669,000
Total	$1,768,491,000	$2,963,719,000

Chicago's pre-eminence as a food metropolis of the world is quite generally recognized, but the extent of general manufacturing in Chicago and the surrounding territory is sometimes not appreciated. Products manufactured in Chicago during the year 1918 approximated $4,000,000,000 in value, and an even greater amount was produced by the several thousand factories scattered through the five states of The Chicago Territory.

In 80 cities of more than 10,000 population, all located within 200 miles of Chicago, the census of manufactures of 1914 listed more than 10,000 factories. The Chicago Tribune reaches two-fifths of the total number of families in these 80 manufacturing cities, and in each one reaches the type of people indicated by the circulation analysis of Mason City, Iowa, given on this page.

Chicago as a Jobbing Center

Chicago is unquestionably the most remarkable distributing center in the United States. From Chicago railroads radiate like the spokes from the hub of a wheel to every corner of the nation. Under the direction of the Chicago Association of Commerce the most astonishing and efficient package car system in the world has been instituted. Freight is forwarded from all over the Central West to Chicago to be sent throughout the Union in these package cars. By means of them Chicago wholesalers and manufacturers are able to reach cities distant from Chicago and close to New York much quicker than they can be reached from New York.

For hundreds of miles around Chicago all business faces this city. No railroad runs through Chicago; every one that touches the city terminates here, making it by far the greatest railroad center in the whole world.

Chicago Tribune Merchandising Service

The keynote of the Merchandising Service which has made The Chicago Tribune famous as a pioneer in this line is found in the following statement of policy:

> The Chicago Tribune considers it a waste of money to advertise a product distributed through the retail and jobbing trade until that trade has been supplied with the merchandise to take care of the consumer when that demand is created.

Basing every bit of advice and every exercise of judgment upon a vast accumulation of intensive and practical information, The Chicago Tribune is prepared to guide, to direct, to supervise every detail of an advertising and sales campaign in the Chicago territory. Chicago Tribune advertising plus this service constitutes a selling force practically irresistible.

All the above people buy The Chicago Tribune only because they want to read it. The entire subscription list of The Chicago Daily Tribune is volunteer, paid in advance, absolutely unsolicited in any way.

There are thousands of towns and cities like Chrisman where staunch partisans of The Chicago Tribune dominate highly desirable markets.

The economy of Chicago Tribune advertising is indicated by the fact that the 120 leading families in this prosperous, desirable community can be reached through The Chicago Daily Tribune with a 20,000 line campaign at a proportionate cost of $2.35.

Mason City, Iowa

Inquiries among 52 Chicago Tribune readers in Mason City elicited the information that 39 of them visit Chicago once a year or oftener. Their tastes are indicated to some extent by the fact that among them the Cosmopolitan has only one reader, as against The Century, 3; Harper's 6; Atlantic, 9; National Geographic, 9; Literary Digest, 14; Saturday Evening Post, 23.

Did your Child wake up Cross, Bilious or Feverish?

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated, cleanse the liver and bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if the tongue is coated; this is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels need attention at once.

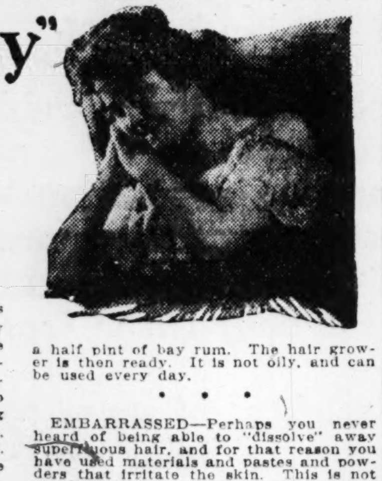
When listless, pale, feverish, "stuffy" with cold, throat sore; when the child has tainted breath and doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, or has stomach-ache or diarrhea, remember a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the waste-matter, sour bile and fermenting food clogged in the bowels pass out of the system, and you have a healthy and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine.

Look for name "California." Accept no Fig Syrup but "California." —ADV.

"A Skin Like a Venus? It's Really Easy"



A Simple Formula That Works Wonders on Any Skin. Also a New Way to Remove Wrinkles That Rarely Fails.

By Valeska Suratt

WHAT I want to give you here is something that is nearest to every woman's heart—the way to bring the complexion to a supreme and unblemished loveliness. After you have accomplished the result you will say to yourself, "I never thought such a thing possible." First and most important, you should make the cream yourself. You cannot get the same richness, the same ingredients if you do not. Otherwise I would not suggest it. Now, just get a one-ounce package of zintone for about fifty cents from your druggist, and mix the contents with two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in a pint of water. The cream will then be ready, and this will make much more cream than you can get already prepared in the stores, and you will be assured, moreover, that the results will be achieved quickly. You will lose all blemishes and your skin will be like a lily.

MISS S. P. G.—You must bear in mind that the scalp is constantly having formed upon it a film of grease and scale which it is almost impossible for soap to remove. You need something to dissolve away these accumulations, and if you will dissolve a teaspoonful of eggol in a half cup of water and use as a head wash you will find your scalp and hair will be cleaner than ever before, and your hair will take on a very marked sheen of vigor and health. You can get enough eggol for twenty-five cents to last for over a dozen shampoos.

SHOWERS—There are many cases I know of where the length of the hair was increased very perceptibly within a month by the use of the formula given below. The ingredients given here are very readily absorbed by the hair roots, and a quick result is obtained. Bald spots will fill in rapidly and the hair will stop falling. You mix one ounce of betaquinol, which you get from the drug store in the original package for about fifty cents, with a half pint of water and a half pint of bay rum. The hair grower is then ready. It is not oily, and can be used every day.

EMBARRASSED—Perhaps you never heard of being able to "dissolve" away superfluous hair, and for that reason you have used materials and pastes and powders that irritate the skin. This is not at all necessary. A little sulfo solution applied to the hairs to be removed makes them dissolve away, and they can then be rubbed off completely, leaving the skin just as though it had never been afflicted with superfluous hair. It is delightful, and never reddens or irritates. The sulfo solution will cost about a dollar at drug stores.

MRS. H. O. A.—Here is a very important discovery. It is a powerful skin bracer. As the texture of the skin is made finer, the tissue "braces up," of course, and the result is that flabbiness of the skin is corrected. The result is that wrinkles very quickly leave, and crow's-feet entirely disappear. The difference which this can make in your appearance is obvious. With the contents of a two-ounce package of eptol, mix one tablespoonful of glycerine in a half pint of water. You do not need to use anything else at all for wrinkles, and you will soon see that what I say will come true.

MRS. D. O.—All you have to do is to apply a little neroxin on a wet cloth and rub the blackheads with this. In a few minutes you will see that the blackheads will be entirely gone. This sounds impossible, but is nevertheless true. You can prove it in a few minutes. The neroxin costs about fifty cents at the drug store.

• • •

AWFUL—Liquids applied to the armpits for excessive perspiration are not as effective as the simple, bland powder, hydrolized talc, which can be obtained at the drug store for fifty cents. It is soothing, controls the perspiration and destroys all odors completely.

• • •

MISS G. D. T.—I know you never tried such a fine and exquisite face powder, and one so free from all chalkiness, as the one I had made up of my own, "Valeska Suratt Face Powder," sold at drug stores now for fifty cents in any tint. Just try it.—ADVERTISEMENT.

"What Will Save His Hair?" Quick Action Needed

But It Can Be Done Says Man of Much Hair Knowledge—A Simple Inexpensive Home Treatment

Thin-Haired Men Urged Not to Delay. Parisian Sage Is Just What Is Needed.

Thousands of men and women are growing hairless every day and don't know the reason why. This is indeed a pity, says a specialist, because loss of hair usually comes from neglect.

Few of us get bald in a day, and we all have ample warning when our hair is thinning out.

Parisian Sage is a most efficient hair invigorator, but to immediately stop any further loss of hair and quickly start a new growth, it must be rubbed into the scalp so the starved hair roots can really absorb it and get the vital stimulation so badly needed. You will surely be delighted with the first application, for your hair and scalp will look and feel 100 per cent better.

Parisian Sage is not expensive. It's a scientific preparation that supplies all hair needs—a clean, non-sticky, antiseptic liquid that is sold at drug and toilet counters everywhere with guarantee to give you perfect satisfaction or money refunded.

Good-looking hair is half the battle in any man's or woman's personal appearance. Neglect means dull, thin, lifeless hair and finally baldness, while a little attention now insures thick and lustrous hair for years to come. No matter what your hair troubles, try a Parisian Sage massage tonight—you will not be disappointed.—ADVERTISEMENT.

STORIES TOLD OF JUDGE PHILIPS, LAWYER, SOLDIER

Spent 37 of His 84 Years on Bench and Retired at 75, Sorry He Ever Had Accepted Public Office.

SAVED FRANK JAMES IN MURDER TRIAL

Was Law Partner of Senator Vest—Judge Dyer, Lifelong Friend, Recalls Incidents of His Wit, Kindness and Severity.

The funeral of former Judge John F. Philips, who died suddenly Thursday at the home of Col. S. W. Fordyce near Hot Springs, Ark., will be held this afternoon at Kansas City, where he resided.

Judge Philips was the principal speaker a week ago last night at the dinner of the Pike County Colony in St. Louis at the Planters Hotel.

In introducing him, Judge David P. Dyer of the United States District Court in St. Louis, told the following anecdote:

"In 1905, Judge Philips, then on the United States District bench in Kansas City, reached the age of retirement (he was 84 at his death), but instead of retiring he continued to hold his judgeship. Candidates who hoped to succeed him waited a time, and then grew impatient. One bolder than the others, and knowing that Judge Dyer was an old friend of Judge Philips, asked him to approach Judge Philips judiciously and find out if he could, when Philips intended to retire. Judge Dyer went to Philips and related the request of the candidate, naming him.

"Tell the ——— ——— I'll retire when I get good and ready,' Philips said, and he continued to hold the office for five years longer."

Lawyer, Soldier and Judge.

Judge Dyer, after receiving the news of Philips' death, related other incidents in his career, which was one of prominence as a lawyer, judge and soldier.

"Judge Philips was holding court in Springfield, Mo."' Judge Dyer said, "when a man who had been adjudged guilty of cutting timber from Government land came before him for sentence. The convicted man was inclined to be 'fresh,' and a 'smart Alec.'

"'I fine you $100,' Judge Philips began.

"'That's all right, Judge,' the prisoner said, 'I've got the $100 in my pants' pocket.

"'And six months in jail,' Judge Philips concluded. 'Have you got that in your pants' pocket, too?'"

Judge Philips was known to be very severe with convicted men whose crime commanded none of the sympathy he was inclined to extend to wrongdoers in extenuating circumstances. On one occasion, a convicted prisoner was brought before him.

"My man," Judge Philips began. "Do you realize the enormity of your crime? Do you know that I can sentence you to be hanged? Do you realize what you have done? You could be hanged, I say, and I do now sentence you to be hanged by the neck until you are dead."

One of his epigrams delivered from the bench which became much quoted was made in connection with a lawyer's motion for an entry of nunc pro tunc. "I see your nunc, all right," Philips remarked, "but where's your tunc?"

The Indian Understood.

On another occasion he was hearing a bootlegging case in which the chief witness was an Indian who professed ignorance of English. After several attempts to get replies, Judge Philips turned to the Marshal and said: "Take this Indian out and shoot him."

"Me understand," broke in the Indian.

Judge Philips was a recognized orator of that school of the past of which he was one of the few remaining exponents. Judge Dyer said yesterday that after listening to Philip's speech Saturday night, former Federal Judge Henry S. Priest came to him and said that the peroration was the finest he had heard in St. Louis. It follows:

"While with the poetic vision we may take in the whole circle of the sun and the course of civilization and see with interested eye the sign of freedom and the white panel of peace both in the Occident and the Orient, we should never forget for one moment that we have a charge to keep, committed to us from our forefathers, builders of this republic, and that is to see that the genius of independence shall sit, calm and serene, secure and immovable, upon her mountain fastness of freedom, holding in one hand the olive branch of peace and in the other the metor flash and thunderbolt of reluctant and righteous war. There may she sit forever, the world's best example of a self-governed and law-controlled people, with her highest ideal, domestic virtue and her glory, patriotic devotion."

In 1861 Convention.

Philips was the last surviving member of the constitutional convention of 1861, which voted Missouri a loyal State to the Union. Immediately after casting his vote for the North, Philips and Thomas Critten-

What Makes Men of Blood and Iron? Do You Know Any of These People?

Ignace Jan Paderewski, Pianist and Nation Maker
United States Judge G. W. Atkinson, Former Governor
Dr. George H. Baker, Former Hospital Physician and Surgeon
Hon. Anthony Caminetti, United States Commissioner of Immigration
Former U. S. Senator Wm. E. Mason, Now Congressman from Illinois

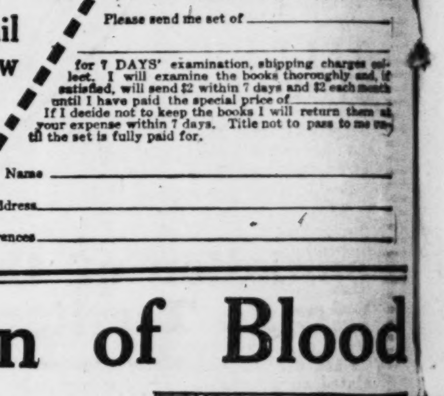
Read What They Say About Nuxated Iron

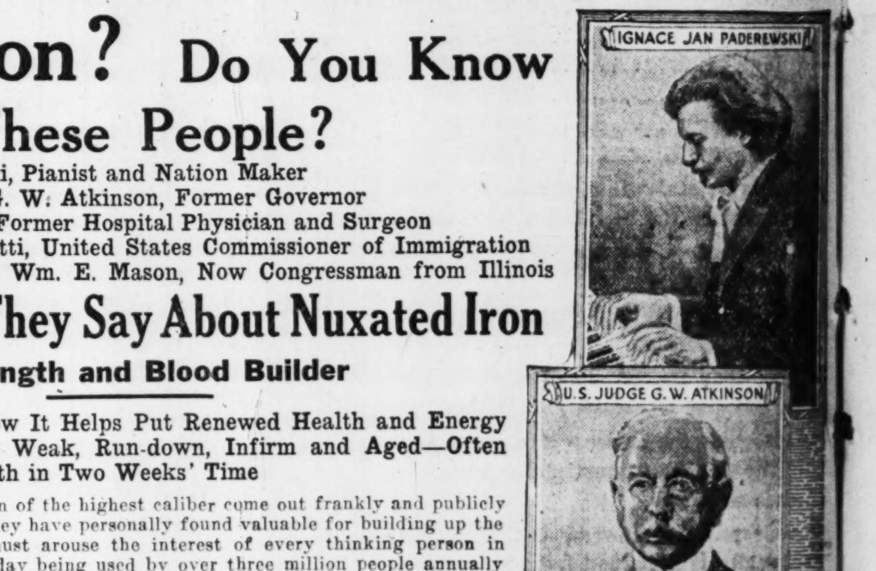
As a Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder



Physician Explains How It Helps Put Renewed Health and Energy Into the Veins of the Weak, Run-down, Infirm and Aged—Often Increases Their Strength in Two Weeks' Time

When widely known men of the highest caliber come out frankly and publicly endorse a product which they have personally found valuable for building up the health and strength, it must arouse the interest of every thinking person in Nuxated Iron, which is today being used by over three million people annually to help create red blood, power and endurance

Dr. T. Alphonsus Wallace, a physician of many years' experience and formerly of the British Naval Medical Service, says: "It is the men of blood and iron—on a par with the war-hardened fellows returning from camp and fields—who will forge ahead in the business and political life of the country today.



"Living in the open, eating coarse foods and leading regular lives have made blood rich in iron for these strong, healthy, energetic specimens of manhood. But no such opportunity for building up their health is open to thousands of men and women in civil life whose wearing tasks and iron-impoverished food sap their energy and strength, make them weak, anaemic and run-down and often cause their blood to literally starve for want of iron. Without iron there can be no strong, red-blooded men or healthy, rosy-cheeked women, and unless this strength-giving iron is obtained from the foods we eat, it must be supplied in some form that is easily absorbed and assimilated. For this purpose I always recommend organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which I have used so successfully both in civil life and for convalescing soldiers that I am absolutely convinced of its effectiveness for helping to build red-blood, strength and endurance."

Of great importance to the public should be the strong indorsement of Nuxated Iron as a preparation of great merit as a tonic and blood builder given by former U. S. Senator William E. Mason, who has the distinction of being one of the really big men of the nation. His championship of Pure Food and Drugs legislation, his fight for the rural free delivery system, and his strong advocacy of all bills favoring labor has made him a national figure and endeared him to the hearts of the working man and the great masses of people. Senator Mason says: "I have often said I would never recommend medicine of any kind. I believe that the doctor's place. However, after the hardest political campaign of my life, without a chance for a vacation, I had been starting to court every morning with that horrible, tired feeling one cannot describe. I was advised to try Nuxated Iron. As a pioneer in the pure food and drug legislation, I was at first loath to try an advertised remedy, but after advising with one of my medical friends, I gave it a test. The results have been so beneficial in my own case I made up my mind to let my friends know about it, and you are at liberty to publish this statement if you so desire. I am now 65 years of age and I feel that a remedy which will build up the strength and increase the power of endurance of one at my age should be known to the world."

Equally interesting is the opinion of Judge G. W. Atkinson of the United States Court of Claims, at Washington, who for twenty years has been in the public service as Judge, Governor, Member of Congress and U. S. District Attorney. He says: "It is without hesitation that I recommend Nuxated Iron to persons who in the stress of physical or mental labors have permitted the system to become debilitated, the body exhausted or the nerves run down. It has restored my appetite and my strength. I feel that I have dropped off the burden of months of toil in the few weeks that I have been following the very simple directions for the use of Nuxated Iron."

Ignace Jan Paderewski, one of the greatest musical geniuses of the age, at a time when his untiring work for Poland overtaxed his strength and impaired his health had recourse to Nuxated Iron to help rebuild his wasted forces and restore his old-time health and strength. He says: "I am using Nuxated Iron very frequently and consider it as an excellent tonic." With the strain imposed by two years of almost ceaseless work in the cause of his fatherland it is easily understood why he sought the sustaining benefit of Nuxated Iron.

Then, there is United States Commissioner of Immigration, Hon. Anthony Caminetti, who, despite his 64 years and a life which calls him to all parts of the country in all climates and all seasons, is today more active and alert than many a younger man would be in meeting the strain of his official duties.

Commissioner Caminetti says: "In the heat of summer and the rigor of winter and the debilitating weeks of springtime I have used Nuxated Iron with unvarying success and satisfaction. After weeks of busiest confinement to office duties, I find in Nuxated Iron the true tonic qualities which help bring one's physical being to that state of fitness which is the desire of every healthy minded man or woman. Nuxated Iron I recommend to whoever feels the need of a tonic restorative for debilitation, exhaustion and overwork."

In commenting upon the probability of building up a stronger race of people by increasing the supply of iron in their blood, Dr. George H. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon, Monmouth Memorial Hospital of New Jersey, says: "Iron is absolutely necessary to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. Refined foods and modern methods of cooking have robbed us of much of the iron which Nature intended we should receive. For supplying this deficiency and increasing the red corpuscles, I know of nothing more effective than organic iron—Nuxated Iron. From a careful examination of the formula and my own tests of Nuxated Iron I feel convinced that it is a preparation which any physician can take himself or prescribe for his patients with the utmost confidence of obtaining highly beneficial and satisfactory results." The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually as a tonic, strength and blood builder is in itself an evidence of the tremendous public confidence and I am convinced that if others would take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run-down it would help make a nation of stronger, healthier men and women.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is recommended above, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderlee Drug Co., Koeffer Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Store Co. and all other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

DRINK WATER TO AVOID SICKNESS SAYS AN AUTHORITY

Glass of hot water before breakfast daily keeps the doctor away.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, bile and poisonous toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food in the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—ADV.

TELLS HOW TO STOP A BAD COUGH

Surprising results from this famous old home-made syrup. Easily prepared and costs little.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SURE WAY TO GET RID OF DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—ADV.

STORIES TOLD OF JUDGE PHILIPS, LAWYER, SOLDIER

den organized the Seventh Missouri Cavalry and led it through the war. When fighting ceased, Philips and the late United States Senator Vest became law partners, continuing the firm until each was elected to Congress, Philips to the House, Vest to the Senate.

His retirement from the bench in 1910 marked his thirty-seventh year as a Judge in State and Federal courts. He remarked that if he had his life to live over he would not accept public office, because the honor was not worth the criticism.

Philips, while a member of the Supreme Court Commission, defended and obtained the acquittal of Frank James, notorious bandit, on a charge of murder in Gallatin, Mo. His address to the jury on that occasion is considered one of his masterpieces. Toward its end he referred to the public clamor for the hanging of James.

"Before I take my seat, gentlemen," he said, "allow me to speak a word of warning and courage. I am mindful of how potential is that which we call public sentiment. Sometimes it is hopeful and curative in the body politic. Then again, it is morbid and vicious. Sometimes it is honest, just and brave. And then, too often, it is hollow, rotten, ignorant and cowardly. You will be told that the good name of Missouri it at stake.

"I yield to no man in my attachment to Missouri. My people, of my blood, stood by its cradle when it was born. With rifle they fought back the savage, trampled down the wild briar and bull nettles, and blazed out the paths that have led to her present splendid civilization. On her generous bosom I was cradled. Her honor and glory are as dear to me as the memory of the sainted father and mother who sleep beneath her sod. I am proud of the State, her peacefulness, her laws, her patriotism.

"The most lawless and recreant men in the State are the miserable politicians and editors who malign and slander her good name. I do not think it necessary, in order to appease them, or the land agents, or the long-haired men and short-haired women who imagine themselves the satellites of higher civilization, to attend the star of empire in its westward flight, that one day out of every seven should be set aside by executive proclamation for the hanging of an old Missourian.

"Judicial Murder."

"To convict this man because some town politician or public clamor demands would not only be cowardice, but judicial murder. The men who cry out for the life of the so-called outlaw, no matter what the proof or the law, are themselves outlaws and demons. This courthouse is a temple of justice. The voice of clamor, the breath of prejudice, must not enter here. You are sworn sentinels on guard at its portals. Do your duty. Stand, and stand for ever on your oath. Remember that after all, the true heroes of this world are its moral heroes. The Aztec who can tear out his heart and fling it, while still palpitating, as an offering to his god, is simply an untaught barbarian. The soldier who can march to the cannon's mouth, the fireman who can mount his ladder wreathed in flames, exhibit splendid courage. The man who can die for truth or face the frowning, mad, unappeasable multitude and stand immovable for the right is grander and braver than all other.

"Be brave and manly. If you err, let it be on the side of mercy. It is god-like to be merciful; it is hellish to be revengeful."

GERMANS IN BELGIUM CAN'T STAY AND CAN'T GET OUT

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 26.—Despite the passing of a law providing for the expulsion of enemy subjects from Belgium, numerous German civilians are often seen walking the streets of this city and other large cities in Belgium. While the law went into effect more than a month ago, the Belgian Government is experiencing difficulty in getting the enemy civilians out of the country.

Minister of Justice Vandervelde said, in the Chamber of Deputies recently: "In times of peace undesirables are escorted to their frontier but since the signing of the armistice the allied General Staff had refused absolutely to allow Germans to pass through the zone of occupation. Holland permits them to go through the country, but not singly. Groups only are allowed in transit. At present one train of undesirables is leaving daily. Beginning Feb. 23, two trains will leave for Holland daily, carrying an average of 1200 Germans every day from Belgium."

The case of German subjects who have resided in Belgium for long years, have married Belgian women and whose sons have fought against the Germans, is sad. Under the terms of the law they should be expelled along with the others, as they have remained enemy subjects. Vandervelde said, however, "It is impossible for me to send that class of Germans out of the country."

Best Treatment for Catarrh, Croup, Coughs, and Colds

Guaranteed by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. No Stomach Dosing.

HYOMEI INHALER

Breathe HYOMEI for all diseases of the breathing organs. It is guaranteed.

In case of croup, which is very common in children, send for a doctor at once. In the meantime pour 30 drops of HYOMEI into a bowl of boiling water and hold the child's head over it; covered with a towel or cloth so that only the air filled with HYOMEI vapor is breathed.

This treatment has saved many a child's life and mothers of croupy children should always have HYOMEI on hand.

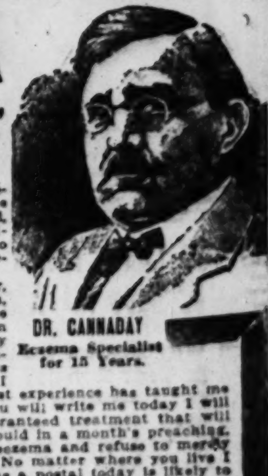
For coughs, colds and catarrh, breathing HYOMEI through the inhaler is usually sufficient.

Many people however, use the HYOMEI vapor treatment in conjunction with the inhaler.

The vapor treatment is best taken just before going to bed; it only takes about five minutes' time. Pour a teaspoonful of HYOMEI into a bowl three-quarters full of boiling water, cover head and bowl with towel, and breathe the vapor that arises deep into the lungs. By this method many a hard cold has been broken up overnight. A HYOMEI outfit which consists of a bottle of HYOMEI and a hard rubber pocket inhaler, costs $1.15 at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and druggists everywhere. Extra bottles if afterward needed cost only 60c.—ADV.

ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.



DR. CANNADAY
Eczema Specialist for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now; your very life may be at stake.

For Constipation! Physic Purge or Laxative?

Everyone now and then becomes constipated, and millions are chronically in that condition. The perplexing question arises—what to use.

Purgatives and cathartics are drastic and usually cause a reaction. Saline waters are rapid in action but do no more than empty the bowels.

Just as certain an effect, and certainly a much more pleasant one, can be obtained by the use of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin sold by druggists under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It acts gently, without griping. It is an especially ideal medicine for children, women, old people and others who find purges too powerful.

Only a teaspoonful is required, and by morning the movement is free and complete. A bottle in the house is insurance for the whole family against constipation, indigestion, headaches, flatulency and other digestive ills.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 26 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong—According to Dr. Lewis

Guaranteed to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription, and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now, and have discarded my long-distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is sold in this city by the leading druggists, including Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Are you tormented by Neuralgia, Lumbago, Sciatica or any of those aches that require a counter-irritant? Then let the soothing, warming application of Sloan's Liniment stop the pain by drawing the blood away from the congested part.

So when Sloan's Liniment relieves the swollen blood vessels by setting up a counter-irritant on the surface, the circulation is equalized, sympathetic nerves all soothed, and soreness or lameness disappears.

Sloan's Liniment is probably the counter-irritant most widely used to overcome painful inflammation in cases of neuralgia, sore muscles, wrenched joints, strains, bruises, gout. Rubbing is not required. This clear, clean liquid is easily applied as it does not stain the skin.

Do You Leave Ashes in Your Furnace All Winter?

The food you eat leaves ashes which nature intended to be removed just as you remove the ashes from your furnace. This "food ash," when allowed to remain in the bowels, clogs the system and causes most ills. Do not ignore the demand your body makes to correct this evil. 138TH'S BAND CALLED 'FIGHTING MUSICIANS'

St. Louis Boy Writes of Part Unit Took in Argonne—Only Band in Division in Battle, He Says.

The part taken by the 138th (St. Louis) Infantry Band in the Argonne drive, work which earned for the organization the sobriquet of the "Fighting Musicians," is described in a letter from Musician Ira Maas to his mother, Mrs. Carrie Maas, 5696 Kingsbury annex.

"Our band was stationed on the side of a hill from Sept. 23 to 25," he wrote, "and on the night of the 25th we were ordered up to regimental headquarters to be used as runners, so the whole band rolled packs and carried only our haversacks with two days' rations. We started down the ammunition track. The woods were massed with troops and the Dutch were sure putting the shells right where they wanted to, as the shells were all bursting above the cross-roads where most of the troops were waiting to move up. There were quite a few men wounded and gassed at this junction, and between falling down and putting on our gas masks we were having plenty of exercise. Finally, after walking through shellfire for half a mile or so, we reached headquarters. Here we were ordered to move to the trenches, as that night the barrage was to open up.

Carried the Flares.

"Two other bandsmen and myself were detailed to carry the flares up. We reached the lines about midnight and it sure was a dark night. Things seemed to have quieted down a bit, as Jerry figured most of our troops were placed. I slept in a dugout there about two hours. Two mortar men left us about 2 in the morning to get their guns ready for action. I was standing outside when I saw the red flare which started the hell. The barrage opened up at 2:40 a. m., and the woods back of us looked like a streak of lightning. Guns were hub to hub for miles around. At 5:30 a. m. the first wave (third battalion of our regiment) went over the top. We went over with the third wave. The band was split up to make the liaison chain.

"Two other bandsmen and myself were detailed to brigade as liaison runners. Our little group went over Vauquois hill, which at one time was considered impregnable. Our third and first battalions went around it while the second went over it. We advanced slowly, having to drop every few minutes in a shell hole on account of the terrific shell fire Jerry was putting back at us, and there was nothing to do but drop and trust to luck.

Caught in a Gun Nest.

"After going over No Man's Land, ducking shells and bullets, our little group found ourselves caught in a machine-gun nest. There were eight of us, four bandmen, a Colonel, two other attached men and a French lieutenant. We were forced to lie in shell holes for about an hour with those machine-gun bullets tearing up the ground around us. Finally a small tank put an end to the machine-gun nest and we pushed forward. We tried to sleep that night in a small woods, in the rain. The Dutch were shooting gas all night and we had to keep busy putting on our gas masks. The next morning we pushed ahead. A part of our artillery also was moving up. We lost five bandsmen the first day. A large shell burst in a ditch in which they had taken shelter. All five were killed instantly. Four other bandsmen were wounded and gassed.

"We moved about a mile further and established a brigade headquarters. Just as it was getting dusk a message came, and the bass drummer and I were asked to take it to the divisional commander, so we started out. We walked nearly the whole night looking for divisional headquarters. Finally a few guards came along with some German prisoners. They were on their way to divisional headquarters, so we went along.

Under Strong Shelling.

"It seemed that every step from which we moved a shell would drop there. We reached headquarters about dawn and by that time another outfit had 'leap-frogged' us and we were relieved. We walked to a town which had four days before been under heavy shell fire. We slept on the ground that night but it was as good as a hotel to us, as we had not had much sleep for four days and it was a great relief to know that we were out of range of shells.

"The sky in the distance was all lit up as our artillery had been moved forward or relieved. Some of the sights I saw in this drive I never can forget. Our band is still on tour, also the other bands in our division are making small towns and playing concerts, but when they announce a concert to be given by our band they usually call us the 'fighting musicians' as we were practically the only band in the division which saw the real stuff."

Violinist With President Home.

Arthur Baron, 5182 Kensington avenue, who was violin soloist in the symphony orchestra that was chosen to accompany President Wilson and the other peace delegates on their trip to Europe, has returned home. He came back aboard the George Washington with the President. He has been engaged by Charles Schwab, the steel manufacturer, to play for the presidential party at a reception to be given in New York upon their return this summer.

For Rough, Wrinkled, Freckled, Pimpled Skin

As March winds, flying dust and dirt, are apt to injure any complexion, this information will be of special value right now. If you have any cutaneous blemish, don't use paint, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, moth patches, sallowness, red or yellow blotches or any surface eruption. The affected cuticle is absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view. Ask the druggist for one ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple, harmless treatment report astonishing results.

If bothered with wrinkles or furrows, a wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel will prove wonderfully effective.—ADV.

There is a difference when playing an Edison re-creation (record) on

The NEW EDISON

Because Mr. Edison employs on his phonograph a FLOATING WEIGHT and a MECHANICAL FEED. No other phonograph employs these features, which are essential to preserve the LIFE of the RECORD and to develop 100% of the music.

A New Edison in Every Home

The New Edison is the one instrument that can satisfactorily fill every musical want—when you realize the many pleasures the New Edison affords you, it will be quite evident why Mr. Edison said he wished to see a phonograph in every home.

Can you possibly deny yourself the pleasure of having one of these master instruments when under our new club plan it is so easy to own one.

The New Edison is the only phonograph that the original singer will sing in test with, proving a perfect re-creation of the original voice.

No Home Is Complete Without an Edison

Of the hundreds of phonographs on the market today you must decide for yourself—don't let salesmanship play any part in your decision, hear The New Edison—remember it was invented by Thomas A. Edison, whose name on the phonograph means as much as the word "Sterling" on silver.

LEMON JUICE IS A SKIN WHITENER AND A BEAUTIFIER

Prepare a quarter pint of beauty lotion at about the cost of a small jar of cold cream.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin bleach and beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. It really will bleach and remove such blemishes as pimples, blackheads, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier which absorbs readily and is not sticky or greasy.

Just try it! Make up a quarter pint of this harmless lemon lotion and apply it daily to the face, neck, arms and hands. It really does soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin.

Your druggist will sell three ounces of orchard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.—ADV.

BE CAREFUL IN USING SOAP ON YOUR HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—ADV.

Adler-i-ka expels ALL gas and sourness, stopping stomach distress INSTANTLY. Empties BOTH upper and lower bowel, flushing ENTIRE alimentary canal. Removes ALL foul matter which poisons system. Often CURES constipation. Prevents appendicitis. We have sold Adler-i-ka many years. It is a mixture of buckthorn, cascara, glycerine and nine other simple drugs. Johnson Bros. UNABLE TO VERIFY ST. LOUISAN'S DEATH

Officer Writes Mother How He Left Her Son Wounded While Column Pressed On to Battle.

Mrs. Mary Mueller, 2218 Sullivan avenue, whose son, Paul Mueller, was killed in action, has received a letter from Lieut. Francis M. Morgan of E Company, 353d Infantry, in reply to an inquiry she sent relative to the manner in which her son met death. Lieut. Morgan was with Mueller when he was struck. He writes that he is unable to verify Mueller's death. His letter follows:

"About 2 p. m. Nov. 2 the platoon was advancing against a very strongly held machine gun position. We were getting very heavy fire. Paul was in the leading unit of the platoon and was armed with a rifle grenade gun. I had seen a shell hole about 30 yards ahead which offered good protection, and from which he could reach the enemy machine gun with his special weapon.

"I rushed forward to this and motioned for him to follow. He did so, but before he got there a bullet passed through his leg, cutting an artery and going through the bone of the upper thigh. Another man and I got him into the shell hole at once, and as the advance was temporarily held up under heavy fire, the two of us did what we could for him. But we could not stop the blood or the pain and the day was very bad, indeed. Everyone was soaked through with a cold rain.

"The stretcher bearers came up as quickly as possible. When I saw him last he was conscious, but I feared that the pain and loss of blood and cold would be too much for him.

"I did not know him very well, but he struck me at the time as being a clean-cut, well-bred fellow from a fine home. He was one of the bravest men in the platoon, for it took brave men that day to face those boche machine guns. He showed exceptional grit after he was shot and was still cheerful when we saw him last. His record in the company was excellent.

"I cannot find out who the stretcher bearers were who took him, or just when he died. In fact, I cannot verify his death. Our records show him evacuated to the Base Hospital and beyond that we have no record. The Central Records Office may give some further information.

"I extend you my fullest sympathy and congratulate you on a splendid son who stood the final test in so noble a manner."

In addition a service flag bearing a star for each returned man has been unfurled and a bronze tablet, bearing the name of each member of the church, in service will be inserted in the wall of the church. A banquet will be given for the men later.

Why the Brunswick Method of Reproduction Insures a Superior Phonograph

Reason No. 1 The Brunswick Method of Reproduction includes the Ultona, a new conception in playing. The Ultona consists of an arrangement of the several necessary reproducing diaphragms upon one tone arm. This is an all-in-one arrangement, with no attachments—nothing to take off or put on.

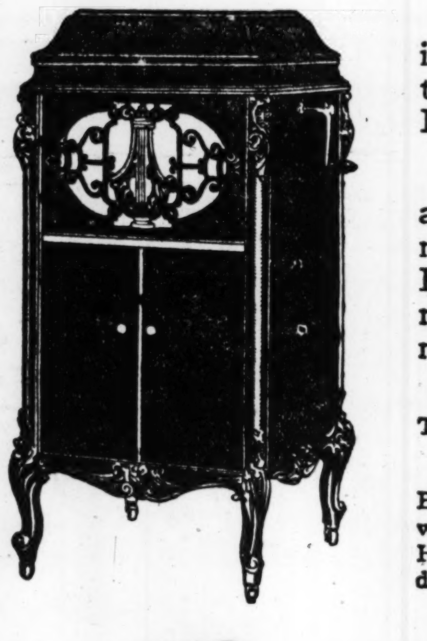
At a turn of the hand, the Ultona is adapted to play any type of record. The proper diaphragm is presented, the exact weight, the precise needle. Thus the requirements of each type of record are met.

So each record, whatever make, is played exactly as it should be. The Ultona demands no sacrifice in tone, as attachments often do.

The Brunswick owner can choose records without regard to make. Every singer, every band, every musician, every selection, can now be played at its best on the one phonograph.

Reason No. 2 Equal in importance to reproduction is tone amplification. The Brunswick Method of Reproduction also includes a new idea in acoustics—The Brunswick Amplifier.

Old-time ideas were at variance. Some makers still cling to metal construction. Others use a combination of wood and metal—a wooden horn and a metal casting as the "throat."



But the Brunswick Amplifier is oval in shape, and built entirely of wood, like a fine violin. It is molded of rare holly-wood.

Sound waves require uniform amplification to reach their fullness. You will note that The Brunswick tone is richer and more natural. Strident, metallic notes are absent.

Make comparison. Let your ear decide. Try to find an equal to Brunswick tone.

You're bound to end such a search at a Brunswick Shop, where every opportunity will be given you to decide for yourself. Hear this remarkable instrument before you decide.

NAVY HAD 374 SHIPS AND 80,711 MEN IN EUROPE

Summary Shows 120 Submarine Chasers and 70 Destroyers Were on Duty When War Ended.

55 COLLIERS PLIED TO FRANCE FROM WALES

Report Says Three, Possibly Four Submarines, Were Sunk, One Captured — 900,000 Soldiers Escorted.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The United States had 374 vessels on duty in European waters and a personnel of 80,711 afloat, at bases or headquarters when the armistice was signed, according to a summary of United States naval activities prepared at headquarters here. Numerically the submarine chasers headed the list with 120, then came the destroyers with 70, while the third class was the unheralded 55 colliers that assisted in keeping a steady stream of coal moving from Cardiff to maintain the allied armies and prevent France from freezing.

Of the 15 classes of ships enumerated in the report the work of the destroyers stands first in dramatic interest. The 20 that were here on July 1, 1917, immediately became active in the war game and that activity constantly increased as the number of boats gradually swelled until it reached the maximum number on Nov. 11, 1918.

Escorted 900,000 Soldiers.

With 25 converted yachts and a few other vessels they escorted 900,000 troops of the United States Expeditionary Force to Europe without the loss of a man from enemy action, and they escorted 27 per cent of all United States, allied and neutral shipping to France and England from April 6, 1917, to Nov. 9, 1918. In this and other work they steamed approximately 275,000 miles every 30 days.

The convoy system was not adopted until shortly after the United States entered the war, but in the year and seven months from then until the end, 18,653 ships were brought over in 1474 convoys that numbered from one ship to as many as 40. United States destroyers based at Queenstown and Brest escorted more than 600 single ships through the danger zone and in this work encountered some of their greatest hazards. Only the largest, fastest ships were sent across alone, and in rough weather the destroyers were considerably battered when forced to maintain high speed against heavy seas.

Reports of contact with the enemy by American vessels total 256 and the most of them came from destroyer commanders. A submarine was actually in the vicinity in 183 of these cases but the others have been listed as false alarms. Methods of determining the presence of a submarine are varied but usually are based upon charts which show with surprising accuracy the day to day movements of the under-water craft.

Four U-Boats Disposed of.

The report gives a list of 22 encounters, the majority of which resulted in the submarine being "probably slightly damaged" or "possibly slightly damaged." One is given as "possibly sunk," three as sunk and one captured. The accuracy of information of the movements of submarines is evidenced in the case of the yacht Lydonia in command of Commander R. P. McCullough who was credited with sinking a submarine although he never saw it. The Lydonia dropped depth charges after a torpedo had been fired at a convoyed ship. The submarine had been reported in that vicinity and as it did not return to its base it was considered sunk in that engagement.

Three American fighting ships were lost through enemy action—the destroyer Jacob Jones and the armed yacht Alcedo and the yacht Owasco which was used on patrol work. Three were sunk as the result of collisions and the revenue cutter Tampa was sunk by an explosion the cause of which has never been ascertained.

The U. S. S. Yale, which is engaged in the English Channel service between Southampton and France, claims the record of the United States Navy in having carried 140,000 American soldiers without accident or mishap of any kind.

Soldiers May Obtain Volumes by Writing to Paris Headquarters of Library.

With free mail service for books granted by the army Postoffice in France, the Paris headquarters of the American Library Association has made arrangements whereby soldiers in the American Expeditionary Forces may send for any available book, and it will be forwarded to them free of charge. In January alone, 45,000 volumes were sent to soldiers from Paris.

More than 2,000,000 volumes have been sent to France from this country, but 1,000,000 more volumes are needed immediately, and the St. Louis Public Library has issued a call asking for donations of spare books. These will be forwarded by the library without cost or trouble to the donor.

2 ROBBERS TAKE $5000 IN GEMS FROM GRAND AV. JEWELER; ESCAPE

Threaten Owner, Clerk and Two Customers, Rifle Safe and Strip Windows in View of Passersby Including Crowds From Five Nearby Theaters.

OFFICERS IN PISTOL FIGHT FROM AUTOS

"Take Your Time and Get the Diamonds," One Said to Partner—Flee in a Stolen Machine—Most of Valuables Pawned Articles.

Within 24 hours after the night police force had been greatly increased with day men to check crime at night, two robbers, evidently taking advantage of the change, at 4:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon entered the Hendler Loan and Jewelry Co., at 804 North Grand avenue, and while threatening Max Hendler, the owner; his clerk, and two customers with revolvers, robbed the cash drawer of $183, and the show windows, in view of passerby, of diamonds and jewelry valued at $4000 to $5000. After leaving the store the robbers were pursued by Hendler, and exchanged several shots with him. They escaped in an automobile which was later abandoned at Natural Bridge road and Arlington evenue.

The robbery, which took place in one of the busiest parts of the city, within a few blocks of five large picture and vaudeville theaters, which were discharging their matinee audiences, was characterized by Chief of police O'Brien as the most audacious of the recent series of crimes that have caused a shift of forces from day to night in the Police Department.

Chief O'Brien at once took personal charge of the investigation and sent out a special order to place as many officers as available on the case. He remained at Police Headquarters until late at night directing a city-wide search.

Pistol Fight in Autos.

A thrilling incident in this connection occurred at 9:30 o'clock in the 4100 block on Enright avenue. Detectives Murphy, Vasey, Doyle and Hoagland were driving east on Enright avenue on the lookout for suspicious characters when they noticed a new Ford machine ahead of them. They caught up and commanded the driver to stop. In answer a man stepped out on the running board and fired eight shots from an automatic pistol through the police car windshield, showering the detectives with glass.

The detectives stopped their car and got out and opened fire at the car, in which a man was shouting "Give 'er gas! Give 'er gas!" Their shots failing to stop the car, the detectives clambered into theirs and took up the pursuit, but lost the trail at Taylor avenue.

The Grand avenue neighborhood has been a fruitful source of income for robbers within the last six weeks, and burglaries had become so frequent that merchants from Olive street to Finney avenue had complained to the Post-Dispatch and to the Police Department.

Described as Young Men.

In the crime yesterday two young men, described as being under 25 years of age and wearing neat clothes and caps, entered the jewelry store. Hendler was standing behind the north counter, and his clerk, Miss Lydia Allen of 4020A Kennerly avenue, was dusting some clocks behind the south counter. One robber stepped behind the counter where Hendler stood and, drawing a revolver, commanded Hendler to "back up." The other robber, who had gone behind the opposite counter, commanded Miss Allen to hold up her hands and step behind a partition cage in the back of the store. Hendler also was forced back of this cage.

At that moment the situation became complicated for the robbers by the entrance of two customers, Joseph Lind of 5968 Cabanne avenue, and Edward Schwech, 5170 Cabanne avenue. The robbers thrust Hendler under the rear counter and while one guarded him and Miss Allen, the other stepped forward and with pointed revolver forced Lind and Schwech to step behind the south counter with hands aloft and faces against the wall.

The robber then went back of the cage and took what cash there was in a drawer and commanded his partner to take a leather handbag lying under the counter and remove the diamonds and jewelry in the show window.

NAVY TO ATTEMPT FLIGHT ACROSS THE ATLANTIC IN MONTH

Work on Four Flying Boats Designed for Trip Almost Completed, Says Admiral Taylor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Rear Admiral D. W. Taylor, chief of the Naval Bureau of Construction and Repairs, announced here today that the navy should be ready to attempt the flight by heavier-than-air craft across the Atlantic Ocean within a month.

"I do not believe that Great Britain will beat us across," he said, "if the attempt is made with heavier-than-air craft. We are under the impression in Washington, however," he continued, "that a dirigible trip will be undertaken by England, possibly during the coming week."

"The navy has four flying boats of the N. C.-1 type and work on these is almost completed. It has not yet been decided whether all four will be sent over at the same time but I believe that more than one will start. This will insure against total failure should one or two break down."

Admiral Taylor said that he was not certain whether a non-stop trip would be attempted.

"We may break it into two hops," he said, "and this will entail the use of airplane mother ships, vessels equipped with oil, gasoline and food.

"Through their wireless apparatus," he said, "mother ships can keep in touch with the flying boats. Although the flying boat may alight only once at sea it is possible that more than one mother ship could be used."

The proceedings at the meeting here were opentd by Maj. Eric Wood, who said that the organization would eventually include all men who served either at home or abroad. Lieutenant-Colonel Bennett Clark, son of Champ Clark, was elected temporary chairman. It is understood that the American organization will be affiliated with similar British and French organizations.

TWO PARTIES AGREE ON 3 CANDIDATES FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Democrats Select Tobin, McDonald and Cullinane, and Republicans Pick Wolfner, Present President.

G. O. P. REFUSES TO ACCEPT CULLINANE

Name of Richard Murphy to Appear on Ticket—Both Parties Adopt Platforms in Conventions.

The Republicans and Democratic city cenventions, held yesterday in halls at 1441 Chouteau avenue and 3549 Olive street respectively, chose bipartisan Board of Education tickets, agreeing on three names and differing as to one, and adopted platforms for the city election of April 1, when a president and 14 members of the Board of Aldermen will be elected. The party nominees for the Board of Aldermen were named at the primary March 7.

The Democrats, to whom three of the four Board of Education vacancies fell under the bi-partisan program, selected former Judge Jesse A. McDonald, John C. Tobin and William Cullinane as their candidates. The Republicans, to whom one vacancy fell, renominated Dr. Henry L. Wolfner, president of the board, and accepted McDonald and Tobin as Democratic candidates for the bi-partisan ticket, but refused to accept Cullinane, and in his place nominated Richard Murphy, one of the three Democratic members of the Board of Education whose terms expire this spring. The Democrats accepted Wolfner as the Republican nominee for the bipartisan ticket, but will adhere to Cullinane.

How Names Will Appear.

Accordingly, the Republican ticket will carry the names of Wolfner, McDonald, Tobin and Murphy as candidates for the Board of Education, and the Democratic ticket will carry the names of Wolfner, McDonald, Tobin and Cullinane.

McDonald is a lawyer, and lives at 4542 Pershing avenue; Tobin is a lawyer, residing at 3933 Lindell boulevard; Cullinane is an undertaker, living at 4905 St. Louis avenue; Murphy is a clothing salesman and lives at 3058 Sheridan avnue; and Dr. Wolfner, an oculist, lives at 4563 Forest Park boulevard.

The Democratic platform condemns and the Republican platform indorses Mayor Kiel's mill tax and franchise agreement with the United Railways Co., though neither platform contains a complete and connected statement of what the Mayor's action was. Neither platform speaks of the pending movement for the recall of the Mayor, which resulted from that action.

Democratic Charges.

The Democratic platform charges the Mayor with "base betrayal of the people's interests" and condemns him for surrendering the city's strongest legal weapon by withdrawing the attack on the Jefferson-avenue franchise. It also declares that the issue of the campaign is the question whether the city shall be run by and for the United Railways or by and for the people, and it pledges the Democratic candidates, if elected in sufficient number to offices of sufficient power, to compel the company to give adequate service for a 5-cent fare, to compel a reorganization of the company, by a receivership if necessary, and to put the company out of poltics.

The Republican platform says nothing about the withdrawal of the attack on the company's franchises, but praises the Kiel administration for "the ending of the expensive and protracted litigation forced on the city by the United Railways Co., and securing every dollar of mill tax accrued in the past, and the guarantee of the payment of every dollar to accrue in the future." It then pledges efforts to have a 5-cent fare restored, but says the State Supreme Court has upheld the authority of the State Public Service Commission as superior to the authority of city officials in the matter of fares.

Criticism and Praise for Kiel.

The Democratic platform attacks the Kiel administration on other grounds, chiefly extravagance. The Republican platform praises the Kiel administration, reciting a list of achievements for which, it is declared the administration should have credit. Both platforms are printed elsewhere in today's Post-Dispatch.

The Democratic convention began first, at 11:30 a. m. Its action, as to condidates for the Board of Education, had been virtually determined in advance by a caucus of the city committee. In this caucus, 23 members voted for the selection of McDonald, Tobin and Cullinane, who were selected from a list of 10 names furnished to the committee by a

German Submarine Trying to Escape From Spain Sunk

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 15.

THE German submarine U-48, while attempting to escape from Ferrol, Spain, last night, was chased by a destroyer and sunk, according to a Havas dispatch from Madrid.

The U-48 took refuge at Farrol in March, 1918, and was interned. The attempted flight of the U boat was observed and the torpedo boat destroyer Antalo pursued her. The German boat was sunk outside the Ferrol roads. The crew was saved.

When the German submarine U-48 sought refuge at Ferrol her propellers were unshipped by the authorities and her guns and munitions were taken out according to dispatches from that port. The captain of the submarine declared that his craft had been damaged severely in a fight with three ships. The U boat carried a crew of 30 men.

CLEMENCEAU'S ASSAILANT "GLAD TO DIE FOR CAUSE OF TOILER"

"You Will Not Kill the Principle for Which I Shot," Says Cottin, Sentenced to Death.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 15.—It took less than six hours for the courtmartial to try Emile Cottin yesterday for his attempt on Premier Clemenceau's life and to sentence him to death. The trial began afternoon and neded at 7:25 p. m. when Col. Hyvert announced the verdict, which was unanimous.

Cottin, who appeared to be pitifully weak despite his apparent effect at brazenness, rambled through a long statement which he had carefully prepared. He quoted in turn J. J. Rousseau and Romain Rolland. He said he gloried in his attempt on the aged premier and insisted that he had committed a laudable act, saying: "You may kill me, but you will not kill the principle for which I shot."

There was no trace of remorse or repentance. The only regret he had was that he failed to kill the Premier.

Cottin listened calmly to the president of the court as he read the sentence and then said: "I am glad to die for the cause of the proletariat. If my death will bring relief to the downtrodden workingman I will not have died in vain."

Oscar Bloch, Cottin's lawyer, compared the delay in bringing to trial Villia, who murdered Jean Jaures, the French Socialist leader, in July, 1914, with the haste to try Cottin who had failed in his attempt. Cottin, the lawyer said, had been tried within three weeks while Villain was still in jail after nearly five years.

ALL OF 65,000 ESTIMATED TO HAVE PAID INCOME TAX HERE

Receipts figured at $15,000,000—Large Sums of Money Sent to Banks at Night Under Guard.

When the time for making income tax returns ended last night, officials at the Internal Revenue Collector's office estimated that virtually all the 65,000 St. Louisans who were expected to do so, either had got their returns in, or had them in the mail.

The closing rush yesterday was even heavier than on the preceding days, when hundreds stood in line, waiting to make out their returns. The office was kept open until 11 o'clock last night, but few came in after 9, the hour at which it had been announced the office would close.

Although officials are not permitted to give out figures, it has been calculated that St. Louisans will pay more than $15,000,000 in income taxes.

A large sum of money, received during the day, was sent to banks last night, under heavily armed guard. Banks have promised to receive additional sums that will be received in the mail today.

More than 100 clerks who have been working in the office, aiding in making out returns, will be busy today opening mail, checking returns, and making records of payments. A number of the clerks are women.

Returns have been received at the office since Feb. 5, but the great rush did not begin until early last week.

35TH WILL GO TO FUNSTON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kas., March 15.—Representative E. C. Little of the Second District today stated that he had received definite official information that the 35th division would be demobilized at Camp Funston. The message from the war department stated that the division would be allowed to stop a few hours for a parade in Kansas City.

The division was moving this week to Lemans, France, to prepare for sailing in April.

ONE TAXPAYER EMBARRASSED

A letter from a taxpayer who can't come out to pay his income tax was received yesterday by Collector of Internal Revenue Moore.

This man wrote that he was a prisoner in a county jail, and added: "Isolated as I am, I am not prepared to make a return."

The collector by telephone instructed a revenue agent in that county to go to the jail and take a return from the prisoner.

ELIHU ROOT, AS COUNSEL, TO LEAD FIGHT ON 'DRY' LAW

Contention Is That War Time Act Became Obsolete When President Announced Armistice.

18TH AMENDMENT ALSO WILL BE ATTACKED

Financiers in Organization in New York to Begin Proceedings to Make It "Forever Inoperative."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Preliminary action toward testing the constitutionality of the war-time prohibition act was taken in the filing here today of a stockholders' suit in the Federal Court against the James Everard's Breweries. The complainant, Joseph E. Everard, asked the Court for an order restraining the defendant from suspending its manufacturing activities May 1 next, and its sales July 1, as required by the Federal statute.

The complaint alleged that the emergency prohibition clause of the agricultural bill adopted Nov. 21, 1918, is unconstitutional as a measure intended to safeguard the national security and defense, the armistice having been signed, hostilities ceased and orders given preliminary to reduction of the military forces before that date.

Elihu Root Counsel.

The complaint, drawn with Elihu Root as chief counsel, alleged that when President Wilson proclaimed the armistice declaring "the war thus comes to an end," directed cessation of inductions into the army under the selective service act and announced plans for restoration of normal peace conditions, there was no emergency, military or otherwise, calling for prohibition of the use of grains, cereals, fruits or other food products in the manufacture of beer or wines; or forbidding the sale of such poducts in order to conserve the nation's man power and carry on the war. The prohibitions, it is charged, were unnecessary and arbitrary and wholly without any power conferred on Congress by the Constitution.

The suit also attacks the regulations of the Internal Revenue Department restricting the manufacture of "near beer" prior to May 1, to products not exceeding 2¾ per cent in alcoholic content, with a reduction to one-half of one per cent when the comomdity is offered for sale and consumption; and limiting the alcoholic content of all brewed beverages after May 1 to half per cent. It is claimed that beer containing 2¾ per cent alcohol is not intoxicating, and that Congress gave no authority for the half per cent limitation.

The complainant, who resides in Plainfield, N. J., is a minority stockholder of the Everard Breweries, which are in this city. He alleges that the directors of the company have made plans to comply with the war-time prohibition act, thus destroying the corporation's proftmaking ability.

Anti-Prohibition Organization.

Organization of the Association Opposed to National Prohibition was announced here tonight, with the avowed "prime purpose" of making the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution "forever inoperative."

Application for incorporation under the laws of New York will be made next week, it was said. Among the incorporators will be Percival S. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Co.; Joseph W. Harriman, president of the Harriman National Bank, and Michael Friedman, president of B. Altman & Co. No person officially connected with the organization has any interest, directly or indirectly, in the liquor business.

Plans for organization of branches in 29 states have been laid, it was announced, and nearly 800,000 persons already have applied for membership.

The organization, it was declared, stands on the principle of "personal rights and liberties" and is opposed to introduction of any bills in Congress or in the various State Legislatures differentiating between light wines and beer and whisky. It is as strongly opposed, the statement declared, to prohibition by constitutional amendment of the manufacture and sale of cigarettes, cough drops and chewing gum as it is to the prohibition by constitutional amendment of the manufacture and sale of intoxicants.

In addition to the organization's campaign to influence public opinion for "maintenance of the standards of personal liberty" by "all lawful and proper means," the organization also proposes to disseminate information regarding the political, social and economic effect of the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic beverages, to promote temperance in the use of alcoholic beverages "and to oppose any movement to limit or discontinue the use of tobacco."

LEAGUE WILL BE PART OF TREATY, WILSON DECLARES

Declarations That Jan. 25 Decision Had Been Abandoned Are Flatly Contradicted.

TUMULTY ALSO RECEIVES CABLE

"Preliminary" Treaty Described as Virtually Final Armistice, Peace Treaty With All Belligerent Powers.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 15.—In a statement on the peace conference resolution with reference to the league of nations in the peace treaty President Wilson said today that the decision of the peace conference at its plenary session of Jan. 25, 1919, that the establishment of a league of nations should be made an integral part of the treaty of peace, is final and that there is no basis whatever for the reports that a change in this decision is contemplated.

The resolution of the league of nations adopted at that time by the conference was as follows:

First—it is essential to the maintenance of the world settlement, which the associated nations are now met to establish, that a league of nations be created to promote international cooperation, to insure the fulfillment of accepted international obligations and to provide safeguards against war.

"Second—This league should be treated as an integral part of the general treaty of peace, and should be open to every civilized nation which can be relied upon to promote its objects."

"Third—the members of the league should periodically meet in international conference and should have a permanent organization and secretariat to carry on the business of the league in the intervals between the conference."

Tumulty Announces Contents of Cablegram From President.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Joseph Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, announced here today that he was in receipt of a cablegram from the President stating that "the plenary council has positively decided that the league of nations is to be part of the peace treaty."

This cablegram was sent in response to one sent by Tumulty inquiring whether there was any truth in certain newspaper stories that the league was not to be incorporated in the peace treaty.

"I cabled direct to the President at Paris, asking if there was any truth in these reports," said Tumulty, "and I am this morning in receipt of a cablegram from the President stating that the plenary council has positively decided that the league of nations is to be part of the peace treaty; that there is absolutely no truth in any report to the contrary."

League of Nations May Not Be in Preliminary Treaty.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Although it will be included in the final treaty of peace, the league of nations may not be in the preliminary treaty, it was said today in official circles after Secretary Tumulty had announced in New York that he had been informed by President Wilson by cable that the plenary council at Paris had decided that the league plan was to be a part of the treaty.

Officials explained that the preliminary treaty would be between the victorious associated powers and Germany only; that it might be characterized as the "final armistice" and, as such, need not be submitted to the Senate for ratification. They said the preliminary document in every particular would be incorporated in the final treaty, which would present the terms which must be agreed to by all the warring nations.

Among other details which will be incorporated in the final treaty and which some officials do not think will be in the preliminary draft, will be those of boundaries.

BRITISH TO MAKE CHEAP AUTO

LONDON, March 15.—Henry Ford and his new $250 car are not going to have matters all their own way. An English firm has made arrangements to put on the market a small light car which will cost less than the new Ford. Tax and freight charges are expected to raise the price of the American article in this country considerably above the figures asked in the United States. The principals of the British concern are confident they will be able to offer their car at $250 or $300.

Hardly any wood will be used in this car. It will be made almost entirely of a new substance—a kind of concrete produced from waste material, such as slag, clinkers, sawdust and so on, and covered with a metal solution.

COLLECTORS REPORT 11th HOUR DELUGE OF INCOME TAXES

Inflow Estimated at $1,000,000,000—Unavoidable Tardiness Not to Be Penalized.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Until late tonight the Federal Revenue Collectors' offices throughout the country were busy receiving eleventh-hour income tax returns, due today, at the latest, and accepting payments of the 25 per cent first installment. Collectors reported tonight that they were submerged beneath a flood of documents, checks and money orders, and that it would take several days to prepare even a tentative tabulation of receipts. Treasury officials calculated the probable inflow of tax money at somewhere between $800,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

Persons who mailed their returns tonight, or even tomorrow, will not be penalized for tardiness, it was said here. Collectors will be expected to use discretion and to accept returns which may trickle in any time next week, providing they do not regard the tardiness as wilful.

Furthermore, Revenue Commissioner Roper has notified collectors to accept informal returns, such as letters, giving an estimate of the tax due and accompanied by a least one-fourth of the estimated sum. This leniency was prompted by the fact that in some districts the rush at collectors' offices in the last few days prevented taxpayers from obtaining copies of the regular printed form. Under these instructions it probably will be possible for any citizen who neglected to file returns by the final hour, enclosing a check, to do so without being penalized.

Indications tonight were that many corporations and big business interests had paid their taxes by turning in treasury certificates purchased months ago and redeemable today. This system made possible the tremendous tax payments without comparable withdrawals of credits from banks.

Taxpayers who filed tentative estimates today have 45 days, or until May 1, to prepare their complete returns.

WINDSTORMS KILL SEVERAL, INJURE MANY, IN SOUTHWEST

Heavy Property Damage Done in Porter, Ok.—Heavy Rains in Kansas.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 15.—Several persons are reported to have been killed, scores injured and a vast amount of property damaged by tornadoes and cloudbursts which struck towns in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma late today.

A tornado at Porter, Ok., 12 miles northwest of Muskogee, laid waste most of the business section. Three persons are thought to have been killed and many are reported injured. The M., K. & T. Railroad station was demolished. A 48-mile wind was reported from Oklahoma City.

At Athcison, Kan., 3 inches of rain fell within an hour, filled the streets, flooded basements and caused damage estimated at $100,000.

A heavy windstorm which swept through Clinton, Mo., unroofed many houses in the residence section and blew railroad cars from the track. Near Nevada, Mo., several small buildings were blown down.

Sweeping through Northern Jackson and Western Atchison Counties in Kansas, a tornado wrecked a score of farmhouses and injured a number of persons. Buildings on two blocks in the town of Muscotah were destroyed. A heavy rain followed the wind.

All rainfall records for the month of March were broken at Topeka, when a precipitation of 3.88 inches was recorded.

More than $100,000 worth of property was destroyed by a tornado which swept through a portion of Saunders County, Neb., yesterday, killing one person and injuring several others.

ELECTROCUTED CHASING FOWL ESCAPING AT UNION STATION

Man Who Has Not Been Identified Pressed Cables Together in Subway and Completed a Circuit.

While chasing a chicken which had escaped from a crate in the freight depot of the American Railway Express Co. yesterday afternoon an unidentified man was electrocuted in the subway at Union Station. The chicken ran to an open window which is on the level with the roof of the subway and flew through to the subway cables which carry electric light wires.

The man followed and while reaching for the chicken pressed two cables together, which formed a circuit. It was necessary to get ropes to extricate him. He is described as having light complexion and auburn hair and being about 28 years old.

The accident caused a short circuit which blew out the fuse and the lights in the subway went out.

GERMANY ACCEPTS TERMS; WILL GET 370,000 TONS OF FOOD A MONTH

Agrees to Turn Over Nearly 2,000,000 Tons of Shipping, of Which Nine Big Vessels Will Go to U. S. to Carry American Troops Home.

ALLIES TO DELIVER SUPPLIES AT ONCE

Negotiations at Brussels Are Marked by Impersonal Rigidity — Germans Mention High Infant Mortality in Asking for Milk.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, March 15.—German delegates to the conference here regarding the taking over by the allies of the German mercantile fleet and the provisioning of Germany yesterday definitely accepted the conditions imposed by the allies.

A board of control for German exports wil be established under the terms of the agreement. This board porbably will have its headquarters at Rotterdam.

The Germans will be permitted to buy fish from Norway and resume their own fishing in the North Sea.

The German representatives asked for a modification of the blockade, and, while no promises were given them in this connection, steps in that direction, as a matter of fact, have already been taken.

A monthly ration for Germany of 370,000 tons of foodstuffs was fixed by the Allied Commission. The Germans observed that this ration was smaller than they had requested and were pessimistic as to the arrangement of satisfactory financial terms.

Wemyss Presents Terms.

After Vice Admiral Rosslyn Wemyss of Great Britain, chairman of the allied delegation, had presented the conditions decided upon by the Entente, the Germans asked to be allowed to withdraw for consultation. They then formed three subcommittees to deal with questions of finance, food supply and mercantile marine. At 6 p. m. Thursday another plenary session was held. In the evening the Germans asked to be given the use of a telegraph line to Weimar.

The German representatives sat on one side of a long table, while on the other side were an equal number of allied representatives. There were no greetings, salutations or amenities of any sort. The whole proceedings were marked by impersonal rigidity. The chairman of the German delegation stared at a spot on the table and addressed his remarks to no one in particular.

Vice Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss of Great Britain, chairman of the allied delegation, began by reading a statement prepared for him by the civilian members, calling on the Germans to say categorically whether they abided by the terms of the armistice. Under Secretary of State von Braund replied curtly: "Yes."

Food to Be Delivered at Once.

Admiral Wemyss then read one page of typewritten memorandum, giving in crisp sentences the terms of the allies for granting food to Germany—the German merchant fleet to be handed over at once, financial provisions to be made at once, food to be delivered at once and to be continued until the next harvest, or as long as Germany abided by the terms of the agreement.

As the statement was read it was translated into German and French, the German replies receiving the same treatment. The air of impersonality was preserved throughout. It was then settled that the details of the rations of 370,000 tons of food monthly with the shipping and financial plans should be elaborated in subcommittees. The subcommittee on food was under the chairmanship of Herbert Hoover. Thomas W. Lamont represented the United States on the subcommittee on finance and J. R. Robinson, of the United States Shipping Board on the subcommittee on shipping.

In this meeting there were no appeals or references to humanity and civilization or to women and children, the only statement in this connection being that infant mortality had doubled in the last three months, and this was simply mentioned as a cold declaration of fact in connection with the request of the Germans for more condensed milk.

The German delegates were anxious to enlarge the proposed monthly imports of certain commodities, only to be met with the statement: "I regret that the world's shipping does

DANIELS' TRIP TO DECIDE FATE OF "BIG NAVY" PLAN

Secretary and Experts Sail for Europe to Discuss Naval and Aviation Developments of the War.

PEACE CONFERENCE TO CONSIDER OUR SCHEME

U. S. Commanders Are Calling for Vessels of 55,000 Tons to Cost $40,000,000 With 29 Knots Speed.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Secretary Daniels of the navy and a party of naval experts sailed from here for France today on the giant transport Leviathan to study naval and aviation problems. They will visit Great Britain and Italy and also will be absent until about May 1. The Secretary was accompanied by Mrs. Daniels.

An army guard of honor, an army band, Vice Admiral Albert Gleaves, representing the navy; Major-General David R. Shanks and Brigadier-General George McManus, representing the army, and Admiral Grout of the French navy, met the secretary and his party when they arrived at the pier, and a naval guard of honor and navy band "piped" them on board, the ceremonies corresponding with those accorded to President Wilson on his first trip to France. The Leviathan fired a 19-gun salute as she turned into the river and started on her voyage at 4:30 p. m., flying the Secretary's flag.

To Study Problems.

"We are going to Europe to study naval and aviation problems which have been brought about or made possible by the war," said Mr. Daniels before sailing. "We are paying particular attention to types of capital ships and aviation. You know we are going to fly across the ocean some of these days, but I am not giving the date. No doubt Congress will be asked for money to develop the aviation ambitions of the United States."

As the transport was being warped away from the pier a sailor appeared at an open port and, grasping a dock rope, swung himself ashore, while his comrades called good-bys. It developed that the youth was a member of the crew whose assignment to an officers' training school had been disapproved by the Bureau of Navigation, had taken his case personally before Secretary Daniels aboard the liner. The Secretary had approved the transfer, the sailor said, and, having no mind for another passage on the Leviathan, he made a dash for the shore. He proudly exhibited the document, signed by the Secretary.

As the Leviathan passed the Narrows at 5:30 p. m., the U. S. S. Amphitrite fired a salute of 19 guns in honor of Secretary Daniels. Several seaplanes and a dirigible balloon accompanied the liner a short distance out to sea.

U. S. Program Would Make Existing European Navies Obsolete.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Important conclusions are expected to grow out of the forthcoming conferences between Secretary Daniels and his aids and European admiralty officials.

While the main object of the trip of the American officials is to gather information upon which the Navy Department can base a report to Congress relative to the proposal to substitute gigantic composite cruiser-battleships for present-day capital war vessels, the fact that such a program would render all existing fleets obsolete and that its cost would be enormous, insure, in the view of many officials, that the project will be taken up at the peace conference.

Pending the return of the Secretary and more complete intra-service discussion, naval officials generally are inclined to defer judgment. They take the view that even in its narrowest and strictly American aspect, the proposal raises questions of such a far-reaching nature that individual opinions should have no weight. Only the consensus of the seasoned and trained judgment of the service, they argue, should be considered by Congress when the department's report is presented.

Cruiser Project Awaited.

In the view here, even the American 35-knot battle cruiser project now held to await a decision on the greater question of composite ships has in its elements that make it more than purely national matter under present conditions. Officers say that if competitive naval building is to continue, other powers must provide similar ships, as not even Great Britain has built or is building craft of equal efficiency in their own peculiar sphere.

Progress toward the construction of the gigantic battle cruisers, six of which already have been authorized has been watched with some concern by British naval authorities since it has appeared likely they would necessitate additions to the British naval budget. There is little doubt among officials here that the British would welcome an international understanding at Paris which would eliminate that source of expenditure.

The standard fighting ship of today is the super-dreadnaught in the American and British navies, a vessel with a speed of approximately 23 knots, an armament of twelve 16-inch guns; an armor belt varying from 12 to 14 inches in thickness and having a displacement of about 35,000 tons. Such a ship costs about $20,000,000. The United States has 10 of them under construction or authorized and the naval appropriation bill, which failed in the final hours of the last Congress authorized 10 more for the next three years.

Giant Ships Proposed.

The proposed ship would have a speed of 29 knots, carry twelve 16-inch guns, an armor belt of 12 to 14 inches, displace about 55,000 tons and cost $40,000,000. It would carry the same offensive and defensive power as the super-dreadnaughts and would make six knots an hour greater speed. The price of this increased speed, officers declare, would double the cost of construction and almost double the size of the latter vessel, carrying with it far-reaching engineering changes in harbors, navy yards and dry docks to accommodate such monster craft.

SPECIAL SENATE SESSION ON PEACE TREATY POSSIBLE

U. S. Delegates Have Plan to Declare Hostilities Ended When They Sign—War Council Meets, Wilson Absent.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 15.—The supreme war council resumed its sessions this afternoon with a distinguished array of military and civilian chiefs, expecting that President Wilson would be present for the final consideration of the military, naval and aerial terms of the German disarmament.

The President did not attend, however, E. M. House taking his place, as the draft of the terms in treaty form had not been completed in time to permit of study before the meeting. The President received the full draft late this afternoon and went over it tonight article by article with Gen. Bliss and Admiral Benson at the Paris White House.

With the President absent the council deferred the military and naval terms until Monday.

The Polish frontiers of Germany was the next subject on the program, but the British Prime Minister was not prepared to proceed, so this also was deferred. Lloyd George left the council room soon after learning that President Wilson would not attend and proceeded to the "White House" for a conference.

The inevitable delays on various details lead to doubts for the first time in American quarters on completing the treaty by March 25, as was expected. It was developed also that Lloyd George is obliged to return to London the middle of the coming week, and he is unable to say how long he will be gone, owing to the British labor congress and other subjects requiring his attention in London. It is hoped he will return within a week or 10 days or possibly turn over British interests to Balfour, but his absence may have the effect of prolonging the conclusion of the treaty beyond March 25.

It was stated at American headquarters that the treaty now being framed would be the definite treaty covering all the main subjects and would not be a preliminary treaty. It is the treaty which will be submitted to the United States Senate for raification and after its conclusion the remaining details will be largely formalities.

No League Seat Chosen.

No decision has been made concerning the seat of the league of nations, but the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Belgium has written offering one of the historic palaces of Brussels as the home of the league, if Brussels is chosen. The prevailing American sentiment continues to be favorable to Geneva.

If President Wilson insists that the league of nations be incorporated in the preliminary peace treaty, the British, it is understood will concede the point, although they still believe that the inauguration of the league should be included in a final peace pact.

This attitude was indicated today after the annoucement that the American delegation strongly desired the inclusion of the league in the preliminary treaty, as well as in the final pact.

The British it is made known do not wish to delay the league of nations' progress in any way, but they express the keenest desire for the immediate signing of the preliminary peace treaty to alleviate unsatisfactory conditions resulting from the continuation of the armistice.

Speedy Action Sought.

In order to get speedy action they propose to strip the preliminary compact of all extraneous matters which, they believe, include the league of nations. The league, under the British program would be taken up immediately after the conclusion of the preliminaries of peace and with any amendments which might be added would be made part of the final pact.

Leon Bourgeois, French delegate on the league of nations, will hold a conference with E. M. House tomorrow morning concerning two proposed amendments to the covenant. The amendments deal with investigations by the league of the military status of all the member countries.

Frank Hitchcock accompanied Bourgeois and the American delegates who attended the league of nations congress at London, but is back in Paris taking an active interest in the league.

The official statement regarding the meeting says:

"The Supreme War Council was to have received the final draft of the naval, military an air terms today, but in the absence of President Wilson, who was unable to complete his examinations of the proposals, the meeting was adjourned until Monday."

Senate May Be Called.

The American peace delegates are considering bridging over the period between the signature of the peace treaty and the ratification of the treaty of the United States Senate by a modus vivendi declaring hostilities ended as of date of the signature, so as to delay the termination of certain war legislation and to enable the resumption immediately of normal trade, while affording the Senate the necessary time for consideration.

The question of calling a special session of the Senate immediately after the signing of the treaty, which may be within 10 days, has also been under consideration.

The belief was expressed as a result of the conferences yesterday that the treaty would be ready by the end of next week, or certainly by March 25. President Wilson arranged to meet the American delegation at the Hotel de Crillon today.

One of the first questions to be considered by the Council of Ten, with President Wilson participating in the discussion, will be the boundary between Poland and Germany. The Polish Boundary Commission, as well as the general territorial commissions, has virtually agreed unanimously on this boundary.

Danzig to Poland

While no official announcement has been made, it is known that Danzig is included in Poland and that the commission have agreed upon a boundary which would give Poland strategic points which should make her an effective barrier between Bolshevism and Western Europe.

The ethnical point of view largely influenced the decisions of the commissions concerning the boundaries. This view did not govern exclusively, however, as some sections where Poles predominate have been excluded from Polish jurisdiction within it, because of an effort to preserve historical boundaries and afford better defensive positions. Economic considerations and the establishment of possible lines of communication also had weight with the decisions of the commission.

The important question of what disposition shall be made of pre-war business contracts between Germany and Entente interests is being threshed out by a Peace Conference Committee. The point at issue is whether all such contracts should not be considered null and void in view of the great increase in the cost of materials since the war, which would necessarily entail heavy losses on many firms were they compelled to furnish goods on the old basis.

3 FLYING CIRCUSES WILL TOUR U. S. TO BOOST VICTORY LOAN

American and Captured Fokker Planes to Be Used by American and Allied Aviators.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Three flying circuses of American, French and British aviators, in American and captured German Fokker planes, will tour the United States in connection with the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, giving aerial sham battles and acrobatics in more than 50 leading American cities, including St. Louis.

The demonstration will be under the management of the Victory Loan Publicity Bureau, of which Frank R. Wilson is director, and the actual fying will be under the supervision of the military aeronautics branch of the War Department, with Capt. Leon Richardson in charge.

Fourteen captured German Fokker planes were landed today at Newport News and will be shipped at once to Washington. The best types of American planes developed during the war will be demonstrated.

The tours will start April 10, although the loan selling campaign does not open until April 21. Each squadron will be carried in a special train of 11 cars, traveling at night. Nine end-door baggage cars will be required to carry the 17 airplanes in each squadron.

Photographers of the signal corps will accompany each squadron. They will take war photographs of each of the American cities visited; the plates will be dropped from airplanes by parachutes and hurried reproductions made for the benefit of the residents of all cities visited. Parades will precede the flights.

SEVEN GENERALS DECORATED ON THE RHINE BY PERSHING

Congressional Medal of Honor Pinned on Lieutenant and a Private of Marines by U. S. Commander.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, March 15.—Four Major-Generals, three Brigadier-Generals, two Colonels, one Lieutenant and one private were presented with decorations by Gen. John J. Pershing, Commander in Chief of the American expeditionary forces, Saturday morning, in the square in front of the palace formerly occupied by the German Emperor in Coblenz. The presentation of medals took place after Gen. Pershing had inspected and reviewed two battalions of the Fourth Division, the personnel of the headquarters of the third army and the third army itself.

At the head of the line of those decorated stood Lieut. Cukela of Minneapolis, Minn., and next to Cukela was Private John J. Kelly of Chicago, both marines who received the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery displayed in attacking German machine gun nests. Distinguished Service Medals were presented to Major Generals Dickman, commanding the Third Army; John L. Hines, commanding the Third Corps; William G. Haan, commanding the Seventh Corps and Charles H. Muir, commanding the Fourth Corps; Brigadier Generals Harry A. Smith, in charge of civilian affairs in the occupied area; Campbell King, chief of the Third Corps and Malin Craig, Chief of Staff of the Third Army; Colonels George Tyner of the Third Army staff, in charge of transportation, and John C. H. Lee, chief of staff of the Eighty-Ninth division, the youngest chief of staff in the American Expeditionary forces.

After the ceremonies General Pershing proceeded to Consdorf, Luxemburg, the headquarters of the Thirty-Second Division, where he lunched with Major-General William Lassiter, commander of the division. In the afternoon General Pershing reviewed and inspected the men of the Thirty-Second.

PERSHING REVIEWS SECOND DIVISION ON BANK OF RHINE

25 Acres of American Bayonets, Airplanes and Guns Bristle Where Von Moltke Once Ruled.

By CYRIL BROWN.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and Ney York World.

Copyright, 1919, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

COBLENZ, March 14.—The American army of occupation today created another Rhine legend to be narrated to future generations of personallly conducted tourists.

The famous Second division, including the marines, 25,000 fighting men ready for battle and in full combat regalia, was massed on the historic parade ground on a plateau near Volmar, dominating the Rhine. There Field Marshal Von Moltke, Chief of the Grand General Staff, more than once reviewed the German Eighth Army Corps. There today Gen. Pershing reviewed the Second division.

It was the first of an important series of reviews obviously intended as a tribute to the army of occupation for its fine performance up to date and to confirm the fact that the army of occupation is not only in fine fighting fettle, but is most heartily willing to continue doing its duty by staying here indefinitely at America's bidding.

Gen. Pershing's arrival had galvanized the American area into warlike activities. Across the Rhine the troops were on the march all night in the Second division's sector of the bridgehead. Columns of infantry and artillery and their trains were all moving away from Berlin and back to the Rhine.

But it was not a retreat, just an inevitable rearward concentration on the only field within the sector large enough to enable an entire division to line up on parade.

25 Acres of Americans.

The second division, leaving only two battalions of marines on outpost duty to keep watch on the neutral zone, had completed the elaborate concentration maneuver by 10 o'clock this morning and was in position. The correspondent's eye could sweep a patriotic panorama that could not be located anywhere—twenty-five acres of American bayonets, bristling high above the winding Rhine. American airplanes chasing overhead, an American captive balloon hanging over the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein in the background, and, across the river American artillery swarming up with practice firing.

This was the unique Rhine view that greeted Gen. Pershing as he saluted America's guard division on parade, the proceeded to review and inspect minutely each unit and outfit, not forgetting the gallant Missouri mules, to which he administered an occasional "Well done" pats in passing.

The Second Division was massed on a front one kilometer long and averaging half a kilometer in depth. At the extreme left five consolidated bands, 300 pieces strong, charmed the captive Rhine with all the American melodies instead of the Prussian parade march to which a late Prussian corps formerly goose-stepped over this same plateau.

World's Greatest Line-Up.

From left to right the lineup saw the world's greatest shock troops, the 9th and 23rd Regular Infantry, the 5th and 6th Marines, then the machine gun battalions; next the light artillery, then the motorized heavy artillery, then the motorized divisional machine gun unit and, lastly, the engineers.

But the parade was more than a mere pageant. It proved that the Second Division was game to guard the Rhine and hold it as long as America might call on it to perform this duty.

I was privileged to accompany Gen. Pershing on his round of inspection between the well-disciplined ranks of the Marines. Again and again Gen. Pershing stopped, selected a man at random and sprang a searching question at him. In most cases a brief dramatic silence followed, as the Marine looked the Commander in Chief squarely in the eye. To many of the men Pershing put the proposition in the following variations:

"Suppose you were asked to stay here six months, a year, two years?"

Among the Marines I heard a striking unanimity of replies:

"I'd like to go home, sir, but I will stay on, of course;" or "I want to go home when my regiment goes;" or "I will sure stay as long as I am wanted here."

Pershing Praises Men.

Such were typical answers which Gen. Pershing received from the marines, and this held good for the division as a whole. In general, they wanted to go home, but were willing to tsay as long as necessary. This authoritative statement of the spirit of the office of occupation from the lips of the men themselves was perhaps the most important result of the review by Pershing. There was dramatic element, too, in the presentation to the honor men of the division beyond the Rhine, of medals and crosses for deeds performed on the Marne and the Meuse.

Pershing, from the rostrum of his dappled white horse, hailed these heroes as "The gallant men of the gallant division," and praised them for having given expression on battlefields to "the aggressive American spirit."

As typical of American democracy, at the head of the long line of honor men stood not Gen. Lejeune, commander of the division, who came only second, although he received the decoration of commander of the legion of honor, nor Gen. Neville, commanding the Marine Brigade, who received distinguished orders. First in line and temporarily outranking all the generals, stood a sergeant, barely able to speak English, and then with a strong accent—and to stammer a few embarrassed words when Pershing pinned a Congenial Medal of Honor, the supreme decoration for an American, on him, and thanked him personally and on behalf of the President and the American people.

Sergeant Has Five Medals.

Sergt. Louis Van Jersel, aged 25 went to New York, in February, 1917, from Copenhagen on the Danish sailing ship Clay Marks, but found his brief experience as a sailor so rough that he deserted in New York and got a job as a coal-heaver in Newark. Immediately after America's entry into the war, this live wire Hollander enlisted in the marines and applied for his first naturalization papers.

To date he has won five medals, two for saving lives, his war bag including the Croix de Guerre with palm, the Distinguished Service Cross and the Congressional Medal. The last he won for volunteering for night patrol acros the Meuse at Nouson.

After other patrols had failed to bring back vital information, he crossed the Mouson bridge in the face of heavy machine gun fire. He fell through a trap in the bridge, plunged into the water, swam to the opposite shore, explored the German position, located the German machine guns and got back with the full information needed.

But this much decorated Dutchman, who is now an American citizen in good standing does not want to remain in the service.

"Not for mine," he smiled.

He figures he has done his duty and he wants to get back to marry his sweetheart in Newark as soon as possible although he does not know what to do for a living when he does get discharged.

Passed in 12 Minutes.

Only five German Peasants, who had strayed to the top of the plateau from a nearby Rhine village, were native eye-witnesses of this historic tableau and inspiring picture, which ended as the Second Division turned squads right and the entire division moved past Gen. Pershing in the record time of 12 minutes, leaving behind an indelible impression of tremendous punching power.

WILSON SURE OF LEAGUE; OPPOSES PILLAGING OF FOE

President Believes Justice Is Problem Must Be Tackled. Absolute — Finds Many Things at Paris to Encourage Him.

By HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1919, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, March 15.—President Wilson has returned to Paris with certain and definite plans on several subjects that now engross the world's attention. In respect to other subjects he comes back with open mind, avoiding commitments until he shall have completed a survey of the situation which has arisen in the 27 days of his absence. He has plunged into the thick of things through extended conferences with Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau and E. M. House and it is now possible to outline a tentative program which he has laid out.

His return gives not only drive and speed but also direction to the wheels of the peace machine, which have been spinning since January. I was among those to greet him at Brest and to travel to Paris with him on the special train. It was not to be expected that his second visit would call out the same enthusiasm as did the first, but there were large crowds all along the line of travel and he was met at the Invalides Station by President and Mme. Poincaire and Premier Clemenceau and a guard of honor. Outside the station, several thousand Parisians cheered him heartily as he drove off to his new home.

Finds Much to Encourage Him.

So far as he has made his views known to others since his arrival, it may be said that his mind is flowing along these general lines:

The President feels that his absence from this storm center has enabled him to gain a clearer and less distorted perspective of the main course to be followed. He returns reinvigorated for his heavy tasks by the support he received in America, and his vigor has been sharpened by opposition. He finds much to encourage him in the general outlook, while realizing that differences will multiply as the climax approaches

Particularly is he sanguine of the adoption of the league of nations covenant. It may be said authoritatively that he has no fears on that score at home, for he is convinced that the great majority of his countrymen are single-minded in support of the projct. So much does he feel this to be the case that he is giving little or no thought to amendments to the charter which was given to the world on the day he left Paris.

There may be a few changes, but they will be of no moment and in all probability they will not include specific reference to the Monroe Doctrine, which the President regards as not even remotely threatened.

Of greater importance is the President's definite intention to insist that the League of Nations project be adopted forthwith and that it shall be embraced in the treaty with Germany. This announcement belies the statement emanating from America that the league scheme will be laid aside until peace shall have been concluded with the enemy nations.

League Balance for Germany.

President Wilson's advisers, if he has any, are as one with him in this position, agreeing fully with him that the league offers distinct compensation to Germany as a balance against the severity of the terms that will be imposed upon that country.

Promptly on the arrival of the President in Paris he received several hundred dispatches from America, urging him to be firm in his adhesion to the league. One message said that Amherst College, which may be regarded as Republican in general sentiment, has voted something like 100 to 60, in favor of the league.

Such changes as may be found necessary will be worked out by E. M. House and Lord Robert Cecil, who will begin their task at once, so as to be ready for the plenary session which, according to present plans, is to be asked to give formal approval to the completed constitution.

Concerning Germany, the President's attitude is unchanged, except that perhaps it has become more decisive than before. He is determined that Germany shall learn thoroughly the lesson of the war and that no leniency should be granted that might blunt the edge of defeat and let it be easily forgotten. But with all the firmness of his nature he is equally determined that there must be no errors tending toward the other extreme.

It may not be amiss to quote him directly on this point as being insistent that Germany shall be neither looted nor starved. Obviously he has predicated his attitude on the assumption that Germany is prepared to discharge in good faith the obligations that are to be imposed upon her.

Those close to the President find in him a striking resemblance to President Lincoln at the end of the Civil War. Consciously or unconsciously, he has been modelling his conduct after the example of that great man, in whose life he has always found inspiration and comfort. Lincoln's plea at Gettysburg for "charity for all, malice toward none," is helping to govern the President at this time. Justice is his major theme, as he uttered it last September in the Metropolitan Opera House, when he said solemnly: "We must be just not only to those we want to be just to, but to those to whom we may not wish to be just."

Thinks Justice Is Absolute.

It may be said that the President does not mind that wide and unbridgeable gulf that many see lying between ethics and practicality. He thinks justice is not relative, but absolute and he purposes to act on that assumption.

Those in his confidence say that more than ever he is willing to listen to the voice of the people and it is his heart's wish to make their desires articulate. But he declines to be frightened into any false position by any bogies that may be conjured up in the name of public opinion. More than ever he is insistent that his faculty of interpreting the public mind is as keen as the insight of those who assume to speak for the public, whether the oracles be American, French or British.

The word annexation is not commonly heard in the peace councils, but there is nevertheless the question of the annexation of the Saar Valley by France and the acquisition of Danzig and contiguous territory by the new Poland.

Other boundary disputes to be submitted to the American executive include those between Italy and Jugo-Slavia, between the Jugo-Slav possessions and Hungary, between Rumania and Jugo-Slavia; between Czecho-Slavonia and Poland, between Greece and Bulgaria, and still others springing from the desire of small nations to grow and become powerful.

The persistency and vigor with which many of these claims are advanced scarcely win the belief that the lesson of Germany's debacle has been well learned; that power does not spell happiness or security, but, on the contrary, begets the itch for more power and breeds envy and distrust. Apparently the small nations who are reaching for extended territory have not taken this lesson to heart.

Not the least of the taks before the President is the decision he must make in relation to Palestine, another decision in respect to the mandatory which America may be willing to assume, with direct reference to taking Armenia under our wing.

"Gets-It" Peels My Corns Off!

Any Corn or Callus Comes Off Peacefully, Painlessly. Never Fails.

It's almost a picnic to get rid of a corn or callus the "Gets-It" way. You spend 2 or 3 seconds putting on 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It," about as simple as putting on your hat. "Gets-It" does away forever with "contraptions," "wrappy" plasters, greasy ointments that rub off, blood-letting knives and scissors that snip into the "quick." "Gets-It" eases pain. Your "jumpy" corn shrinks, dies, loosens from the toe. You peel the corn painlessly from your toe in one complete piece. That's where the picnic comes in—you peel it off as you would a banana peel. Nothing else but "Gets-It" can do it. Get peaceful common-sense "Gets-It."

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. M'f'd by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in St. Louis and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley Drug Co. and Keiffer Drug Co.—ADV.

U. S. to Get Imperator and Eight Other Big Ships.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 15.—Under the agreement which the Germans made at Brussels, the United States will receive eight German ships, which will be ready to go to sea within four days. The vessels are the Zeppelin, of 15,200 tons; the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm, 17,000 tons; the Graf Waldersee, 13,000 tons; the Patricia, 14,466 tons; the Cap Finisterre, 14,509 tons; the Pretoria, 13,200 tons; the Cleveland, 16,900 tons, and the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, 25,000 tons.

The giant Imperator of 52,000 tons also will go to the United States. The Imperator is stuck in the mud, but it is believed she can be floated in a few days. The total ships made available to the allies under the agreement number more than 700, approximately 1,500,000 tons.

The vessels going to the United States are passenger ships on account of the American desire to use them for the transport of troops.

There is available in England for immediate movement to Germany approximately 30,000 tons of pork products, 5000 tons of beans, 5000 tons of rice and 15,000 tons of cereals. The United States has in Rotterdam and on the way there approximately 75,000 tons of breadstuffs.

A summary of the agreement shows that payment by Germany will be made by freight hire accruing to the Germans for the use of the shipping, and part from credits that Germany may continue to establish and maintain in neutral countries; part from German exports; part from the sale of German-owned foreign securities and part by the use of German gold.

The Germans agreed to place a deposit of gold in the National Bank of Belgium at Brussels for use as collateral.

Those going to France and England immediately are cargo vessels in neutral ports in South and Central America and the Dutch East Indies. They will be permitted to leave with cargoes for Germany; with German crews, but under allied flags. When ships put out from German ports to be handed over they will be manned by Germans, but on arrival in allied ports the crews will be replaced by allied crews and the Germans returned.

FARRIS APPEARS FIRST TIME AT PRISON INQUIRY

Representative Who Filed Charges of Mismanagement Brings Out Evidence of Free Meals.

COOK SERVED STEAK TO WHISKY DRUMMER

Witnesses Also Tell of Convict Running Soft Drink Stand for His Own Profit, Paying for Privilege.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 15.—The investigation of the penitentiary by a special committee from the House was changed from an ex-parte proceeding today, and took on all the aspects of a real inquiry when Representative Frank H. Farris, who filed the charges, made his first appearance as a member of the committee.

The committee has held several meetings since it was appointed following the adoption by the House of the Farris resolution, charging mismanagement at the State prison.

Farris had not appeared at previous meetings, and the proceedings consisted of a systematic vindication of the Prison Board by its members and their employes.

Representative Keith of Iron County also appeared before the committee today, and enlivened the proceedings by quizing William R. Painter, chairman of the Prison Board, about the pardon of a Reynolds County man and woman, on the recommendation of Senator Carter M. Buford. Keith declared the board had issued the pardon immediately after the Springfield Court of Appeals had affirmed the sentence, but before either of the convicted parties had begun serving their terms.

Free Meals for Salesmen.

It developed today that certain guards and officials get their meals free at the penitentiary and that other officials have quarters where they sleep in the armory building.

Officials of the prison admitted on the stand that Dan Becker, a whisky drummer, is a favorite visitor at the prison and sleeps and gets his meals there.

Chief Cook Fitzgerald testified that Becker came down to the dining room and ordered a steak and that he prepared his dinner and had it served.

He said Becker told him he had been sent down but did not say who sent him.

G. W. Osborne, prison tailor, testified that officials of the prison get their clothes cleaned and pressed without charge, but denied that he makes clothing for the officials or employes.

Wall Left Unguarded.

J. H. Creel, a wall guard, told the committee that there was no guard in his tower on the night when two prisoners escaped over the wall, and that he had gone home to Carrollton to vote.

Creel is an appointee of Painter, whose home is also at Carrollton.

W. T. Morris, yard boss at the prison, testified that, although "rings" have been abolished, prisoners still are suspended in handcuffs as punishment for breaches of rules. He said that one prisoner named McKay had been kept in a cell for several years as punishment.

Morris also testified that "foot-and-a-half" Butler, sent up from Kansas City for murder, and recently paroled after serving seven years of a 45-year sentence, ran a soft drink stand for his own profit. Farris tried to bring out from Morris that cakes were baked in the prison to supply this stand, but Morris said he did not know of this, or where Butler's profits went.

It was brought out that after Butler was paroled, two other convicts were chosen to run the soft drink stand from which they get the profits.

Farris also brought out that 30 convicts, including the prison ball team and band, were sent to St. Louis last year on an excursion, and that on the way back one prisoner escaped and has not been recaptured.

Clothes Cleaned and Pressed.

Morris said one of the prisoners cleaned and pressed the clothing of himself and other guards. Farris asked if the prisoner did not also make clothes for the guards, but Morris said he did not know.

Morris testified when a factory burned several years ago in the prison, the hydrants were frozen and said the factory might otherwise have been saved.

A complaint was read from the Prosecuting Attorney of Centerville, who wrote that Robert Miller, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for an atrocious crime, was released in two years on a plea that he had tuberculosis. The letter stated that Miller was not ill.

Farris asked Morris if Becker ever had made a present of a driving mare to a prison official. Morris said he did not know. Warden Porter Gilvin later told the Post-Dispatch correspondent that Becker had given him a driving mare.

"Becker is a friend of mine and his family are friends of my family. He is wealthy and made me a present of the mare," said Gilvin.

Fitzgerald testified that he baked the cakes for the private store, run by convicts in the prison kitchens. In answer to a question by Farris he said he made a requisition on the prison commissary for the materials that went into the cakes. He said he baked 20 cakes two feet square or about 80 square feet of cakes per week for the store.

$10 a Day for Privilege.

Chairman Painter testified that the store is a stand on the prison playground and that it is operated on Saturdays and Sundays.

He said that "foot-and-a-half" Butler, before his parole, paid $10 per day for the store privilege. This money he said went into a general convicts' fund, which is used for the benefit of the prisoners.

Farris asked Painter if he did not know that when Butler left the prison he took $4000, which represented his profits from the prison store.

"I know no more about Butler's private affairs than the man in the moon," Painter said. In reply to other questions as to why Butler was paroled in spite of his criminal record, Painter said the Prison Board had revoked a parole of Butler issued by the former board, and that members of this board never had been sure that their action in revoking the parole was justified. The last parole of Butler, Painter said, was not recommended by anybody.

Farris brought out the facts that the penitentiary had bought 5000 tons of coal last summer at the suggestion of Lieut.-Gov. Wallace Crossley, fuel administrator of Missouri, and that the entire mass had taken fire and had burned intermittently for six weeks before it was extinguished.

Little Lost, Painter Says.

Painter said that very little coal was lost because as fast as the fire reached it, it was hauled away in iron wheelbarrows and used in the boilers. The principal loss in connection with the burning of the coal, he said, was sustained in the loss of labor from the large number of men who were kept handling it.

Representative Keith asked Painter if the board had not recommended a pardon for Charles Williams and Mrs. Tom Adams of Reynolds county who had been convicted of gross misconduct in the Reynolds county circuit court following the divorcing of Mrs. Adams by her husband, and before they had begun to serve their sentences. He also asked Painter if attorneys for the prosecution had been notified of the hearing or given an opportunity to resist the granting of executive clemency. Painter agreed that no notice had been given.

Keith was sworn, and Painter asked him if he had not seen the defendant, Williams, in Jefferson City, and if Williams had not told Keith he was trying to obtain a pardon from the prison board. Keith said he had seen Williams, but did not believe the board would consider his application.

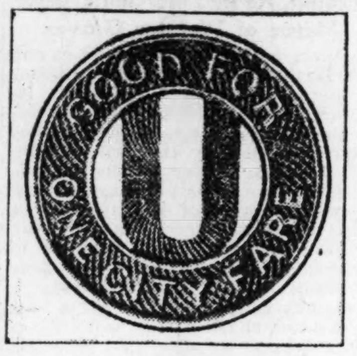
'U-Nickel' to Pay Your U. R. Fare After April 1

Doughnut-Shaped Metal Disc, With 'U' Wedged Into Hole, to Be Sold in Bunches of 25 and 50, at 6 Cents Each.



U. R.'S NEW FARE DISC.

Coming, on April 1—the "U-nickel!"

The "U-nickel" is the thing to pay your street car fare with. It is a metal disc, the size of the inside circle on a dime, and the United Railways will sell them in packages of 25 and 50 at the rate of 6 cents each.

The nickname comes from the large "U" in the center of each, and the fact that the "U-nickel" is what the U. R. will collect for a nickel car ride. It was at first suggested that they be called "UR-nickels," but this was rejected by straphangers, who say they are not "your nickels," but the United Railways' 6 cents.

They are now a dull yellow, but constant circulation from passengers' pockets to fare boxes and back again—at 6 cents for each return trip—may indicate a brighter future for them. They are of composition metal, and officials said there appeared to be some brass in their (the "U-nickels") composition.

Tickets to Be Withdrawn.

Six-cent fare tickets, which have not proven popular with passengers will be withdrawn. The "U-nickels" will be dropped in the fare boxes, as nickels and pennies are at present. The company believes they will be handier, as they can be carried in pockets with other change, and there is a fond hope that passengers will part with them somewhat more contentedly than with two coins.

The "U-nickel" is not solid. It is shaped like a flat doughnut, with the "U" wedged into the hole. Some horny-handed straphangers to each other remarked yesterday, after the announcement, that the solid part represented what the company gets, and the hole what "U" get. Others pointed out, however, that new straps have been installed in many cars recently.

On one side of the disc are the words, "Good for one city fare," and on the other, "United Railways Co. of St. Louis." There also appears on one side the date 1918, as it had been intended to use them last year.

Debut Delayed.

Their debut was delayed by the necessity of remodeling the fare boxes, which would only register dimes, nickels and pennies. Hereafter they will also register "U-nickels" and, in addition, a larger disc, if such are issued as children's tickets. They will be sold at first in envelopes, but later in rolls, such as those in which coins are encased at banks. Conductors may sell them back after they pass through the register. Half a million are on hand and a million will be here April 1.

It was pointed out yesterday that, by selling "U-nickels," the company will collect considerable money in advance, and always will have large amount of passengers' money on hand, which may be put on interest. The average daily number of fares is 673,635. If 400,000, or less than two-thirds of the passengers buy "U-nickels," the interest, computed at 5 per cent, will be $60,000 a year, or 15 cents a year for each passenger, which the company will get. It is believed that the cost of making the discs will be considerably less than that.

cautioned his partner, "and get all those diamonds in the trays."

The robber did as he was told, and then signalled the other, who stood guard over Hendler and Miss Allen, to come away. As the man ran from the store, Hendler, who had a revolver concealed in the cage, fired a shot, but it went through the glass in the partitions of the cage and into the ceiling, instead of through the grating of the cage which is on a direct line with the door.

The robbers ran south to Morgan and east to Theresa avenue, followed at some distance by Hendler, who fired four shots at them. One of the robbers turned three times and fired back at Hendler, keeping him at a safe distance.

Escape in Stolen Auto.

There was an automobile standing at Theresa and Morgan, into which the robbers clambered. They turned north on Theresa to Bell and east on Bell at high speed. At this turn the car threw the front left tire, but the robbers did not stop. The car was found at 6 p. m., about six miles from the robbery and about four blocks from a car line. It was identified as a seven-passenger Moon touring car reported stolen from Philip J. Miller, 3629 North Eleventh street, a baker, on Salisbury street, between Eleventh and Fourteenth streets. Miller reported the theft of the car at 4:45 p. m.

Some men in a saloon at Natural Bridge and Arlington told the police they saw four men standing by the car, but at the time did not know that the men had abandoned it.

Hendler said the jewelry and diamonds were unclaimed pledges on which he loaned $1605.80, but which were really worth between $4000 and $5000. He carried $1000 theft insurance.

Another robbery took place at 10 o'clock last night, when three negroes, with handkerchiefs tied across the lower part of their faces, held up Samuel Balber, proprietor of a meat shop and grocery at 4300 Fairfax avenue, in his store, and took $25 from his pockets and $100 from the cash registers.

WILSON SHOULD ASK LODGE TO AID HIM, SAYS M'CORMICK

Senator-Elect Declares President Should Also Invite Knox and Hitchcock to Paris.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Medill McCormick, Republican Senator-elect from Illinois, issued a statement asserting that any censorship upon news from America to Great Britain and France could have been imposed only to prevent publication of the opinion of the American people and the attitude of Senators toward the constitution of the league of nations.

"Europe must come to understand that Mr. Wilson is attempting a coup d'etat in defiance of the decision of the common people of America uttered at the last election," the statement said.

"Sixty Senators out of 96, Democrats as well as Republicans among them, share the opinion expressed by the 39 signatories to the Knox-Lodge resolution. Mr. Hughes, Mr. Bryan and even Mr. Taft say that the constitution as proposed requires amendments."

Mr. McCormick said the peace conferees should first make peace with Germany and then the President "ought to put aside his pride," and invite Senators Lodge and Knox, Republicans, and Senator Hitchcock, Democrat, to the peace conference to draft a league of nations which the American people and the Senate could approve.

MAX EASTMAN SPEAKS IN DEFENSE OF SOVIETS

Many Women, Several from West End, in Audience at New Club Hall.

Max Eastman, editor of the Liberator, a New York paper whose recent issues have been given to a defense of the Russian Soviets, delivered the defense in person at New Club Hall, Thirteenth street and Chouteau avenue last night to an audience of about 800 persons, in which there were many women, several of them from the West End. A delegation of the Artists' Guild also was present.

Eastman denounced the "capitalistic" press, charging that it suppressed the truth about Russia. When he had concluded, Isaac McBride, a companion, who accompanied him to the city, appealed for subscriptions, to stock of the Liberator and yearly subscription, declaring that the Liberator had a correspondent in Russia prepared to furnish the truth.

The Socialist party of St. Louis had announced that Eastman would speak on The League of Nations. He did not mention the league in his address, though in response to a question afterwards he said that he did not have to go further than the first two provisions of the proposed constitution to disapprove it.

On the League Constitution.

"I believe that a league of the free peoples of the earth may be necessary to prevent war," he said. "However, I do not believe that the proposed constitution is a constitution of a league of the free peoples of the earth. It is an alliance of the five victorious nations to perpetuate their victory. Take the first provision. It provides for a sort of parliament in which the member nations each shall have one vote. That sounds well. But the very next provision says that the business of the league shall be conducted by an Executive Committee which shall consist of representatives of the United States, France, England, Italy and Japan four other representatives to be chosen by the parliament. It is the Supreme War Council. It is just such an alliance as victors always have formed after their victory. I always look first to see where the sovereign power lies. In the proposed constitution of the league of nations it does not lie with the free peoples of the earth."

Indorses Soviets.

Eastman asked if his audience ever had seen in the American press the fact that two of the first acts of the Russian Soviets were to provide playgrounds for children and to create a school system for the education of the masses. He denied that the Soviet Government was a Government of bloodshed, citing the Soviet of Eastern Siberia, which includes Vladivostok, as an example. He said there was no bloodshed among contesting factions until the allies came to the aid of the counter-revolutionists and caused the execution of nine Soviet leaders. He called the recent published report that the women over 18 years old had been nationalized a lie.

Kate Richards O'Hare, who will depart April 14 to begin a five-year sentence in Fort Leavenworth imposed for her opposition to the selective service act in a North Dakota speech, said that only by the publication of such papers as The Liberator could those in prison and those who are about to go to prison hope to be freed. Eastman was tried last autumn in New York as a draft obstructionist, but the jury disagreed. He testified that President Wilson had convinced him that this war was for freedom.

After Mrs. O'Hare spoke, her son, Richard O'Hare, played "How Can I Bear to Leave Thee?" on a cornet as an encore to what was announced as "The Red Flag," but which was the old Sunday school hymn, "Beulah Land."

Among those present were Mrs. Walter McNabb Miller, Miss Mary Bulkley, Mrs. David O'Neil, Dr. Gustave Lippmann, Gustav Tuckermann and Percy Werner.

LIQUOR WAR TAX HERE TO BE MUCH GREATER THAN EXPECTED

The additional war tax collection on liquors in the St. Louis internal revenue district will be between $750,000 and $1,000,000, which is larger than expected, Charles G. Roberts, internal revenue agent, said yesterday. The district includes St. Louis and 53 counties in Eastern Missouri.

Some of the largest distillers will pay as much as $150,000, Rogers says. The tax now being applied is $3.20 a gallon, making the total war tax of $6.40 a gallon.

10 CENTS TO BE PAID FOR RECALL SIGNATURES

Civic League Will Increase Reward to Get Enough Names Before Midnight Thursday.

An appeal for more canvassers to circulate petitions for the recall of Mayor Kiel, at the rate of 10 cents a name for valid signatures, was issued yesterday by the Civic League. The office of the Civic League, in the Board of Education building, at Ninth and Locust streets, and the office of the Citizens' Referendum League, in the Pontiac Building, Seventh and Market streets, will be open today and this evening for the employment of canvassers, the distribution of petition blanks and the receiving of reports.

The recall is being sought by the two leagues because of the Mayor's mill tax and franchise agreement with the United Railways Co.

Secretary Budenz of the Civic League said last evening that the count to be made today of signatures obtained up to last night would probably show that the signatures of 20 per cent of the registered voters of 19 wards have been obtained. The petitions, which must be filed with the Election Board before midnight Thursday must have, together with those now in the board's hands, the signatures of 20 per cent of all the registered voters of the city, this total to include 20 per cent of the voters in two-thirds (19) of the wards.

This requirement of the city charter means that, even after having obtained 20 per cent in 19 wards, the recall workers must get enough more signatures to complete 20 per cent of the total number of voters. This requirement, Budenz said yesterday, cannot be fulfilled unless a large number of canvassers can be obtained for the work of the closing days. Canvassers can earn $3 to $7 a day, he said.

The names are being carefully checked up with the registration lists, and it is believed that the number of those rejected by the Election Board will be small. Canvassers are warned against taking the signature of any person who is not a registered voter, or who has signed previously.

The petitions are being kept in steel vaults in the Night and Day Bank, for protection against burglary such as was committed last summer in the case of petitions for a referendum vote on the so-called compromise ordinance, bestowing an extension of franchises on the United Railways. That ordinance was later repealed, making the vote unnecessary.

Civic and Referendum Leagues Ask for Aid in Recall Effort

THE Civic League and the Citizens' Referendum League, which are circulating petitions for the recall of Mayor Kiel, yesterday issued the following statement:

"With the goal almost in sight, we must appeal to the people of St. Louis to assist us in an especial way during the next few days, if they desire to free this city from the domination of the United Railways Co.

"Unless this is done, there is danger of our losing all that we have gained up to date. All the money, time and labor expended to present this question to the people will have gone for naught. The only need during this entire campaign has been canvassers.

"The overwhelming majority of the people of this city are against the Mayor's secretly framed deal. Unless gotten to in some way, however, there is no way for them to register this feeling on their part. The absurdly difficult charter provisions on the recall can be met only by having enough men as canvassers to reach the necessary number of registered voters throughout the city and in the 19 needed wards.

"Men who devote much time to this work should be remunerated, and we desire to pay them for their efforts. Now that we have by the slow house-to-house canvass obtained a margin in the 19 needed wards, we must obtain an absolutely safe margin throughout the city in order to defeat all technicalities that may be raised by a majority of the Election Commissioners to the submission of this question to the people.

"The opportunity for the people to assert themselves has never been so great. Anyone desiring to do his bit for St. Louis can apply to Room 607 Pontiac Building, Seventh and Market streets, and be put on as a canvasser in this last effort.

"Those men and women who have hitherto served voluntarily are now earnestly requested to put forth another effort in securing signatures in order that their past work may not fail."

TWO PARTIES AGREE ON 3 CANDIDATES FOR SCHOOL BOARD

committee of business men, acting under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

Four members of the committee opposed this action, and favored renominating the three retiring Democratic members of the Board of Education, who are Richard Murphy, Frank Gannon and B. H. Pluempe. These committeemen were Tom Butler of the 19th Ward, Barney Flatley of the 20th, Phil Dwyer of the 22d and E. B. Alexander of the 25th. Arthur Lancaster of the Sixth was absent, without a proxy.

The Democratic Meeting.

Chairman Daley called the convention to order, and Verne R. C. Lacy was made temporary chairman and John Fitzsimmons temporary secretary, and were soon afterward named as permanent chairman and secretary. Peter Gunn, as chairman of the resolutions committee, presented the platform, which was adopted unanimously. It was understood to have been written by Flint Garrison, the party nominee for president of the Board of Aldermen.

J. D. Lukenbill, a delegate, who has a grocery store near the United Railways headquarters, protested that the expressions about the United Railways Co. in the platform were too severe, but he was not heard to vote against the adoption of the platform.

The nominations for the Board of Education were then taken up. Besides the three who were chosen, two of the retiring members, Murphy and Gannon, were placed before the convention. Gannon is assistant treasurer of the United Railways Co. Joseph Kane of the Nineteenth Ward, in urging the nomination of Murphy, alluded to the controversy between Supt. Withers and Principal Miller, of McKinley High School, in which Murphy took the side of the principal. This controversy was over a matter of discipline relating to school morals, and the speaker declared that Murphy had stood for morality. He also spoke of Murphy's work, when president of the board, in stimulating the sale of Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps by school children.

With three to nominate, the vote was: McDonald, 349; Cullinane, 333; Tobin, 289; Murphy, 97; Gannon, 90.

A committee consisting of Frank O'Neil, Michael Whalen and Gaty Pallen, was then named to go to the Republican convention and take the names of the Democratic nominees. The committee left at 4:15, and returned two hours later, bringing the news that the Republicans had accepted McDonald and Tobin, and had refused to accept Cullinane, and had placed Murphy on the ticket instead. Whalen said John Schmoll, Republican city chairman, appeared to be chiefly responsible for this action.

A caucus was held, and it was then voted to place the name of Dr. Wolfner, the Republican nominee, on the Democratic bipartisan ticket, but to keep Cullinane on the ticket. Garrison, nominee for President of the Board of Aldermen, then made a speech.

The Republican Convention.

The Republican convention opened after 3 p. m. Chairman Schmoll presided, and spoke in favor of the selection of a bipartisan Board of Education ticket. He alluded to a report, circulated during the day, that a $15,000 campaign fund had been promised to the Democratic committee if it should nominate for the Board of Education men favored by the committee formed under Chamber of Commerce auspices to recommend candidates. He said he hoped this report was not true. Secretary Bunn of the Chamber of Commerce had previously declared that the Chamber of Commerce had not promised any financial help to any political committee.

He explained the circumstances which made it necessary, under the bi-partisan arrangement, to nominate three Democrats and only one Republican, to preserve the party balance of the Board of Education.

Resolution on Howe's Death.

The convention chose John H. Matthews, president of the School Patrons' Alliance, as chairman; Robert E. Moore as secretary, George Coombs assistant secretary, and Louis (Tub) Becker sergeant-at-arms. A resolution of respect and condolence on the death of Jeptha D. Howe, former chairman of the city committee, was adopted on the motion of Becker.

United States Senator Spencer made the principal speech of the convention, defending his attitude, previously announced, in regard to the league of nations proposal, and dwelling on the necessity for nonpartisan school administration.

Long Conference Held.

The nominations for the Board of Education were the subject of a long conference, before the convention and intermittently after it had begun, in which Schmoll, Mayor Kiel, Collector Koeln, G. A. Buder and Edward Foristel were leading participants. Koeln and Buder argued for placing the names of the retiring Democratic members on the Republican ticket—Murphy, Gannon and Pluempe—regardless of what the Democratic convention did. Schmoll did not care to go so far as this, but was favorable to Murphy. After the news of the action of the Democratic convention was received, it was decided to accept McDonald and Tobin and reject Cullinane, and ward leaders were called into consultation on this plan.

This program went through harmoniously, and only the four slated nominees, Wolfner, McDonald, Tobin and Murphy, were placed before the convention. The report of the Resolutions Committee, which accompanied the platform, indorsed the four retiring members of the board, Wolfner, Murphy, Gannon and Pluempe, by name, as having served faithfully, and this report was adopted unanimously.

H. N. Morgan, superintendent of the workhouse, placed Murphy's name before the convention, and praised him as a faithful public servant. He said no delegate would be ashamed to go home and tell his children that he had voted for Murphy. The unanimous vote of the convention, 273, was cast for the four slated nominees. The Democratic envoys, who were in waiting, then went back to their convention.

Garrison Says Big Job Will Be to Keep Issue Clear.

In his speech before the Democratic city convention, Flint Garrison, nominee for the Board of Aldermen, said he had been drafted, and was ready to fight, asking no quarter and giving none.

"Our chief job will be to keep the issue clear," he said. "The figureheads in the great machine opposing us are not exceptionally intelligent, but they have back of them a group of the shrewdest, most powerful and most unscrupulous men in town. They cannot defend their position in this issue, and they will constantly endeavor to shift the fight to new ground. We've got them in their proper corner, and we must force them to stay there and fight it out.

"Between now and April 1 they will move heaven and earth to raise false issues. They will circulate lies about me, about every candidate on the ticket, and about you in general. Their tactics will be the favorite tactics of the pickpocket. They will strive to create a counter-excitement. Like the pickpocket, who arranges his accomplices to start a fake fight at the other end of the car, so that when you crane your neck to see what is going on he can lift your watch and pocketbook, so will these men, during the progress of the campaign, endeavor to create some false issue, and divert the attention of the people of St. Louis from the real issue.

"But we must not let them get away with this old dodge of the pickpocket. We must refuse to let them escape. We must make them defend their own acts, compel them to stand before the people of St. Louis and declare themselves as to whether they favor or disfavor that great mass of inefficiency and extravagance now existing in the city hall, and whether they command or condemn the complete surrender of the city's rights to the biggest source of demoralization this town has ever had, the United Railways Co. Make them come out of their holes, show themselves, declare themselves and then let the people decide."

Aloe Explains How He Reconciles Platform With His Expressed Views.

President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen issued a statement, replying to the question of a Post-Dispatch reporter, whether he considered the Republican platform, with its commendation of Mayor Kiel's United Railway record, consistent with his own repudiation of the general validation of franchises, which was held to be involved in the Mayor's action. He said:

"I stand squarely on the platform as written. I approve most heartily the collection of the mill tax and the final ending of the 15 years of bitter litigation to determine its validity.

"The platform is in entire harmony with my previously declared position as opposed to any franchise extensions, other than the Jefferson avenue line, unless authorized by the legislative act of the Board of Aldermen according to the provisions of the charter.

"As to the stipulation with reference to the question of the extension of franchises other than the Jefferson avenue line, to which I took exception and notified the City Counselor that I had not concurred and would not concur in that feature of the proposed arrangement, the City Counselor replied: 'The stipulation, which in fact should be called a memorandum, was not filed in court, never was expected to be filed in court. It was not recorded and was never expected to be recorded with the City Register; it was not signed by anyone on the part of the city who has any authority to sign a contract, because all the contracts must be authorized by ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen, and must be signed by the party charged with such duty by law, and when not specially charged, must be countersigned by the Comptroller. * * * If any property holder should seek to invoke the Circuit Attorney to challenge the right of any line to operate when its franchise expires, such property holder will not be thrown out of court by this memorandum, and if the city as a municipality should seek to make such a contest, it would not be thrown out of court by reason of this memorandum, and if the United Railways Co. should set up by way of defense this opinion of the law department, the trial court would immediately on motion strike such matter out as being entirely extraneous, and not an issue. No one ever expected it to have anysuch legal effect and it certainly does not have any such legal effect. * * * The United Railways Co. claims no franchise right as a result of this stipulation; it has never indicated that this memorandum, signed by members of the law department, gave it a franchise, or any other right to operate or do a street railway business. The stipulation was prepared as a memorandum, and was intended to serve as nothing more than such.'

"I am informed that Judge Henry S. Priest, legal adviser of the United Railways Co., said that the stipulation would not accomplish its purport, and that if he (Judge Priest) had not been in New York at the time the agreement was prepared, the superfluous stipulation would not have been included.

"It was therefore deemed unnecessary by our party candidates to refer to the same in the platform."

Cullinane Says Schmoll Scratched His Name From List.

William Cullinane, who was nominated for the Board of Education by the Democratic city convention, on recommendation of a Chamber of Commerce committee, but whose name was not accepted by the Republican convention, said last night to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"I am reliably informed that when a committee from the Democratic convention handed the list of the Democratic nominees to John Schmoll, chairman of the Republican City Committee, Mr. Schmoll looked at the list, and drew a pencil through my name, saying, "He will not do, under any circumstances. He is not the proper man for the place.'

"I consider this assertion injurious to my reputation, and I intend to require Mr. Schmoll to prove the charge that I am not a proper man for the place. I was a member of the board for six years, from 1907 to 1913, and I refer to those who served with me on the board at that time as to the quality of the service I rendered. Among my associates on the board at that time were W. Palmer Clarkson, Christopher Johnson, Judge Cave, Dr. F. L. Magoon, H. C. Garneau, Robert Moore and R. S. Colnon. I did not seek the nomination at this time, and I considered it an honor to be suggested, by the committee and approved by the convention, so accepted."

Democratic Committeeman Condemns Convention.

John R. McCarthy, member of the Democratic City Committee from the Sixteenth Ward, who has been inactive in the committee's affairs recently, and who was represented by a proxy at yesterday's convention, made a curbstone speech in front of the convention hall last evening and condemned the convention for having been, as he charged, subservient to the Chamber of Commerce in making its nominations for the Board of Education. He said a party should not be subservient to a civic organization, any more than to a religious organization. The nominees chosen by the convention were not suggested by the Chamber of Commerce, but by a committee of business and professional men, named at a meeting called by the chamber.

GIRL DISAPPEARS AFTER DREAM

Tessie Lyons Tells of Dead Mother's Warning to "Be Careful."

A peculiar story was related yesterday to the police in connection with the disappearance of Tessie Lyons, 16 years old, from the home of her father, John Lyons, 2715 North Eleventh street.

The girl's mother died when she was 3 years old and she had no personal recollections of her. About a month ago she went to her stepmother, apparently perplexed, and asked what her mother looked like. She asked if she wore her hair in braids down her back. She said that a woman who resembled pictures of her mother had appeared in her dreams and warned her: "Be careful, be careful." She disappeared the next day.

MAYS ASKS CLARK TO STATE HIS POSITION ON LEAGUE

Representative, in Telegram, Repeats Assertion Former Speaker Said Plan Would Not Be Ratified.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Champ Clark was asked to declare his position on the league of nations, in a telegram sent to him at New Orleans by Representative Mays of Utah, who repeated his assertion that the former Speaker had said in his presence that the league constitution "has as much chance of being ratified as you have of being Pope of Rome."

Clark has publicly denied making such a statement. Mays' message, which was made public tonight by the organization of Democratic members of the House who oppose the selection of Clark as minority leader in the next Congress, said the former Speaker's reference to the league was made on the day Senator Reed of Missouri spoke against it in the Senate and that Clark had declared that Reed's argument was unanswerable.

"All other prominent public men have announced their position on this vital public question," said Mays, "even Bryan, from a sick bed, declaring the covenant of peace to be the greatest forward step in a thousand years, suggesting minor amendments. May we ask what are your suggestions? We desire you to come into the open like other public men assuming to lead in official position. We remember you did not vote for the war resolution and that you spoke and voted against the selective draft urged by the President. We remember your attitude throughout the period of the war as being out of sympathy with the administration and the majority of your Democratic colleagues.

"Do you propose to act in harmony with the majority view or to compel the majority to act in accordance with your views? Are you with Lodge, Penrose, Borah and Reed, or are you with the President and for the league of nations?"

MAN ACCUSED OF AIDING BOYS IN HOLDUP HELD FOR INQUIRY

Accusers Said to Have Admitted Several Robberies, and Charged With Shooting Official.

The police are holding Henry Beaver, 24 years old, of 6764 Hoffman place, pending an investigation of the statements of two other youths that he participated in several recent holdups staged by them near the Western city limits. The two youths who implicated Beaver are held for shooting Mayor James H. Jensen of Richmond Heights, when he attempted to rescue two men who were being held up near his home early last Sunday morning.

Beaver denies being involved in any of the holdups. His accusers are Jesse L. Brown, 19, of 6134 Armeda place, and Walter Browne, also 19, of 1564 Buck place. The police say they have admitted holding up Martin Boyer, 3401 Oxford avenue; Clarence Funk of 7135 Bruno avenue, and Charles and Fred Heese of 348 Marshall avenue, Richmond Heights.

When Boyer was summoned to the Mounted District Station to identify Brown and Browne as the youths who held him up and robbed him of $32 March 6, he was unable to do so. Jesse, the police say, then stated to Boyer that he and his companion were the robbers.

QUITS JOB TO GET THIN, MAN TAKES IT TO GET FAT

East St. Louis Court Bailiff to Be Replaced by Former Deputy Who "Pined Away" as Machinist.

Desiring to reduce his weight, John Hubert, 6 feet 3 inches tall, yesterday resigned as Deputy Sheriff and Court Bailiff in East St. Louis to resume his former job as Sergeant of Police. As a coincidence, Abbey Laumann, 6 feet 5 inches tall, a former Deputy Sheriff, who has been losing weight as a machinist in St. Louis, has accepted the appointment to fill the vacancy, in order to take on weight.

Hubert weighed 254 pounds when he quit the Police Department a month ago to be a Deputy Sheriff. Now he weighs 272 pounds. "Walking about serving court summonses is good exercise but there is not enough of it," said Hubert yesterday. "Sitting in the courtroom all day listening to domestic misfits, divorce cases and lawsuits is trying on a man who has always been in the open, moving about, and when I discovered that I was gaining weight I became alarmed. Why, I have rebuilt my chicken house three times in the last months, simply to get exercise!"

Laumann quit the Deputy Sheriff job a year ago in order to enter essential employment. He has lost 60 pounds, now weighing 195 pounds. He says he is becoming too thin, and as he thoroughly understands the duties of Deputy Sheriff, he believes that is the kind of employment that will be beneficial to him.

PARIS HUMANITE CRITICISES PLAN OF DISARMAMENT

Socialist Journal Declares That Although Germany Is Weakened, Militarism Is Tolerated Among Allies.

By DR. E. J. DILLON,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright in Europe by the London Daily Telegraph; Copyright in the United States and Canada by the Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

(Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, March 14.—The Socialist and Syndicalist journals criticise bitterly the conditions of the disarmament of Germany, not because they abolish conscription in Central Europe, but because they tolerate militarism among the allies. Thus, Humanite writes: "Meanwhile, of course, the French and English armies will be maintained on a footing of several hundred thousand men, while our fleet and the British will continue growing freely, as in the past. Even America is making haste to construct dreadnoughts, cruisers and destroyers. Where are last year's snows and President Wilson's 14 points, that were accepted by all the belligerents?"

Having compared these military restrictions with those imposed by Napoleon on Prussia, the article continues: "What is consistently demanded today, not only by the Socialists, but by soldiers everywhere, is not fresh preparation for war, but an end of all wars.

"Want Complete Disarmament."

"What they want is complete disarmament and suppression of all militarism and a genuine society of nations. The council of ten does not appear to have taken the right way to bestow it upon the peoples who clamor for it. Already the covenants submitted to us by the conference has caused a grave disillusion. Today the conference represents to us an artificial limitation of arms which leaves intact all the dangers of conflict. That is not what the peoples anticipated after having suffered so poignantly. We know almost all the representatives of the victorious nations harbor ambitious designs of conquest which they can only realize by force. That is the source of the unrest which envelopes us more and more closely. That is also the source of disquietude for the future. If diplomatists refuse a peace of justice and right, their work will be superficial and still-born and the peoples will lose no time in presenting to them."

"The concensus of opinion in Germany is, as I apprehended, opposed to signature of the peace treaty if it contains the conditions foreshadowed by French and British publicists. Not only ministers like Brockdorff-Rantzau, but sincere radicals like Theodore Wolff and Prof. Quidde, are preaching the necessity of meeting all the terms with passive resistance. Quidde, speaking at a meeting in Frankfort Sunday, declared the Government should not humiliate the nation by affixing its signatures to these unjust terms.

Decision on Indemnity Payments.

If the Germans refuse to sign the preliminary peace treaty, the allies would undoubtedly be compelled to employ force, at least in Poland, to compel them to evacuate territory adjudged to that State. They might, however, utilize the Polish army for that purpose.

Besides a disarmament of Germany, such as renders that nation utterly impotent and therefore, in the judgment of some influential delegates relieves Germany's neighbors of the burden of perpetual war-readiness and all that it implies, a second decision was taken during March in Wilson's absence—the obligation of the Teutons to pay indemnification in the course of 30 years. The Echo de Paris, which sometimes reflects the views of influential circles, writes: "Either all this is meaningless or else is signifies that during 30 years our league of nations must hold under most vigorous control, or must govern, 70,000,000 Germans."

Le Journal characterizes this enterprise as colossal, but maintains it is indispensable and advises a permanent bond of union among all the war's associates. Going on to discuss the American parties' attitude toward the league of nations, it stigmatizes the conceptions of Senators Poindexter, Borah and Reed as disastrous.

It is expected that a wholly new scheme of the league of nations by a project drafted in Switzerland, which starts from the axiom that the neutrality which President Wilson's covenant implicity eleminates, shall be recognized, exalted and endowed with privileges, and each community which duly qualifies may attain a state of perpetual neutrality. This is a sort of political Nirvana to which nations in quest of perfection may aspire.

If European states could so far master sinister sentiments, as to abjure imperialistic ambition and settle down to the pacific development work of regeneration, it would be plain sailing. It is certain the peace conference will not succeed in abolishing armaments among allies or even military conscription, but the masses will probably refuse to provide funds for either. Poor Serbia, whose shattered finances require considerable assistance from the allies, feels obliged to create a new army, but has only contrived to organize six regiments as yet, owing partly to the lack of finanical resources.

Poland to Have Big Army.

The Poles would appear to be the sole people among the reconstituted states who are immune from internal troubles of that nature. The inter-allied commission's report on the smooth working of the Warsaw Government, in the scrupulous execuiton of the conference's injunction for humane behavior toward adversaries, challenges the admiration of the plenipotentiaries who discern in that country a potent bulwark against future peace-breakers. The commission announces with satisfaction that an enormous majority in the chamber at Warsaw voted for military conscription, and an army three quarters of a million strong will be organized against the Bolshevists as soon as arms and clothing are obtainable. Today an ordinary officer's uniform costs $2500.

The committee on Polish frontiers presented an almost unanimous report today, according to which Dantzig, Posen and upper Silesia, including the coal mines are allotted to Poland. As the committee consists of experts on whose knowledge and judgment the Plenipotentiaries necessarily depend, it is highly probable this decision will be confirmed by the latter, but until judgment is actually passed, one cannot be quite centain.

SAYS HE HELPED KILL ARCHDUKE

Ohio Soldiers Story Investigated at Camp Sherman.

By the Associated Press.

CAMP SHERMAN, O., March 15.—Intelligence officers at Camp Sherman are taking the deposition today of Private Frank Hobel, an Austrian, of Lorain, O., concerning a statement he said to have made to another private that he was one of three Austrians who assassinated Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria in 1914, precipitating the world war.

According to Hobel's story, his father gave him $300 to flee from Austria after the assassination, and he went to Constantinople, and later to New York, landing in this country in October, 1914. He was working in the shipyards at Lorain when drafted and taken to Camp Sherman, where he has spent much of the time in a hospital.

MAN 71, WIDOW 39, ELOPE IN MATCH OF LOVE AT SIGHT

V. O. Saunders, Happy Bridegroom, Retired Merchant, Once Mayor of Webster Groves.

Virginius O. Saunders, 71 years old, of 5018 Delmar boulevard, "eloped" yesterday morning with Mrs. N. B. Bean, a widow, 39 years old, of Decatur, Ga., to Clayton, where they were married by the Rev. Walter M. Langtry, pastor of the Clayton Presbyterian Church. Saunders was formerly Mayor of Webster Groves, and is a retired dry goods merchant, having formerly been a member of the Janis-Saunders Dry Goods firm.

Saunders met Mrs. Bean about a year ago when she was visiting here and after she left they corresponded. Several months ago, Saunders says, Mrs. Bean returned to St. Louis and he proposed marriage. She accepted, but no wedding date was decided upon.

"It was a love match from the start," Saunders told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, "and we were only undecided about the date. I learned that she was to come here yesterday, so I met her at the station, and feeling romantic, we decided to elope to Clayton. Our friends will be considerably surprised to hear what we have done."

Saunders' first wife died seven years ago. He has two sons, Virginius O. Saunders Jr., 43 years old, of Narberth, Pa., and Paul, 35 years old, of Greenville, Mo.; and a daughter, Mrs. L. G. Gibson of Detroit. Mrs. Bean has a son, Hewell Bean, of Atlanta. Saunders was born in Cooper County, Mo., and came to St. Louis in 1865. He says that he is one of the founders of the Ely-Walker Dry Goods Co.

Saunders has not notified his children yet, he says, and will only casually inform them, as "it is none of their business if I choose to get married." The Saunders will live at the Delmar boulevard address.

Lloyds Hear Men Lost Were Sailors—35 Survivors Landed at Hartpool, England.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 15.—Nine sailors are reported drowned in the sinking of the American naval transport Yselhaven, which struck a mine at 1:35 o'clock Friday morning, according to a report to Lloyds. The Yselhaven was bound from Baltimore to Copenhagen. Thirty-five survivors have been landed at Hartlepool by a British steamer.

The Yselhaven measured 3558 tons and was built in Rotterdam in 1916. She was taken over by the United States Shipping Board after the United States entered the war. She left Baltimore Feb. 18, for Copenhagen.

The sinking of the Yselhaven probably occurred in the North Sea, as Hartlepool, where the survivors were taken, is a port on the eastern coast of England.

REPRESENTATIVE POWELL DEAD

Was Known as Original of Character in Wright Novel.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 15.—Truman S. Powell, 85 years old, State Representative from Stone County, died here last night of old age, after an illness of about two weeks. He was known as the original of the character of "Old Matt" in Harold Bell Wright's novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills." His home was at Notch, Stone County, and he was elected to the Legislature last fall.

His only speech in the Legislature was one in which he urged the passage of a bill raising the bounty on wolves to $20. He said that a short time before he came to Jefferson City he was followed several miles by a pack of timber wolves who did not give up their chase until he found refuge in a railroad station. He told of children having been treed by wolves while on their way to school.

The Ampico—One of the Greatest Assets in Teaching Music

WERE a pupil to take lessons from Rachmaninoff, Godowsky, Ornstein or any other famous musician, the artist would first play the piece to be learned so that the tempo, shading, pedaling, and the technique generally could be correctly interpreted.

The Ampico Piano reproduces the exact playing of these great masters and thus serves the same function as if the artist himself were present.

The influence of beautifully and correctly played music is far-reaching in molding individual conceptions in the pianistic art.

An Ampico Reproducing Piano in the home not only brings the concert playing of the world's greatest directory of artists within the immediate hearing of the father seeking relaxation from the worries of the day and provision for the wonderful entertainment of friends, but there is also the added value of its part in the musical instruction of children.

The Ampico Reproducing Piano plays at the touch of a button. It is also hand-played in the usual way.

The Ampico is not to be had in ordinary pianos. You will find it in the Knabe, Haines Bros. and Marshall & Wendell Grands and Uprights at Conroy's only. Prices, $950 to $2500. Convenient terms.

WHY U. S. TOWBOAT BUILDING STOPPED

Bids of $440,000 Each Received on Four Craft Estimated to Cost About $300,000 Apiece.

The concern of cities between St. Louis and Minneapolis, the head of navigation on the Mississippi River, over a statement in Washington by Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board that the contract for the towboats of a barge line which the board had announced it would install on the upper river had not been let, led the Post-Dispatch yesterday to ask William S. Mitchell, district engineer in St. Louis, who has direction of the fleet construction, what had befallen the project.

Mitchell replied that work is going forward on 19 of 24 steel barges of the fleet, some being on the ways, and that the first barge probably would be delivered before June 1. He admitted the barges would be useless without towboats and explained the delay in that portion of the work.

Bids Were Too High.

"We opened bids for construction of the four towboats in St. Louis, Nov. 23," Mitchell said. "The lowest bid was $440,000 per towboat. The estimated cost per towboat was $300,000 and we were unwilling to contract at so excessive a figure. Bids were rejected and I suggested to the Shipping Board that the Government itself undertake the construction. The shipping Board took no action on the suggestion. I presume its greater duties of the establishment and operation of the emergency fleet detracted its attention from the comparatively puny Mississippi project.

"While the work of construction had been delegated by the board to the War Department, the department had no authority to readvertise bids without the authority of the Shipping Board. Now that Chairman Hurley has asked the President to turn over the whole project to the War Department, I imagine there will be no delay in an executive order to that effect and I look for the work to go ahead soon."

The upper river fleet has no connection with that operated between St. Louis and New Orleans. The lower river fleet was established by the Railroad Administration. The upper river fleet is a project of the Shipping Board. The lower river fleet was established for the use of any shipper who desired to consign his freight to it. The upper river fleet was to be used exclusively by the Mississippi Iron Co., of which Edward F. Goltra is president, to carry ore from Minnesota to his plant and to return with coal from Illinois to Northwestern railroads. It was purely a war project. The Government desired to increase the production of pig iron. At the same time there was a shortage of freight cars and railroads were sending their cars empty to the Illinois coal fields, there to get the coal necessary for their operation.

To Buy Fleet Ultimately.

Goltra proposed to the Shipping Board that it build the fleet, with the understanding that he would lease and operate it and eventually purchase it at an appraised price. The Shipping Board appropriated $3,360,000 for the work.

The barges are of the hopper bottom type and are fit only for the carrying of bulk cargoes which may be exposed to the weather. Goltra said last night that he still was bound by contract to lease the line when it is built, and would lease it.

The project is believed to have bearing on the effort now being made to revive the use of the Mississippi for valley shippers in that its successful operation would give private capital assurance to establish an upper river fleet which would carry all classes of freight as the lower river fleet now does.

JUDGE PHILIPS, 7 YEARS AGO, WROTE HIS FUNERAL DIRECTIONS

Listed His Pallbearers, the Church, Cemetery and Tombstone—Wishes Will Be Carried Out.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

KANSAS CITY, March 15.—Seven years ago Judge John F. Philips wrote detailed instructions for his own funeral arrangements, listing the friends he would have act as pallbearers, the decorations for the casket, the church where he would have the funeral sermon delivered, designating the cemetery lot, the type of tombstone to erect and the epitaphs to be inscribed.

After Judge Philips died Thursday morning at Hot Springs, where he had gone for his health, the instructions were found and will be followed to the letter. Time has made changes in the list of pallbearers, as death has taken three of them away, but otherwise there will be no variation in the plans.

Services will be at the Central Presbyterian Church, 918 Harrison street, at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and burial will be at Mount Washington Cemetery. The Rev. Charles R. Nisbet, pastor, will preach the sermon. Draped over the casket, in keeping with one of his written wishes, will be the regimental flag of the Seventh Missouri Cavalry, which Col. Philips preserved from the Civil War days. The epitaph is not made public, a request of the widow and the daughter, Mrs. W. M. Fible.

COL. PERKINS TELLS OF WAR ZONE RAILROADS

Some Evidence That Equipment Sent From America Was Tampered With, He Says.

A description of the American army's light railways in France and how they were operated was given last night by Col. Albert T. Perkins of the 14th Engineers at a dinner given in his honor by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. at the University Club. He was railroad expert for the trust company when he entered the service. He returned to St. Louis Wednesday.

Col. Perkins said his regiment was sent to the British, and was under fire for the first time at the battle of Paschendale Ridge in the fall of 1917. Shortly after that, he was placed in charge of the American army's light railways, which operated between the front and the standard railway terminal eight or ten miles back of the lines. The tracks were two feet wide and the cars very small. Light locomotives were used to pull the trains up to within a few miles of the front, where, on account of the smoke, they were replaced by gasoline locomotives of 35 to 40 horse power. Most of the transportation close to the front had to be carried on at night.

Col. Perkins said he had 12,000 men under him as head of the light railways system, and one time, for a period of 31 days, an average of 44 trains a day were operated. Eight thousand troops were moved in one night in the dwarf cars.

At the time the armistice was signed, Col. Perkins said, the entire German light railway system had been captured, he said, and the enemy was practically at the mercy of the allies.

Some evidence of tampering with railroad equipment sent over from America was found by the engineers, Col. Perkins said. Bronze bearings, instead of steel, were found in some instances, and a few bearings had been packed with emery paper.

WEEKE ASKS FOR REHEARING ON CITIZENSHIP APPLICATION

Republican Politician's Request for Naturalization Was Denied Last December.

Henry L. (Hank) Weeke, Republican politician and former Commissioner of Weights and Measures in the Kiel administration, through his attorney, Chester H. Krum, filed a motion in the United States District Court yesterday for a rehearing of his application for citizenship.

Weeke, who is a native of Germany, was denied naturlization last December, when his application was opposed by M. R. Bevington, chief naturalization examiner, on moral grounds.

The motion alleges Judge Dyer erred in permitting testimony as to Weeke's mode of life prior to five years before the filing of the application and asserts that on the evidence he was entitled to citizenship.

JOSEF HOFMANN

To the President of The Aeolian Company

My dear Mr. Tremaine:—

I am sending you, by Mr. Schaad, the first of my completed Duo-Art Rolls.

The making of these rolls has required hard and painstaking work and I have spent many hours on each different composition, but I am quite confident you will agree with me that the results justify all the effort made. These rolls correctly reproduce my phrasing, accent, pedaling and, what is more, they are endowed with my personality. Yes, incredible as it may seem, I have succeeded in actually embodying in these rolls that subtle something, which, for want of a better term, we call personality. They are indeed my actual interpretation with all that implies.

As you know, before I entered into an agreement to play exclusively for the Duo-Art, I made a very thorough investigation and convinced myself that your instrument was superior to all other reproducing pianos. During the past few months, I have had a Duo-Art in my home at North East Harbor, and my enthusiasm for this wonderful instrument has increased as my familiarity with it has grown.

One thing is certain: in the reproduction of my own playing the Duo-Art is so far superior to any other instrument of its kind, there can be no real basis for comparison.

Sincerely yours,

Josef Hofmann

October 17, 1918

THE DUO-ART PIANO

Introduces a New Era in Music

WE stand on the threshold of a new era in music. The letter shown above from Josef Hofmann, the world-famous pianist, suggests something of the promises this new era contains.

In his letter, Hofmann says that the record-rolls he has made for the Duo-Art Piano correctly reproduce his playing—are indeed his actual interpretations.

The full meaning of this statement is almost too wonderful to be immediately grasped. Josef Hofmann is one of the great pianists of all time. When he plays in the large music halls of this and other cities, thousands flock to hear him, and the concerts at which he appears are among the most anticipated events of the musical season. Of the countless numbers who desire to hear him, few even in the larger cities are able to do so.

Music-lovers in the smaller cities and in the countless towns and villages where Hofmann never appears, seldom if ever have an opportunity to hear his wonderful art.

Hofmann in Your Home

With the advent of the Duo-Art Piano, all this is changed. Anyone who possesses himself of a Duo-Art Piano and Hofmann's record-rolls, may, in his own home, at any time, command the art and genius of this great master of the piano for his enjoyment and edification.

Picture yourself seated in the soft, subdued light of your living room, listening in solitude to Hofmann's interpretation of Chopin's exquisite Waltz in C sharp minor. Or perhaps in the midst of a formal social gathering the wonderful 12th Rhapsody of Liszt; holding the guests entranced just as the master himself has held countless thousands spellbound in the great music halls of this country and Europe.

Can there be any source of pleasure and diversion at once so inspiring and uplifting? Can you introduce into your home any single influence so desirable as really fine music?

Imagine the influence of the Duo-Art Piano on the children and those whose musical tastes are still in the process of development!

Hofmann's Actual Interpretations

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that Duo-Art reproductions of Mr. Hofmann's performances do not merely approximate his playing. They do not suggest his interpretations. They are his actual performances. Indeed Mr. Hofmann goes further and says they are endowed with that wonderful quality which distinguishes the art of the truly great pianists—his personality.

All the Great Pianists

To own a Piano endowed with the capacity of reproducing the superb art of Hofmann is, judged by all our previous ideas of music and musical instruments, a modern miracle. What, then, shall we say when to this is added the capacity to reproduce the performances of all the other great pianists? Among the pianists who have made Duo-Art Record-rolls are:

Adriano Ariani
Harold Bauer
Ferruccio Busoni
Winifred Byrd
Carl Friedberg
Charles Wakefield Cadman
Teresa Carreno
Walter Damrosch
Guiomar Novaes
Ossip Gabrilowitsch
Rudolph Ganz
Leopold Godowsky
Catherine Goodson
Percy Grainger
Enrique Granados
Mark Hambourg
Ethel Leginska
Tina Lerner
Ignace Jan Paderewski
John Powell
Rosita Renard
Camille Saint Saens
Xaver Scharwenka
Ernest Schelling and many others

Playing the Duo-Art Yourself

The Duo-Art Piano is also a Pianola. Besides hearing the great masters of the piano on this wonderful instrument, one may also play it himself. Using a regular Pianola music roll and the expression devices provided by the instrument, one experiences the intense fascination of participating in the performance and voicing one's own musical feeling.

A Magnificent Piano

And lastly, the Duo-Art is a pianoforte of distinguished make and quality. As such it provides the best instrument it is possible to secure, either Grand or Upright, and is available for hand-playing and practice just as any regular piano. Four different pianos may be obtained as Duo-Arts, namely: the Steinway, the Steck, the Stroud and the famous Weber.

HAS NEW PATCH.

"The old idea that a punctured tube must be vulcanized is losing hold. Experiments have proven that, with the so-called Tube Patch you will not only get the same results, but you will also preserve your tube.

"Further, you will save time and money. No skill is needed, it takes about a minute to apply the patch which with the aid of cement goes through the process of cold vulcanization. No heat is necessary. Being of pure rubber the patch expands with the tube," says Mr. Zerweck of eZrweck, Grayson & Co., who is putting a patch on the market which is the result of many years of experiment.

NOTHING but its downright goodness can account for the actual affection that Liberty owners feel for their cars.

Their preference begins to assert itself the moment it dawns on them what a distinct difference there is in the way the Liberty rides and drives.

They are attracted at the outset by its sheer physical beauty.

But as they ride, they instinctively feel there is a quality to this difference in the Liberty which stamps it as superior.

In the first few minutes of driving their feeling that the Liberty must be an unusual car becomes positive conviction.

And this appreciation invariably thrives as the miles multiply, into an ever-growing pride in Liberty performance and ownership.

BUILDING GREAT PLANT FOR "CLEVELAND" CAR

Of more than ordinary importance is the announcement of the letting of contracts for the plant of the new Cleveland Automobile Company to be erected on its recently acquired 19-acre tract at the intersection of Euclid Avenue and London Road. This large building, 600 feet long, 80 feet wide, four stories high, of concrete and brick construction with handsome brick and cut stone front facing Euclin Avenue, initiates the new period of post war business enterprise, so fare as Cleveland is concerned.

Contracts call for completion of the plant, including two smaller buildings to be used as independent heating plant and timekeeper's offices, prior to July first and it is the expectation of those concerned that the huge plant will actually be in operation and producing Cleveland automobiles at the rate of one hundred and fifty cars daily before that time.

Naturally, throughout the country there has been a widespread interest in the car to be manufactured. For over two years rumors of its appearance have circulated throughout the automobile trade. And now that it is actually announced, though no details of its construction or even its price have been given, hundreds of dealers have written, telegraphed and even come personally to Cleveland to make application for the representation of the "Cleveland" in their territory. This interest is based upon the personnel of the new corporation which is made up entirely of men whose reputation and achievement are well-known to every worth while motor car dealer in the country. And it is also based upon faith in the engineering ability, of J. V. Whitbeck, designer of the Chandler Six, and since its foundation, chief engineer of the Chandler Motor Car Company, who is now president of the Cleveland Automobile Company and responsible for the design of the new car.

The officers of the Cleveland Automobile Company are: J. V. Whitbeck, president; Sid J. Black, vice-president; J. I. Krall, treasurer; R. C. Hodge, in charge of purchasing, E. O. Carlson, production manager and Ernest Wooler, chief engineer. The board of directors consists of J. V. Whitbeck, S. J. Black, Samuel Regar, F. C. Chandler and J. A. Fayne, F. C. Chandler is chairman of the executive committe and Samuel Regar, chairman of the finance committee.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR TRUCKS FORESEEN

"When the necessity for moving war essentials simply overwhelmed the railroads and paralyzed shipping conditions, the world was brought to a realization of what motor trucks could accomplish in emergencies," said P. H. Brockman of the De Luxe Auto Co. "Thousands of business men," he continued, "learned the answers to their individual transportation problems and will permanently profit by them. It is apparent, on the other hand, that many others have even yet failed to come to a complete realization of all that the motor truck means to present and future transportation."

"No industry, no business house requiring either pickup or delivery can obtain full success today without the use of one or more trucks. The public demands quick service—motor truck delivery is the solution. Every day the object lesson is driven home. One merchant increases his business because of the dependability of his deliveries. His competitor, with otherwise equally good facilities, barely keeps his business alive because of inferior delivery methods."

"When the manufacturers of Oldsmobile passenger cars, which we handle, announced the new Oldsmobile Economy Truck some time ago, we were very much gratified. There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone who makes a serious study of transportation conditions as they exist the country over, but that the next few years will see an amazing increase in the use of trucks. Because speed, economy and adaptability to varied work will be vital considerations, it seems certain that the greatest demand will be for moderately light duty vehicles."

1000 More Miles for Every Tire

That's the real economy that goes with every set of HASSLER PATENTED Shock Absorbers For Ford Cars and Ford Trucks

TRADE MARK

And the reason that this economy is assured is this: By absorbing the road shocks and lessening the pounding of the tires on the road, Hasslers eliminate stone bruises which frequently cause the inner fabric to break before the outer casing is worn through scarcely at all. The result is that with Hasslers you can wear your tires clear down to the fabric before you are likely to have trouble from blowouts.

The elimination of road shocks also reduces general upkeep and makes any Ford ride like a high-price limousine.

15 Days' Trial: If you are not entirely pleased with Hasslers in 15 days, purchase price will be refunded.

DEALERS SOLD NEARLY 150 CARS AT USED CAR SHOW

In Addition to Sales Made, Enough Prospects Were Gathered to Insure Sales of as Many More in Next Ten Days.

The Used Car Sales Show closed at the Exhibit Building, Broadway and Walnut street, last night with a record of unusual success. The sales were heavier than at the 1918 show, which was the first held in St. Louis.

Men capable of judging, said that the cars were at least 40 per cent better in appearance and in condition than those at last year's show.

The crowds throughout the week were not large, but practically every person who visited the show was looking for an automobile. Where actual sales were not made the exhibitors secured the names of prospects enough to insure that at least 100 to 150 used automobiles will be sold in St. Louis during the next 10 days.

The sales at the show were more than satisfactory to the exhibitors. Monday night sales were 27 cars, which were taken out of the building Tuesday morning. Tuesday the sales were 17 cars; Wednesday 25 cars were disposed of and delivered; Thursday the deliveries were 22 cars; Friday 25 cars were sold, and Saturday, in spite of the rain, the heaviest sales of the week were made, the number of cars disposed of being 31.

The total sales for the week were 149 cars of many makes and many prices.

DORRIS SAW SERVICE ON THE OTHER SIDE

The following is a copy of a letter received from a driver of one of the Dorris cars in service "Over There," which tells, briefly, the satisfaction Dorris cars are giving, notwithstanding the hard service they are put to in France.

Dorris Motor Car Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Gentlemen: I have driven one of your cars for eight months, covering up to the present time 17,435 miles. I have driven on all fronts south of the Somme, and, standing the hardships which cars have to stand, your cars, Motor Transport Corps, commander said, have given less trouble than any other make of car used by this division.

"My opinion of the Dorris car is that it can always be depended upon for service and its material is of the highest quality.

"These few words will give you an idea of the satisfaction that can be obtained from the Dorris car.

ACCESSORY MEN TALK FEDERAL TAX LAW

Two meetings of the Motor Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis were held last week at which the topic of discussion was the application of the new Federal tax laws to accessories. An explanation was made by a representative of the Internal Revenue Department of St. Louis, Revenue Agent Rodgers, that the only person permitted to specify in words on an invoice "for war tax," is the manufacturer of the product. The wholesale or retail dealer is not permitted to do this, although the Government expects him to pass along the additional cost to the consumer. He merely does this by raising his price on the article sold.

At a meeting held Friday of the association at the Marquette Hotel, Capt. Alexis Steiner, former vice president of the Velie Automobile Co. of St. Louis, told of his many experiences in the trenches in France while in command of a company in the Thirty-ninth Division.

Men in the accessory business in St. Louis are getting together every Friday for noon luncheon at the Marquette Hotel.

RECORD-BREAKING SALES FOR THE LIBERTY SIX

It was expected that the motor car business would experience a revival with the coming of the spring months, but very few of the men engaged in it anticipated any such landslide of business as was started by the various automobile shows, notably that in St. Louis, according to a statement to the Briscoe Motor Sales Co. of St. Louis.

The business done during and following these shows was phenomenal. Reports sent to the factory by the distributors of the Liberty Motor Car Co., for instance, indicate a demand for their moderate weight six that established new precidents for the company, and, indeed, would have been considered remarkable by any manufacturer in the most prosperous former show seasons.

ACCESSORY SECTION MUCH EXPANDED

Field-Lippman's Accessory Department is expanding. For the second time since this house opened the department they are finding need for more room devoted to automobile supplies and equipment. Extension plans have been made for the enlargement of the first floor for stock display and additional counters and show cases and at the same time increasing the department of Victrola records by adding five demonstration rooms of plate glass paneled construction to those in use, now making 11 rooms on the first floor.

The motor goods department will continue to occupy the eastern half of the first floor and the third floor will be used for the extension display of touring and travel goods, in which the house specializes. Field-Lippman report that results of their display at the Auto Show continue to come in, an Auto Kamp Trailer being sold this week for delivery to Glenwood Springs, Colo., for a prominent St. Louisan who will use the Auto Kamp for a summer cottage in the Rocky Mountains.

By way of celebrating the expansion, the house is announcing a clearing sale of accessories and supplies, with many specialties selected from a large stock recently purchased from a jobber that discontinued the jobbing of accessories. Included in the stock are many items at prices obviously below present cost prices.

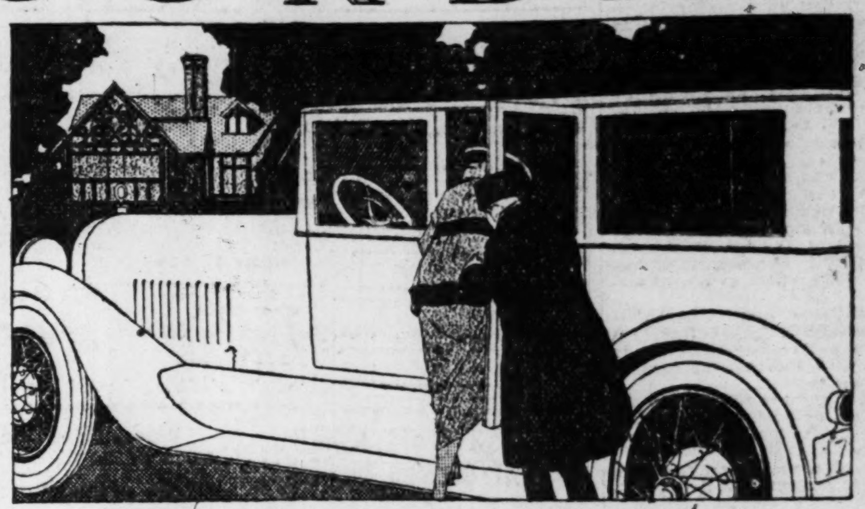
JORDAN



Fashionably Modern

Here is the newest Jordan—the Town Sedan.

Fashionably modern, it is the embodiment of the latter-day, four-door, straight-line, complete-vision type.

It is all-aluminum—exquisitely wrought. The graceful roof and belt line are slender. Windows, even in the rear, are broad and square cornered. So are the doors. And the glass is of that peculiarly thick, transparent kind that adds such richness.

The body of aluminum is lighter than any of its type. Comfortable, full-width, full-depth front seat. Two disappearing auxiliary seats. Rear seat of rare comfort, depth and repose.

Upholstery is new in design, soft in texture, durable in quality, neutral in color.

There are vertical outside door handles and Mount Vernon platinum fittings embellished with our individual design.

Doors are inset. There are Perfection window lifts. Yale locking device. Silk roller curtains. Braided cord detachable robe strap.

And the delicate intimacy of such an interior is further enhanced by Circassian walnut tastefully used for door and window mouldings. The optional colors, Liberty blue and Brewster green faithfully carry out, in the exterior finish, all the dignity and charm of body lines and interior appointments.

Every Jordan owner is entitled to receive the "Jordan Arrow."

CORN IS SHARPLY HIGHER IN TRADE HERE FOR WEEK

Market Is Influenced by Talk of $3.50 Wheat; Oats Irregular, Owing to Bearish Crop Report.

Although the corn market went skyrocketing this week, owing largely to authoritative suggestions that wheat might command as high as $3.50 a bushel, the gains later virtually wiped out by word that the Government officials intended drastic measures to hold down the cost of foodstuffs. Yesetrday, however, prices advanced 3c to 4c. Compared with a week ago, corn at the close yesterday was 3c to 7c higher. Oats were down steady to 1c higher.

Speculative demand for corn broadened out to an amazing extent after Director-General Hoover of the Inter-Allied Relief Oragnization, had referred to $3.50 wheat as not impossible.

Bullish sentiment was further stimulated by assertions that farm reserves were not readily available to overcome acute shortage of corn in the chief hog states.

Sepsational upturns followed in the value of hogs, notwithstanding withdrawal of all restrictions on hog shipments.

Attention also was given to views of a leading economist, that high prices were here to stay.

Then came a sudden, nearly complete reversal of sentiment, influenced by general heed taken of the apparent attitude of the Food Administration.

Oats weer weakened by the bearish Government report, but later recovered somewhat on the strength in corn. Yesterday's market was strong.

CORN IS 3 CENTS HIGHER AT CLOSING IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, March 15.—Announcement that Germany had definitely accepted provisioning terms imposed by the allies led to a vigorous upturn today in the corn market. Prices at the close were unsettled, but 1½ to 3¾c net higher, with May $1.37½ to $1.38¼ and July $1.32. Oats gained ⅜c to 1c and provisions 25c to $1.

At first, the corn market had a downward slant owing to reports that a maximum limit was likely to be placed on hog values. Bearish traders were disconcerted, however, by the fact that the hog market showed continued strength instead of an expected break. In the absence of any aggressive selling, corn soon began to rally. It was at this stage that news came of an allotment of 370,000 tons of foodstuffs a month to Germany in return for ships. Explicit statements that the German delegates had agreed to the plan made demand here for corn broaden out, and forced prices to bulge. Shorts led the stampede, the effect of which still remained evident when the final gong struck.

Oats followed corn, and rose smartly after a brief interval of weakness.

Provisions like grain swept upward despite hesitation at the outset. Shipments for the week were nearly treble those of a year ago.

COTTON 40 TO 47 POINTS HIGHER AT THE CLOSE

Census Report Is Bearish, but Selling Is Well Absorbed and a Sharp Rally Follows.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The cotton market showed a generally steady to firm tone during today's trading on the reports of a more active goods demand and the absence of pressure from the South. New style May contracts sold up from 24.15 to 24.70 or 55 points net higher and closed 24.63 with the general list closing steady at a net advance of 15 to 47 points on the new style months. Old style deliveries were more irregular with the close 15 points lower at 43 points higher.

The opening was irregular at an advance of 29 points to a decline of 50 points on the old and 13 points higher to 5 points lower on new contracts. There was further realizing of the sort responsible for yesterday's reaction and probably some selling on the report of the Census Bureau showing domestic mill consumption of only 433,516 bales for February against 510,084 last year.

The influence of these figures was offset, however, by the more bullish week-end statistics showing increased spinners' takings and the report of a more active demand for cotton goods in the primary markets. Early offerings were soon absorbed and the market advanced during the middle of the morning on covering by recent sellers, continued trade buying and scattering support.

New style October contracts sold up from 21.40 to 21.80 and the new style months generally showed net gains of 25 to 55 points at the high point of the morning. There was no further trading in old style March contracts. Old style May advanced to 24.10 and October to 21.40 or about 40 to 45 points net higher, with the market closing at moderate reactions as a result of realizing.

Fall River advices indicated the largest sale of print cloths for the week in six months and there were reports from other sources of a decided improvement in demand for both the domestic trade and export.

Cotton spot steady; middling, 28.60c.

Cotton futures closed steady: May, old, 24c; new, 24.62c; July, old, 22.80c; new, 23.12c; Oct., old, 21.30c; new, 21.72c; Dec., old, 21.50c; new, 21.50c; Jan., new, 21.30c.

HOGS SELL FOR $20 AT NATIONAL STOCKYARDS

Market Is the Highest Since September, 1918; Cattle Prices Also Advance Sharply for the Week.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Il.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Week Before.	Last Year.
Cattle	18,600	23,100	19,000
Hogs	84,500	66,300	62,000
Sheep	4,900	6,000	7,000

Distinguishing their demand with the utmost activity, the buying element jumped into the cattle trade last week, cleared receipts as fast as they arrived and forced the market to as satisfactory as basis as recorded in some time.

Fat steers finished 50c to 60c higher than on Monday, or 25c higher than the previous week's close, while all decent to good butcher cattle finished with a net advance of 50c to $1.00.

Common grades of butcher cattle and canner stuff did not share in so strong a gain, these generally moving 25c higher for the week.

The dull part of the trade was in stockers and feeders, which, owing to a limited demand, moved very slowly, and while largely steady during the week, yet spots here and there were a shade lower.

Prime heavy beef steers are quoted $18.25 to $19.25; choice to prime, $17 to $18.25; good to choice, $15 to $17; medium to good, $13 to $15; common to medium weighty steers, $11.50 to $12.75; common light steers, $9 to $10.25. Good to choice feeders, $12 to $13.50; common to medium, $10 to $11.50. Good to choice stockers, $10 to $11.50; common to medium, $8.50 to $9.50. Choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $14 to $16; good to choice, $12 to $14; common to medium, $8.50 to $12. Choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $12.50 to $14; good to choice, $11 to $12.50; medium to good, $9.50 to $11; fair fleshed cows, $8 to $9.50; cutters, $7 to $8; canners, $5.75 to $6.25. Good to choice stock cows, $7.50 to $8.25; good to choice stock heifers, $8 to $9. Fat bulls, $11 to $13; heavy sausage bulls, $9 to $10; light sausage bulls, $8 to $9.

The hog market furnished one of the features of an unusual situation. Last Tuesday $20 hogs were realized, several loads bringing that price, including some Mississippi hogs, this being the highest level that the local trade has reached since September, 1918.

Following such an excited condition of the trade, the actual close showed much less vigor in the market and a disposition of a more apparent indifference against Southern or Southwest hogs than prevailed during the forepart of the week.

Yesterday the market was extremely dull, due to a fair supply of 8500 hogs, and was barely steady with the previous week's close; early top recording $19.70, closing extremely dull, with packers refusing to bid, while Southern hogs were hardly moving at any price.

Bulk of the good to choice hogs, 190 lbs. up, are selling at $19.40 to the top; 160 to 180 lb. hogs, $19 to $19.40; 120 to 140 lb. pigs, $17 to $17.75; light pigs, 80 to 115 lbs., $14 to $16.75. Best rough hogs, $17.25; half-fat roughs, $13 to $16.

SHEEP—Trade was entirely satisfactory. The market was active, a natural consequence, in view of light supplies, and a correspondingly high basis for beef cattle and hogs. Prices are the highest in months.

Strictly choice-finished lambs are selling at $19.50 to $20; good kinds of lambs, $18.50 to $19.25; half-fat and medium kinds of lambs, $17.50 to $18.50; cull lambs, $12.75 to $16.50; fat sheep, $12.50 to $14; choppers and bucks, $9 to $11; canners, $5.50 to $7; fat goats, $7.50 to $9.50; medium flesh goats, $6.50 to $7.50; thin common kinds of goats, $4.50 to $6; kid goats, $7.50 to $12.50.

This Maxwell Truck has 25,000,000 miles behind it

ONE thousand times around the equator is about the mileage of all Maxwell trucks now in use.

What this tremendous mileage has taught may be found in the Maxwell truck you buy today.

For the keen engineering done in this remarkable carrier of freight has not been laboratory engineering but road engineering.

That is why the Maxwell is so practical, why it is so hardy, why it seldom needs mechanical attention, why it is always a delight for engineers to look over.

It is every man's truck. It is not a road rolling monster. Neither is it light and flimsy. It will carry 80% of the different kinds of loads conveyed by horse or motor.

Surprising, of course, is the chassis price—$1085; several hundred dollars less than any other truck of similar capacity. Quantity production is the reason for this.

Pays for itself as it runs. See it and save.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

INDUSTRIALS ARE THE FEATURE OF TRADING IN THE STOCK MARKET

Prices Are 2 to 20 Points Higher for the Week on Many Issues—Bond List Is Irregular.

Closing Prices on Liberty Bonds in New York.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Final prices today on Liberty Bonds were: 3½s, 98.88; first 4s, 94.40; second 4s, 93.80; first 4¼s, 94.52; second 4¼s, 93.84; third 4¼s, 95.24; fourth 4¼s, 93.92.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"After its usual fashion, the stock market, having evidently foreseen a broad change for the better in the financial situation, and having adjusted the level of investment prices to that expectation, has paused, waiting for events to realize the predictions. It was thus that Stock Exchange prices in the early months of 1915 moved up while industry was still in a state of idleness.

"The predicted 'munition orders' did not make themselves felt in the field of production until the lapse of several months, and by that time the market was almost stationary, watching for new developments, for better or worse, on the basis of which another anticipated movement would be logical.

"Thus, also, the rise on the market of last spring reached its culmination months before the great wheat crop was harvested, the American army landed in France, and Ludendorf defeated at the Marne.

"When the Germans were in full retreat and the supply ships replenishing Europe, during July and August, even Wall Street was puzzled over the inactivity of the New York Stock Exchange. But it was only another case of 'discounting in advance.'

"What has clearly happened, this week, is that the reinvestment power, which drove up the Standard shares in the last four weeks, has relaxed; waiting, so to speak, for events to catch up with the market.

The Buyers of February.

"The real buyers of February, and last week, have not sold out again, but the field has been left to speculators in stocks, whose prospective value can only be guessed at. Except as a demonstration of the restless expectations of the professional operators, themselves, the existing market has had no great meaning.

"Yet, at the same time, we appear to be on the verge of developments of profound importance, whose influence in shaping events the financial future may not be easy to foreshadow.

"Seen in perspective of today, it is now easy to recognize that the financial uncertainty and reaction in the opening weeks of 1919 had three powerful causes; doubt as to what would be the scope of enforced readjustment on our industries, what would be the result of the anarchist uprising in Germany, and what would be done at the Paris conference.

"It was at least a human possibility, at the end of 1918, that actual financial embarrassment would overtake some of our business enterprises, that all responsible Government would be overthrown in the Teutonic countries, and that hopeless differences of plan and purpose would arise. Meantime, we were still at war, with whatever uncertainties that involved.

Change Should Come Soon.

"Three things are now bound to happen very soon. We shall learn whether industrial activity is to return, and new orders purchased as a consequence of the agreement on prices with the Government.

"We shall begin to see whether, now that the Ebert Government has surmounted its sound crucial test, the wave of Bolshevism in central Europe will recede. We shall positively learn what is to be the attitude of the allied nations represented at Paris towards practicable terms of peace and a workable league to enforce peace in the future. Behind all these considerations there will arise—perhaps earlier than most people had expected—the fact that the state of war is definitely ended.

"What would be the effect on financial sentiment of a wholly satisfactory solution of these pre-existing uncertainties? Even the Stock Exchange might find trouble in answering that question.

"There are still undoubted possibilities of disappointment in any one of the three directions. The stock market, up to the present moment, may have merely struck the balance of probability. If so, then a reasonably complete fulfillment of its largest hopes should have very considerable influence on the attitude of the whole community.

"Not the least interesting aspect of the situation lies in the fact that if the peace treaty and the peace league are thus fortunately ratified, it will be happening at almost the moment of the subscription to our own victory loan. How far that imposing requisition has itself stood in the way of financial revival it is not altogether easy to say.

Bond Market Is Quiet.

"It has certainly overclouded the bond market, which is standing idle, while waiting to learn the terms of the loan, their probable effect on other investment values, and the degree of success which the operation will achieve.

"On the questions also we shall presently get light—no doubt with the familiar alteration of premature optimism, premature despondency, and final exultation. There will be much talk of the impossibility of getting a full subscription. So there was last September and October, when the most experienced investment bankers in Wall Street shook their heads and confessed that they 'could not see how it would be done,' and rested vaguely on the assertion that the $6,000,000,000 will be covered because they must be covered.'

"But the bankers had underestimated the American people, as they recognized when the subscription list ran no less than $989,000,000 beyond the total asked for.

"Industrial shares scored gains of 2 to 20 points on the week's trading, while the railroads were irregular. Yesterday's market was rather uncertain in tone."

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, March 15.—"The burning topic of the hour here is the apparent absence of a definite, consistent financial policy adapted to the return of peace. One section of the financial community is urging an early, but gradual deflation of the currency, a steady curbing of Government borrowing, and dearer money. This section centers its attention on Great Britain's external liabilities and the protection of the gold reserves when the innumerable restrictions incident to the war are withdrawn.

"The other group clamors for the removal of restrictions everywhere, including the abandonment of control over the American exchange rate. It also advocates 'easy money' and continued inflation until manufacturers get under way again and our exports are graetly increased. This latter section of opinion, however, fails to provide a scheme for dealing with our external obligations and the demands for gold in the period immediately following the declaration of peace.'

"It fails, moreover, to explain how manufacturers could be persuaded to accumulate huge stores of materials at top prices for commodities and labor, with the possibility of a decline when the moment of exporting arrives.

Situation Is Complicated.

"The situation is complicated by the fact that the Government naturally desires cheap money for its borrowing operations, irrespective of other considerations. We are suffering, therefore, from confused counsels and a drifting policy.

"In regard to the budget itself, a similar tendency is noted. Suggestions are already being discussed for deferring a definite taxation program until the year after peace, and the cessation of borrowing. Modification of the excess profits tax is inevitable, however, because in its present form it is checking enterprise. We shall probably either copy your system, allowing a substantial margin of profits before the tax becomes applicable, or else provide a general profits tax on a sliding scale.

"At the present moment, the city deprecates any considerable speculation on either side of the Atlantic. It is considered not justified here, because of the unfavorable economic position and the fact that all our resources are required for genuine industry.

"The feeling is also strong that excessive speculation would be equally dangerous in the United States, for a slightly different reason. In spite of your improved banking system, a 'prosperity crisis' might occur that would be disastrous to the whole world, which needs all your powers of finance and production.

"The long view of the food situation suggests anxiety even in this country. It should be remembered that bread would be dearer here, but for the Government 'subsidy of £50,000,000 sterling. That item of expense recalls the fact, also, that the Government's estimates for the new year clearly indicate that the railways worked at a big loss, owing to the scale of war wages."

Official Standards Announced for Oats.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Official standards of four numbered grades and one sample grade for oats, following closely the tentative standards approved by the grain trade, were established today by the Department of Agriculture, under authority of a law recently passed by Congress.

The standards were made effective June 16, 1919, when the new crop movement begins.

Factors used in grading were test weight per bushel, minimum percentages for sound cultivated oats, and minimum requirements for heat damage and foreign material. No provision was made for dockage, but it was said to be not unlikely that the standards would be placed on a dockage basis later.

The Professional Ball Player Never Gets Any More Money by Going Out on Strikes

Rickey Likely to Dispose of Catcher in Deal

Cardinal Chief, Home,, Says He Is Considering Proposition to Make Trade.

WOULD WELCOME LAVAN

Refuses to Discuss Reported Exchange, However; Demmitt, Davenport and Ames Sign.

President Branch Rickey of the Cardinals, who returned to St. Louis yesterday after an absence of over a week, during which time he toured the East, has not despaired of a deal whereby he will part with a catcher and receive a first-class player (Branch would not mention the particular brand of player) in return. While the Knothole executive admitted nothing was likely to develop within the next few days, he made this significant statement during the course of an interview:

"I am ready and am considering a proposition at this time to dispose of a catcher."

There is considerable interest attached to the return of Rickey, since various and sundry "newspaper" trades had been made for him during his absence. Rickey called attention to this fact and said that of all deals suggested in the newspapers and in which he was reported to be involved, he would sanction but one and that was the trade whereby the Cardinals would acquire the services of Johnny Lavan, former Brownie.

Griff Would Make Deal.

Lavan, who is now a Lieutenant in the navy, has said he intends to quit baseball. He is the property of the Washington club and it is said Griffith is not opposed to parting with Doctor Jawn, providing he can get a good man in exchange for him. There is no doubt that Lavan would like to play for Rickey, but the entire deal hinges on whether Rickey is able to get the player out of the American League.

Branch would not discuss just what would be done with the Cardinals' infield if he were successful in landing Lavan. In fact, he said he preferred not to discuss the matter at any length, since he did not wish to place himself in a position where Griffith could accuse him of tampering with one of his players.

Much speculation has been aroused over Rickey's statement that he is considering trading a catcher. The president would not say which of his catchers was on the market, but it is believed he would use Gonzales as trading material in preference to Frank Snyder. There undoubtedly is a trade brewing between three clubs, one of which is the Cardinals, it is not beyond the bounds of reason that Barney Dreyfuss is holding up the deal. Since the celebrated Sisler decision, Dreyfuss has borne no particular friendship for Rickey.

Rickey Visits Pittsburg.

In this connection, it is regarded as somewhat significant that, en route home from the East, Rickey stopped off in Pittsburg, where he signed Bill Doak, among other things. The "other things" referred to are several interviews with Dreyfuss reported to have taken place. Whether Rickey succeeded in bringing Dreyfuss to his point of view is not known.

The signed contract of Leon Ames arrived at Cardinal headquarters yesterday and President Rickey announced that he had given Doak and Ames permission to do most of their spring training at Hot Springs. The veterans expect to reach the Arkansas spa within the next week and they will not be required to report here until a few days in advance of the spring series.

Rickey announced that Ames positively will not pitch in any of the spring series games, but said the veteran would be saved for the opening series of the season against Cincinnati.

In a letter from former Lieut. Marvin Goodwin, received by Rickey yesterday, the young right-hander said he was in condition to pitch now and is anxiously awaiting the day to report for spring training. Goodwin was sadly missed last season and Rickey believes he will add considerable strength to the club this year. Goodwin, formerly in the aviation service, has requested that he be allowed to pitch in one of the games against Kansas City, March 29 and 30.

Quinn Signs Two More.

While the Browns were en route to San Antonio yesterday, it was a busy day in the local headquarters. Business Manager Quinn had an interesting bit of news in that Ray Demmitt, outfielder and the big punch of the club last season so far as driving in runs was concerned, has signed a contract and will leave his home Monday for San Antonio. Dave Davenport also advised Quinn by wire that he had signed and forwarded his contract to St. Louis and would report to San Antonio immediately.

With these two players lined up, Quinn now has his entire club under contract, with the exception of Fred Maisel and Nick Cullop. Maisel is still in doubt about reporting, stating his business interests are such that he does not believe he can leave them at this time.

Followers of the Browns would not be surprised to see Nick Cullop in this city within the next few days, although Quinn has had no word from him. The registry receipt for his contract recently arrived at Browns' headquarters and it was signed by Cullop in person. However, he has not said whether the terms were satisfactory. Cullop did not report last season.

BECKETT AND GODDARD WILL BOX IN LONDON

LONDON, March 15.—Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight boxer, who knocked out Bombardier Wells in a fight Feb. 7, has signed an agreement with Frank Goddard to meet in the ring in London, the winner to fight Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight champion. The contest will not occur before May.

Famous Brown Stocking Wagered Remains of $3500 Salary He Could Defeat Former Chicago Player, Now Evangelist, Castleman Webb Relates.

ECHOES of one of the most notable footraces ever run in St. Louis were awakened in the memory of the veteran attorney and former baseball player, Castleman Webb, last week, by the announcement that William ("Billy") Fletcher, himself a sprinter of wide note, 40 years ago, had been brought back to St. Louis to recover from a severe illness.

"Cass," who has attended every sporting event since Hector was a pup and who knows all the "dope" from Tom Allen's fight record to George Sisler's 1918 stolen base performance, was reminded that Fletcher trained that present Cosmopolite and former Browns' baseball star, Arlie Latham, for his mid-winter 100-yards race with Billy Sunday, who is now batting 1.000 against Old Nick. According to Webb there was more interest in that footrace than in the baseball championship finals; and more money wagered than was taken in on the world's series.

"This city had been talking about the merits of the men all during the season," said Webb to the Post-Dispatch, in recalling the contest. "There had been several tilts, in baseball uniform; but the match of 1886, in which Fletcher trained Latham, was run in the near-winter weather (it was December), the men being garbed in the flimsiest of running clothes. The event was to settle all arguments as to the champion sprinter in baseball.

Chicagoans Brought Bank Rolls.

"I recall that a big crowd of sports all accompanied by well-developed bank rolls, came down from Chicago with Sunday for the event. There is not the slightest doubt that many thousands of dollars were invested on the chances of the respective disputants.

"I was intimate with Latham, in those days, having acted as his attorney on several occasions. I asked him how much he had wagered on himself.

"'Well,' replied he, thinking it over, 'if I lose, I'll have to eat snowballs until spring.'

"'Billy' Fletcher tried to keep Latham from making this match. Billy was fat and out of condition then—he is about 63 years of age now—but he could still show the way to Latham. Fletcher knew Sunday's speed; but Latham would not be talked out of the race.

"Fletcher did the best he could with him. He primed Arlie for the race with a plan for jockeying the start, knowing that Sunday would win on straight running ability.

Runners Shivered on the Mark.

"When the men toed the mark at the old Lucas Baseball Park, there were more fans present than at many a championship baseball game. I remember it was frosty and the bare skins of the runners goose-fleshed in a way ot make even the warmly clad spectators shiver.

"An agreement had been reached that one runner did not have to accept the start unless he wanted to. Latham, figuring on this, kept breaking out in front, Sunday refusing to accept the issue until a more equal opportunity offered. Latham had counted on his constant prancing and starting to keep his own muscles loose, relying on the cold to stiffen the less active Sunday. It was more than 30 minutes before he finally wearied of the waiting game himself and allowed the race to start.

"There was nothing to it, despite all the jockeying. Latham, although he jumped out in front at the start and led until the 40-yard mark, was no match for the flying Sunday who beat him to the tape three or four yards.

"Latham was a trespasser on the bounty of Chris von der Ahe all winter, although he received a salary then that was considered enormous, $3500. Today, purchasing power considered, it would be equivalent to about $6000."

75 Nominations for Derby Race

10 Imported Horses Named for Kentucky Classic Which Will Be Run May 10.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 15.—75 nominations, five more than in 1918, have been made for the fifth renewal of the historic Kentucky Derby, worth to the winner about $22,000, as against a maximum of approximately $16,000, the greatest amount in any previous year. The list made public tonight by the Kentucky Jockey Club, indicates that the speediest horses on the American continent will vie with the best racing blood from abroad.

It includes such widely known performers as Billy Kelly, Commander J. K. L. Ross' gelding, which won 14 out of 17 races as a 2-year-old; Eternal, owned by J. W. McClelland, which won six of eight starts last year; Dunboyne, P. A. Clark's colt, which won the Futurity and Great American stakes in 1918; Mormon, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's gelding; C. M. Garrison's Be Frank, and Commander Ross' War Pennant.

Fifty colts, 21 geldings and four fillies are in the list. Ten are imported, including Truant, Under Fire, Sans Peur II, Pastoreau, Ponderosa, Constantine, Pizarro, Plumcot, Bridesman and War Marvel in the stables of Dortch brothers, P. Dunne, Frank J. Kelley, J. Livingstone, George J. Long, William Martin and Commander Ross. Only one importer horse, however, has ever captured the Derby—Omar Khayyam, a son of Marco-Lisma, which won it for Billings and Johnson in 1917.

Commander J. K. L. Ross, George J. Long and B. J. Brannon head the list, with four entries each. Harry Payne Whitney, whose filly, Regret, won the race in 1915, has two entries, Blue Laddie and Vindex. J. Livingston is represented by three. Other widely known turfmen named as owners of entries are Gallaher Brothers, S. C. Hildreth, George W. Loft, Middleton & Jones, Otto Rogers and J. W. Parrish.

The Derby will be run at Churchill Downs May 10. The distance will be at a mile and a quarter for 3-year-olds.

Quests through the Post-Dispatch Theatrical "Want" columns are being made effective every day.

The entire club property is being remodeled and the fishing and hunting facilities will be better than ever.

PITCHER TOM ROGERS JOINS BROWNS' SQUAD

PALESTINE, Tex., March 15.—Tom Rogers, looking better than at any time since he became a member of the Browns, joined the squad en route to San Antonio at Little Rock today. Tom weighs 192 pounds and says he is ready to pitch ball. He pitched five innings of a game at Gallatin, Tenn., last Saturday, and Hub Purdue hurled the last four innings.

Mike Finn, who this year will manage the San Antonio club, boarded the train with Tom Rogers and made the trip with the Browns. Manager Burke issued instructions today to all the players to be ready to report at the ball park Monday at 9 a. m. to start practice.

SPRINGFIELD WINS FROM PEORIA IN TITLE EVENT

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., March 15.—Springfield provided the surprise of the state high school basket ball tournament by defeating the strong Peoria team, 26 to 18 today. The victory left Springfield and Rockford to contend for the title and relegated Peoria to a chance at third honors.

Rockford was given a scare by the plucky Harrin team but managed to win 19 to 14.

Roush, Star of Reds, a Holdout

Salary Offered Is Said to Be Largest Ever Paid a National League Outfielder.

CINCINNATI, O., March 15.—Eddie Roush, the star center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds, has been offered the largest salary paid to any outfielder in the National League, but to date has not signed a contract, demanding an increase over the terms offered by President August Herrmann.

"There seems to be no reason for Roush demanding an increase over these terms," said Herrmann today. "Furthermore, the Cincinnati club has not reduced any player's salary. On the contrary we have guaranteed large increases to the players and in several instances we have even gone beyond the terms of the contracts which were forced upon us through the Federal League warfare."

President Herrmann has announced that no player who has not signed up will be taken to the training camp.

Pat Moran wired from his home in Mississippi today that he does not want Herzog on his team and has never tried to get him. It seems that Herzog will land with the Cubs coming through Cincinnati from Boston, the Reds to get Pets Kilduff and a pitcher.

Grinnell Five Wins.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 15.—The 1918-1919 Missouri Valley conference basket ball season for the University of Nebraska was closed here today when Nebraska was defeated by Grinnell college of Iowa, 22 to 21.

Fort Dodge Is Winner.

AMES, Iowa, March 15.—Fort Dodge won the championship of the Iowa State College Invitation High School tournament here tonight by defeating Council Bluffs, 16 to 11 in a well played game.

James Delehanty Dead.

CLEVELAND, O., March 15.—James Delehanty, 76, whose six sons, Edward, Tom Joseph, James, Frank and William, won fame as professional baseball players, died here today.

Herman Wanted to Meet Winner of Bout Tuesday

South Broadway Club Seeking Champion for Either Kabakoff or Regan.

ASKED TO NAME TERMS

Officials Hopeful for Acceptance—Capacity House Expected for Local Feature.

Pete Herman, bantamweight champion of the world, will be brought to St. Louis for a bout with Kid Regan, providing the latter is successful against Harry Kabakoff at the South Broadway Athletic Club Tuesday night. Matchmaker Harry Uhlemeyer of the South Side organization stated yesterday he would wire the champion immediately for his terms, and if satisfactory financial arrangements can be made, he will appear at the next show of the club.

There is every indication that the bout between Kabakoff and Regan will attract the best house in the history of the South Broadway. Uhlemeyer said last night that 50 per cent of the tickets already had been disposed of to the members. Through a new seating arrangement, the club is now able to care for about 2100 members.

Strong Card Throughout.

Both Regan and Kabakoff have worked faithfully to be in the best condition for the fight. Their last encounter at the same club was one of the fastest exhibitions ever witnessed in the city. The weight agreement is 122 pounds at 3 p. m., which should not be difficult for either boy, though Regan will have less trouble than his opponent. Regan will work out at the South Broadway Club this afternoon at 3 p. m.

The semiwindup promises to be almost as good an exhibition as the feature bout. Stanley Everett, the Pekin, Ill., bantam, is scheduled to oppose Eddie Meiers, a local product who recently graduated from the amateur ranks. Meiers is a protege of Tommy Brammell, while Everett has gained most of his ring knowledge from Pekin Kid Herman.

Johnny Carton, who won his bout at the Coliseum recently with a knockout in the first round, has been matched with Pete Macklin for the preliminary contest Tuesday night. They are booked to go six rounds, while the semiwindup and main event are to be 8-round bouts. Walter Heisner, as usual, will referee.

Houck a Hard Hitter.

One of the best cards ever staged in St. Louis rings should materalize when Mike Gibbons and Leo Houck collide at the Coliseum on March 25. Gibbons is a known quantity in the ring and WELL known at that. Mike has set about in a determined effort to beat down all the middleweights in the country and acquire undisputed possession of the title.

Houck, while not so widely known, has mixed with the best of them. He is a resident of Philadelphia and his specialty is hitting. Gibbons, on the other hand, relies upon speed and cleverness to bring home the victories, although Mike carries a punch and can deliver it if given a chance. Houck had very few fights last year and most of them were against second-raters, but recently has been boxing frequently.

Hanlon Meets Thorpe.

Jimmy Hanlon, Denver lightweight, convoyed by his manager, Joe Sarno, left here last night for Des Moines, Io., where on Monday he will engage Harvey Thorpe in a 12-round bout. Thorpe recently made a great showing against Charlie White and Hanlon undoubtedly will have a busy evening.

Sarno said Hanlon has an offer to box Benny Leonard at Camp Pike, Little Rock, Ark., on March 25, and has tentatively accepted.

CINCINNATI WILL HOLD EAST-WEST NET EVENT

NEW YORK, March 15.—Details for an East versus West team series, consisting probably of six singles and three doubles matches, are being arranged by the officials of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association.

In the last inter-sectional contest of this kind held at Forest Hills, near this city, in 1916, the Eastern players won.

When the executive committee meets here next Friday a recommendation will be made to have the contest take place at Cincinnati, and it is quite likely that the officials will adopt the suggestion.

Hinkle Named Captain.

CHICAGO, March 15.—Paul S. Hinkle, captain of the Chicago University basket ball team during the past season, has been re-elected to serve next year. Hinkle played a guard position for the Maroons, being one of the best in the Western conference, and easily the star for Pat Page's aggregation.

Schauer Signs With Millers.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 15.—Rube Schauer, formerly of the Philadelphia American League club, has signed a contract to play baseball with the Minneapolis club of the American Association. Joe Cantillon, manager of the Minneapolis club, announced today that Schauer will be a member of his 1919 pitching staff.

Harvard Eleven Meets Virginia.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 15.—The Harvard and University of Virginia football elevens will meet here on Oct. 25, it was announced by athletic officials today. The Virginia team will fill the date which was canceled by West Point. Harvard now has but one open date, the Saturday before the Yale game.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Uplifting the Boxing Game.

MAJOR-GENERAL LEONARD WOOD and his associates on the Army, Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control will have to enter upon their Augean house-cleaning of the professional fight stables with gas masks and formaldehyde, if some of the recent revelations of defeated principals are not fumigated and made sanitary.

Gen. Wood hesitated to enter upon the task—at first refused to serve, unless the sphere of the board were purely amateur. He weakened, however, and now as president of the organization he is pledged to put across a national control which will make the game whiter than snow.

To do this he will have to tear up old condition and tradition by the roots and hunt down the last spore, lest reproduction of the old order continue. The old system of exploitation, bombast, misrepresentation, stall and even fake, is deeply rooted. Promoters, managers and fighters have known little else in the past and will doubtless, in many cases, fight all radical changes.

But if boxing is to survive it MUST be nationally controlled by men who will rigidly inforce penalities against offenders. Only a national organization such as that planned by Gen. Wood's associates, can effect such a volcanic upheaval of existing conditions.

Getting Down to Work.

THE new organization is already on the job. To crystalize the views of persons supposed to be authoritative, the secretary of the organization has sent out a questionaire of 18 points on which it asks opinion. Some of these questions relate to commission and club control of the game, after which they involve considerations as to the actual government of contests and the handling of championships.

Following are some of the queries:

6. What should be the maximum number of rounds?
7. Should a decision be given?
8. What should be the minimum weight of the gloves?
9. Do you not think that all promoters, clubs, corporations, associations, referees, judges, boxers, managers, seconds and trainers should be licensed in the same way that jockeys, trainers, starters, chauffeurs and others are licensed?
10. Do you favor the idea of championship belts similar to the Lonsdale belts in England?
11. Do you approve of the following weights and classes?

Bantamweight	118 lbs. or under
Featherweight	125 lbs. or under
Leightweight	135 lbs. or under
Welterweight	145 lbs. or under
Middleweight	160 lbs. or under
Light heavyweight	175 lbs. or under
Heavyweight	No limit

12. Do you think there should be a flyweight class (112 lbs.)?
13. How many hours before entering the ring should the above weights be made?
14. Should the color line be drawn?
15. Do you think the sum said to be demanded by Willard for a championship contest is excessive?
16. If so, what sum do you think would be reasonable?
17. Should not a champion, if called upon to do so, be compelled to defend his title at least once in each year?

Glove Weights Should Vary.

ANSWERS to these questions will doubtless be of the widest range in variation. The writer's responses were as follows:

Ten rounds for ordinary bouts; at least 15 for championships. A decision should be given by two judges, with the referee having the right to break a tie. The weight of gloves should vary with the poundage of the fighters, ranging from four ounces for flyweights to seven ounces for heavyweights over 200.

By all means the Lonsdale championship belt system should be adopted, with the pension feature if feasible. The weights are approximately those of the Wisconsin commission and are satisfactory. There seems no objection to a flyweight class.

Ringside weight should be done away with—it is barbarous and a strain that frequently interferes seriously with fighters' efficiency. Not less than six hours should should intervene between weighing in and the start of the contest.

Can't Draw Color Line.

AS long as this country favors universal suffrage the color line can not be consistently drawn.

The sum to be paid any fighter is precisely what he can get. He should be willnig to box for a percentage of the gate, trusting to his drawing power. If he draws poorly, it is his own lack of popularity in a majority of cases. A small guarantee should be made to protect the boxer. If the promoter can afford to pay Willard's guarantee of $100,000, Willard is worth it.

All champions ought to defend their titles at least twice a year.

Rules Should Be Standardized.

FROM the tabulated returns from these questionaires the fundamental rules governing the game will be laid down. But one question has been omitted that sooner or later will come up. It is:

Ought not new rules be drawn to govern modern boxing conditions; or should not a uniform or standardized interpretation of the Marquis of Queensbury code be promulgated, for use in ALL states?

One of the referee's greatest difficulties is in getting boxers to understand ring conditions prevailing in any locality in which he is showing for the first time. By standardizing the code a referee's lot would be well-nigh a happy one. As in England, the American official, too, could then stand outside the ropes and guide the activities of the boxers aright, without having to charge headlong between them to compel a "break."

If the board of boxing control gets a toe-hold, it will survive and grow strong, because it is so imperatively demanded by existing lax conditions.

Promoters, managers and fighters themselves do not want national control. But every sane supporter of the game must see in it the only salvation for the sport.

CUBS' HOLDOUTS MUST SIGN BEFORE THEY CAN GO ON TRAINING TRIP

CHICAGO, March 15.—Manager Mitchell and the Cub players depart from Chicago Wednesday night for Pasadena, Cal., where they will do their spring training. There remain four or five players, who have not signed their contracts. Mitchell warns the players that they will have to accept terms before the start or they will not be permitted to start the trip.

"I do not want to be bothered with contracts after we leave Chicago," said Mitchell today. "The players will have to sign here or stay behind."

Charlie Hollocher, Fred Merkle, George Tyler, Charlie Deal and Vic Aldridge are thought to be the players Mitchell will have to argue with.

Hollocher will probably be the first to be taken into conference. He will come to Chicago Monday or Tuesday. The Cub team would be in a sorry plight without the service of Hollocher, yet President Mitchell says it cannot afford to give him what he has requested.

MUNICIPAL ELEVENS TO OPEN SERIES TO DECIDE CITY CHAMPION TODAY

The elimination series to decide the championship of the Municipal Soccer Association will be started this afternoon at Fairground No. 2, when a doubleheader is scheduled to be played. In the opener, the Alpen Braus tackle the Allies, while in the second the Trumbulls and Rock Church will clash. The first game will start at 1:30 o'clock.

The four elevens that are battling in today's clashes were the victors in the senior divisions. Of the quartet, the Trumbulls, who won at Fairground No. 2 made the best record, having captured 15 straight games. The Rock Church won at Fairground No. 4; Alpen Braus at Sherman Park, and the Allies in the Wagner League.

In today's games, regulation halves of 45 minutes will be played. In the event that the score is tied at the end of 90 minutes of play, an extra 16-minute period, to be divided into two 8-minute halves, will be staged.

Rules governing the championship games will be the same as in previous seasons.

The victors of the games today will next Sunday start a three-game series to decide the city title victor. There were only four senior divisions connected with the association this season.

D. BANCROFT HAS NOT SIGNED WITH PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, March 15.—The Philadelphia National League club announced tonight it had signed all its old players with the exception of shortstop Bancroft and outfielder Meusel, who are said to be holdouts, and catcher Burns who has announced he has quit baseball.

Forest Cady, formerly of the Boston Red Sox and Philadelphia Athletics, has signed with the club.

The club has also signed the following new players not heretofore announced: J. F. Faircloth, F. R. Wallace, L. E. Stringer, pitchers; Elmer Brandell, infielder; and Walter Roessinger, first baseman.

The team will leave for Charlette, N. C., March 24.

M'GILLIVRAY SETS NEW 440-YARD SWIM MARK

CHICAGO, March 15.—Perry McGillivray of Great Lakes Naval Training Station, established a new world's record 6:02 3-5 for the 440 yard back stroke open event in tonight's Central A. A. U. tank events, making three other new marks of 2:52 2-5 for 200 meters; 4:26 for 300 meters and 5:30 for 400 yards.

Great Lakes took nearly all the honors in the regular events.

Cleveland Takes Second Place by One Point Margin

Defeats Yeatman for Runnerup Honors in Final 10 Seconds of Play, 25-24.

SOLDAN BEATS CENTRAL

Champions Close 1919 Season With Victory; Two Teams Tie for Third Place.

By the narrow margin of a single point Cleveland High School last night clinched second place in the windup of the local high school championship basket ball season, defeating Yeatman. The score was 25 to 24, and it was not until the final 10 seconds of play the center, Schlappriza of Cleveland, shot the goal that decided the contest.

In the first game of the doubleheader the Soldan quintet, winners of the title, closed their season with a rather one-sided victory over Central by a 33 to 16 count. This was the seventh victory of the season for the gold and brown, while they lost but one game.

Second Game a Thriller.

The second game of the night's twin bill, that between Yeatman and Cleveland, was one of the best games of the entire season. Going into the second half, Yeatman held a 14-to-13 lead and seemed in a fair way to finish the season in a tie with their opponents for runnerup honors. However, Cleveland tied the score shortly after the opening of the final period and subsequently, the lead fluctuated with never more than one point separating the teams at any stage.

About 10 seconds before the last whistle when it appeared an extra session might be necessary to decide the game, Schlappriza shot his goal, giving Cleveland a one-point margin. Yeatman was unable to make this up in the short time intervening before the close of the game. The work of Forward Placke for Cleveland together with that of Schlappriza was easily the feature of the game. Roettger, center for Yeatman, did yeoman service in an effort to put his team out in front, scoring 15 points. The other nine points for Yeatman were counted by Weinel, who was stationed at left forward.

Central was unable to give Soldan much competition in the first game despite the fact that the former was without the services of Long, the regular left forward, who was ill. Gazzolo, right guard for Soldan, also was forced out of the lineup in the first period, when during a scrimmage, he suffered a broken nose.

Smith Plays Great Game.

Smith, at right forward, played a really great game for Soldan. He scored 25 points, which was considerably more than the entire Central quintet accounted for. Anzalone, right forward for Central, was forced out of the game in the second period on four personal fouls and he was supplemented by McTearnan. The final standing of the high schools in the race follows:

Trans-Mississippi May Not Be 'Open' Invitation Event

Country Club Committee Believes Members Would Prefer Closed Golf Tourney.

STARTING DATE JUNE 9

Decision Means That Only Members of the T-M Association Will Be Eligible.

That the 1919 Trans-Mississippi golf tournament, which is being promoted by the St. Louis Country Club, will not be made an open invitation event was the belief expressed by Stuart G. Stickney of the committee in charge of arrangements.

In response to a question, Mr. Stickney told the Post-Dispatch that it had virtually been agreed that an invitation tournament was not what the Trans-Mississippi players wanted. He said it was the view of most players with whom he had talked that the event would cease to be a Trans-Mississippi championship if Evans, Ouimet, Travers, Marston, Kirkby and the other stars from other sections of the country were admitted to competition.

"We prefer this to be strictly a Trans-Mississippi championship. It would not be fair to our golfers, who are not of national tournament caliber, to invite champions to compete against them. They would not have much chance of winning, nor would the event be a sectional title event, in that case.

"We have about come to the conclusion that it will be best for all concerned not to make this event an invitation affair."

Western to Follow T.-M.

The question of opening this tourney arose when the Western championship tournament, which is also to be held in the St. Louis district, at Sunset Hill Club, June 16, decided to invite leading players of the country to compete.

In this case the invitation was justified, as Francis Ouimet, the 1917 winner, was an invited guest when he won it. Ouimet, Evans and other Western players are of strictly national championship caliber and are not, therefore, at a disadvantage when it comes to playing for the title. Nevertheless, the Western is still not a strictly W. G. A. championship feature, as long as the Eastern men are invited.

Country Club is preparing to make the event the most notable Trans-Mississippi tourney in history.

Forest Park Club Not Eligible.

It is unlikely that the Forest Park Golf Association will ever obtain recognition from the District Golf Association until the constitution of the latter organization is altered. A clause recites that only clubs which own or lease their links and clubhouses are eligible. The purpose of this clause is to have as members only such organizations as are able to entertain the other clubs adequately, when its turn to stage the tourney rolls around.

Triple A owns its own clubhouse, although operating in Forest Park. It was a charter member of the St. Louis District Association.

Out of Whole Cloth.

Reports from Chicago that an intercity professional golf match, with four professionals from St. Louis (including Jim Barnes and Stewart Maiden) competing, although hardly "all wool and a yard wide," seems to have been made out of whole cloth. None of the local clubs have heard of any such move; Maiden seldom participates in competitive events.

The contest would prove an interesting feature, especially if each city were entitled to stage part of the competition.

Now for the Periscope Putter.

The 1919 crop of freak clubs are beginning to make their appearance. A golfer discharged from the navy incorporated his experience chasing submarines into what he calls a periscope putter. This contrivance has a small looking glass attached to the shaft, the idea being that the player simply by peeking into the glass can get the line without looking at the cup. The inventor doesn't guarantee his new-fangled putter will sink 'em from all parts of the green, however.

On a certain Philadelphia course there's a stone quarry that's foiled many ambitious golfers. Bill, a club member with a notorious reputation as a quick counter of strokes, invited two friends to accompany him on a recent Sunday round.

Approaching the quarry hole, Bill sliced his shot, the ball dropping into the yawning stone receptacle. The two friends remained on the fairway and distinctly heard a series of whacks as the club head crashed against the stone.

"How many, Bill?" asked the invited guests as the host climbed out of the quarry.

"Three," promptly replied the puffing Bill.

"Why, we heard six," exclaimed the friends in chorus.

"Huh, three were echoes," shot back Bill as he scribbled on his score card.

JUNIOR MERCANTILE TO BE IN FIELD THIS YEAR

The Junior Mercantile League of the Municipal Baseball Association, which was organized four years ago by Phil Kavanaugh, will be in the field again this season. When the circuit was first formed it had four clubs, while last year it completed the campaign with eight.

Kavanaugh states that he already has five teams lined up and that any others that wish to enter can communicate with him at the Grand Leader.

After July 1.

I MET a stranger on the street
Who whispered in a tone discreet:
"My friend, I am a stranger here
And fain would have a glass of beer.
Now tell me truly do you think
There is a chance to get a drink?"
Against his ear I placed my lip
And whispered: "Try the Mississip!"

He answered, "Since July the first
I have acquired such a thirst
My tongue is hanging out a yard,
So loosen up and tell me, pard,
Is there a place where I can go
And drown my sorrow and my woe?
You do not know how dry I am"——
I gently murmured, "Yuba Dam."

"Dike" Brannigan Will Play Today

Local Soccer Star Has Been Reinstated by the United States Football Body.

"Dike" Brannigan, who a few months ago was suspended by the officials of the United States Football Association, has been reinstated and will line up with the St. Louis Screw Co. in the game with the Innisfails at Cardinal Field today. This is the second clash, the Scullins and Ben Millers being scheduled to meet in the opener.

Notice of Brannigan's reinstatement was received by officials of the St. Louis Soccer League yesterday, and with Mulligan suspended for his actions last Sunday, acting Manager Johnny Miller decided to use Brannigan on the forward line. With Brannigan in the game the Screw Co. has a good chance of defeating the present leaders.

Should the Screw Co. win and the Scullins succeed in downing the Millers, Tate Brady's men will again go to first place, a position they relinquished last Sunday, when beaten by the Ininsfails, 6—0.

First game today will start at 2:15 o'clock. Phil Kavanaugh is scheduled to referee.

OFFICIAL MAGAZINE OF STATE BILLIARD BODY IN CIRCULATION HERE

The "M. B. A. News," the official publication of the recently organized Missouri Association, made its initial appearance in St. Louis yesterday. It was in the form of an 8-page booklet, containing, among other items of interest, a satetment of the purpose of the organization.

Local officials of the organization said this was the first step in the move to clean up the game in the State. The magazine was issued primarily to assist the roomkeepers in obtaining memberships to the association and it is planned to make the publication a semi-monthly one.

At a meeting held here last week, the roomkeepers pledged redoubled efforts to exact the number of memberships they pledged when the association was originally formed. Committees appointed will visit the various districts in the city this week for the purpose of prevailing upon the palyers to join.

TIGERS' BATTERY MEN START FOR MACON, GA.

DETROIT, Mich., March 15.—Two Detroit American pitchers, Boland and James, and Catchers Yelle and Stange, left here tonight for Macon, Ga., to begin training next week. Other members of the Tiger battery staff will join the party at Cincinnati or go direct from their homes. Infielders and outfielders are to report March 23.

Bobby Jones sent in his contract today, leaving only Cobb, Bush and Dauss unsigned. President Navin is said to be confident Cobb and Dauss will report, but nothing definitely has been heard from Shortstop Bush, who announced several days ago he would seek a transfer if his salary is not increased.

Browns to Be Without Services of Scout for Entire 1919 Season

WHETHEH they win the pennant or not, the Browns have established a precedent for major league clubs in that they will go through the current season without one scout on the payroll. Eddie Herr, who toured the "bushes" in search of young talent last season, obtained his release from Phil Ball's club in order to manage Salt Lake.

Asked yesterday whether a successor to Herr would be chosen, Business Manager Quinn answered in the negative. He pointed out that with the small number of minor leagues operating this season, it would not be necessary to hire a scout. So far as is known this is the first time in the history of the major leagues that one or more scouts have not been employed.

FRENCH GIRL REPORTED TO BE STAR IN TENNIS

Capt. Clarence J. Griffin, who recently returned from service abroad, says that Mlle. Lengler, the French girl whose playing has been a feature of foreign tournaments, probably could beat some of the men on the ranking list in the United States.

He reports that she is playing marvelous tennis at present, and if she should participate in any of the American tournaments this summer, he believes that her playing would easily be considered the feature of the season.

Combined License Bill Has Support of All Sportsmen

Proposed Measure Cuts Hunting Charges in Half and Adds Fishing Privileges.

FISHING ALONE TO BE $1

Nonresident Charges for Hunters Reduced From $25, Under Old Law, to $10.

Within the next ten days the amended hunting and fishing license bill will be brought to a vote in the Missouri House, after which it must return to the Senate. The proposed law, for the first time in the history of Missouri, provides for a fishing license, a revenue raising feature now in vogue in many other states.

The bill, known as Senate Bill 445, provides, among other things, the following:

A combined state-wide hunting and fishing license of $2.50, for residents.

A combined county hunting and fishing license (it includes rights in contiguous counties, too), cost $1.00.

A state-wide fishing license alone, $1.00.

A non-resident state-wide hunting and fishing license of $10.00.

A non-resident fishing license alone of $3.00.

For the combination hunter and fisher the new bill is a boon. Instead of a state license of $5, formerly existing, he now pays half, with fishing privileges added. The county hunter and fisher shares the same big reduction.

Minors, Women Fish Free.

Besides these beneficiaries by the new bill, exemptions in favor of women, children and boys under 18 years of age, who are allowed to fish free. The nonresident license is cut from $25 to $10.

Another exemption is in favor of the farmer and land owner, who may fish at will where the stream touches his property.

The revenue derived from the licenses under the new arrangement will in part be devoted to the construction of new hatcheries. The only active hatchery in the State, under State management, is that at Forest Park, St. Louis, where close to 1,000,000 game fingerlins were raised and planted last year by Fish Commissioner W. W. Ellis and his assistants.

The output is totally inadequate to satisfy the demands. Hatcheries are planned at Kansas City, St. Joe and Verona, Mo.

The Game Department is supporting the bill, which plans the construction and maintenance of hatcheries sufficient to stock all the waters of the State. In the past the Fish Commission has been dependent on appropriations, some of which were diverted after being allowed. No new hatcheries planned have ever been begun, while one formerly in existence at St. Joe had to be abandoned for lack of funds.

The ancient and venerable Fish Commission car, the Izaak Walton, which is of the vintage of 1890, and is about to collapse of antiquity, may be replaced. A bill to buy a steel car is before the Legislature.

F. Baker Decides to Join Huggins' Team Again This Summer

NEW YORK, March 15.

FRANK BAKER, third baseman and leading batsman of the New York Americans, who previously announced business interests would prevent his playing baseball next season, will rejoin the club after all, it was announced tonight by Lieutenant-Colonel T. L. Huston, part owner of the club and Manager Huggins.

Huston and Huggins, who have just returned from a visit to Baker's farm at Trappe, Md., said he had promised to play because he felt that he owed an obligation to the club, inasmuch as it had invested a large sum in his purchase from the Philadelphia Americans in 1916.

Baker has been excused from the training trip, it was stated.

ABEKEN INVITED TO GO TO PITTSBURG 'SANDLOT' BASEBALL CONFERENCE

Rodowe H. Abeken, Superintendent of Recreation in St. Louis, has been invited by the officials of the National Baseball Federation, the "sand-lot" baseball governing body of the country, to attend the conference at the William Penn Hotel in Pittsburg on Monday, March 24, and outline the local plan for the conduct and promotion of both the so-called amateur and semi-professional baseball divisions of "sand-lot" baseball.

The conference has been called for the purpose, if possible, of establishing a standard ocde of eligibility, rules and regulations of both the so-called amateur and semi-professional classifications. At the present time, it has been found, there are many different definitions and constructions on what is an amateur ballplayer. This lack of a standard code has prevented the more rapid extension of the sport in many parts of the country and has often resulted in much dissatisfaction when inter-city championship series have been arranged for. Some cities devote most of their attention to the so-called amateur brand of sand-lot baseball, while others cater more to the semi-professional classification, and still others promote and conduct both kinds.

The National Baseball Federation recognizes both classifications, contending that there is a distinct field for the amateur, who does not secure any monetary reward for his services as a player to the team with which he is registered, and the semi-professional player, who gets small sums of money for his skilled services, but who does not depend for a livelihood upon his income from baseball.

MISSOURI QUINT AGAIN DEFEATS KANSAS AGGIES

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 15.—With a whirlwind finish, the Missouri basketball five took the second game from the Kansas Aggies, Missouri Valley champions, tonight, 38 to 23.

Scott tied the score with a field goal in the first minute of the second half, and Ruby followed with two more baskets which gave the Tigers a lead held for the rest of the game.

The game was the fastest played here this year. The Tiger passing was almost perfect. Scott and Vogt starred for Missouri. Jennings, with long shots for the baskets, Stone for the Aggies.

TOLEDO, O., March 15.—A Chicago bowler hung up a new high score record for the American Bowling Congress tournament here today when he went over the "1900" mark for his nine games.

Jack Reilly, a member of the Drovers Journal five, collected 672 in the individuals and went into second place in that division. He had games of 164, 240 and 268. Paired with E. Baumgartner, also of Chicago, Reilly counted 628 for his share of the couple's 1182, which took them into tenth place in the doubles. With his team last night Reilly bowled 617, making a total of 1917 for the all-events, which is the eighth highest aggregate for nine games in the history of the congress. Another Chicago pair, H. Lempuhl and A. Sindelar, to day reached the 1210 mark and went into second place in that department.

Injuries Fatal To Auto Racer; Durant Winner

Melcher, Substitute Driver, Loses Life When Car Turns Over in Road Race.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., March 15.—Cliff Durant came home today over the Santa Monica automobile race course ahead of his teammate, Eddie Hearne, winning in 3 hours, 4 minutes, 45 seconds for 250.34 miles in laps of 7.369 miles each. He won a prize of $4000. Durant's average speed was 81.6 miles an hour.

Hearne's time was 3h. 11m. 59s. and as second man he won $2500. Louis Le Cocq finished third in 3h. 15m. 28s., winning $1500. Eddie Pullen came in fourth, time 3h. 20m. 40s. He received $1000.

Walter Melcher, who at the last minute was substituted for Driver A. E. Christenson in car No. 17, died during the race as the result of injuries suffered when his machine overturned at a point where a long curve proved troublesome for many drivers. Melcher lived at San Francisco.

Durant and Hearne started in first and second places and stayed there throughout. Hearne ran a nonstop race. Durant stopped twice for tire changes, losing 26 seconds each time. W. W. Brown was the only driver besides Hearne to make a nonstop record.

Of the 14 cars that started only three besides the prize winners remained to be flagged down. They were Brown, Omar Toft and Edward Kaster.

The crowd was the largest ever assembled on the course, according to race officials, who estimated it at more than 150,000 persons.

A HOT SPOT Chalmers Never Cries for Gas

A GALLON of gas goes a long ways in a Hot Spot Chalmers. For the great engine in this remarkable car wrings every last bit of power out of gas.

As soon as it leaves the carbureter the gas hits the Hot Spot (one of two magnificent devices common only to a Chalmers) and there it is "cracked up" into "dust".

So "dry" does this gas become that once it reaches the cylinders and the spark plugs touch it off there is translated immediately almost every single bit of power that nature put into gas.

But to get the "dry" gas to the cylinders from the Hot Spot is no easy matter.

The great Ram's-horn was designed to do this work and it does the task well.

See this device and you'll never forget it. You'll wonder why it wasn't done years ago. But the common every day thing known as a pin, remember, was one of the last things the human mind devised.

One look at this Chalmers car of today and you'll want to sit behind the wheel. One ride there—and you'll want one.

Six months later, you, too, will say that the Chalmers is really one of the few great cars of the world.

SUFFRAGIST PLAYLET HEARD BY 500 WOMEN

Miss Bulkley's Sketch of Susan B. Anthony Trial Read at Pre-Convention Tea.

St. Louis adherents of the theory of universal suffrage were transported back to the year of 1873 yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Statler, where they witnessed the courtmartial of Susan B. Anthony, accused of the crime of attempting to cast her vote for a Congressman. The occasion was the premier presentation of the one-act sketch, "The Truth," written by Miss Mary E. Bulkley, which was read as an attraction at the pre-convention tea of the St. Louis Equal Suffrage League.

"The Truth" is a playlet with a prologue, based on the trial. The prologue introduces the principals, Judge Hunt, the presiding justice at the trial; Horatio Seymour, Governor of New York, and Roscoe Conkling, then United States Senator from New York. The latter two are pictured as visiting the jurist in his home and pleading with him neither to give the case to a jury nor to inflict a fine, declaring: "If that woman is not attended to properly she will be able to raise the very devil for the next 50 years. Above all, it would not do to give her a chance to talk of the trial."

Following the prologue is the trial. The Judge, forgetful of his instructions, made way for the exercise of the defendant's prerogative by asking: "If you have anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon you," a lapse of memory that led to such sorry results that it was necessary to adjourn court to stop the flow of feminine logic.

Five hundred suffragists sat through the reading of the playlet and the speeches that preceded it. The speakers were Mrs. E. A. Reton, who was chairman; Mrs. Roland G. Usher and Mrs. E. T. Senseney. Mrs. Usher, who organized the first Equal Suffrage Association in St. Louis in 1908, pointed to Miss Marie Garescho of West Pine boulevard as the pioneer St. Louis suffragist, along with Mrs. Percival Chubb and Miss Jane Winn, a newspaper woman.

Mrs. Senseney, who is head of the Community Kitchens' Association, gave a short talk on the practical workings and value of that sort of community enterprise, and Miss Mollie Blumenkranz interpreted a group of songs.

MRS. STOLHOFF EXONERATED IN INSURANCE INVESTIGATION

No Evidence Introduced to Disprove Her Statements in the Bodamer Case.

A grand jury investigation of charges against Mrs. Kate Stolhoff, proprietor of an undertaking establishment of 1044 Park avenue, in connection with the issuance of an insurance policy on the life of Mrs. Jennie A. Bodamer, 37 years old, a widow, of 909 South Fourteenth street, Thursday, exonerated Mrs. Stolhoff of any connection with the matter.

Mrs. Stolhiff, Frank C. Sheer, an insurance agent, of 3219 California avenue, and Dr. C. Basile Poore of 1105 Carr street, were arrested Feb. 8 at the instigation of an investigator for the Bankers' Life Association of Monmouth, Ill., after Mrs. Bodamer, who had been notified by the company that, as a policyholder she was entitled to vote as a stockholder, declared she had not taken out life insurance in the company.

She said she had ben approached by Sheer and had signed a paper, but denied it was an application for insurance. The investigator sent here by the company said, at the time the arrests were made, that he had a doctor's certificate stating Mrs. Bodamer was suffering from an organic disease which would prevent her obtaining insurance.

The police maintained that Mrs. Stolhoff said she had witnessed Mrs. Bodamer's signature to the application. This Mrs. Stolhoff denied, and no evidence was introduced to disprove her assertion that she knew nothing of the matter.

MUSIC IS NEEDED

Time was when music was considered simply an accomplishment, a frill, an occupation for superfluous time—a source of pleasure, it is true, but only to the few who really understood it. Music was something you should like, but perhaps didn't.

EVERYBODY LIKES MUSIC—they were born that way. But unfortunately not everyone knows that he likes it, for he does not care for all kinds of music. There is, however, music for everyone, if he will but find his particular kind.

Before the war—so many things were different before the war—the wonderful scope and versatility of music was not comprehended by the general public. Strange to say, even the government leaders failed to appreciate the importance of music until its great value was demonstrated, and then they utilized it in every phase of war's activities.

You know the story of music during the war. It played an essential part—a part nothing else could fill, for there is no substitute for music.

The nation has acknowledged its debt to music through its leaders. The people are conscious of the service rendered on the battlefield and in camp, but they do not grasp the fact that music served the nation best by serving so fully and completely the people in their hour of trial and stress.

Without understanding the reason—knowing only the fact that they want it—the people are now turning to music for solace and for pleasure, for increased effort and for rest, as a friend and a companion.

Did you ever stop to think how much joy and brightness music is capable of bringing into your life if you will allow it?

It took a war to wake the nation up.

How about you! Are you going to wait for something to stir you—a sorrow, a strain, a shock?

Open the windows of your soul and let music in. Bring it into your home.

Buy a Piano, a Player-Piano or a Phonograph. There is no investment you can make which will bring you or your family more pleasure—more contentment.

BROKERAGE FIRM LEASES HOME IN JACCARD BUILDING

G. H. Walker & Co. to Give Up North Fourth Street Quarters, Long Occupied, for Locust Street Corner.

LOFTS OF UPPER FLOORS PLANNED

Firm's Removal Regarded as Significant of Concentration of Institutions—Corner for Chain Stores.

By Berry Moore.

G. H. Walker & Co., stock and bond brokers, have virtually completed arrangements to occupy the first floor of the Jaccard building, at the northwest corner of Broadway and Locust street. The concern, which is one of the most important of its kind in the city, has for several years been located at 307 N. Fourth street.

The Jaccard building is owned by the Kennett estate and is under the management of the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co. The Mermod-Jaccard & King Jewelry Co., the business of which was absorbed by the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co., formerly occupied the first floor and basement of the building. The rental to be paid by Walker & Co., has not been disclosed, but it is understood that they will occupy the quarters under a long lease.

Plans are being completed for the conversion into lofts of all the upper floors of the building. These are now divided into rooms for offices and specialty shops and are occupied by hundreds of tenants. The building comprises eight stories and is one of the best and most attractive of its type in the central business district.

Acquisition of this corner by G. H. Walker & Co., following the purchase of the northwest corner of Seventh and Locust street as the site for a new home for the St. Louis Union Bank and its co-partner, the St. Louis Union Trust Co, is noteworthy as showing a concentration of financial establishments on Locust street.

Offers for Club Building

Many offers are reported to have been made for the Mercantile Club Building, at the southwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets, including several from financial establishments contemplating staking their claims on this thoroughfare. This building was recently advertised under a first and a second deed of trust, executed to secure the bondholders and is available at an advantageous price.

The Mercantile Trust Co. was the first financial institution to establish itself on Locust street. The wisdom of its decision in this connection is exemplified by the fact that it has been necessary for it to double the size of its original building at the northeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets, and which now extends through to St. Charles street.

The American Trust Co., in connection with the Title Guarantee Trust Co., recently erected a home on the south side of Locust street, between Seventh and Eighth streets. The Mechanics-American National Bank several years ago removed to the southwest corner of Broadway and Locust street, where it occupies the entire ground floor of the Mercantile Liberary Building.

The situation as to business property is steadily improving. The demand for stores in downtown St. Louis, as well as in the residential parts of the city, is significant, that from outside interests seeking to establish stores in the city being a distinct feature.

Corners for Chain Stores.

According to realty circles, the Piggly & Wiggly Grocery Co., having headquarters in Memphis, Tenn., and stores in Cincinnati and in other cities of the Ohio Valley, is casting about in St. Louis for corners for a chain of stores to be opened here. The concern conducts grocery stores on the order of a cafeteria, where one waits on himself, gets a check and pays the cashier as he goes out. The prices are marked on all the goods in the stores, facilitating the purchases. These stores are said to be a boon to the communities in which they are operated.

The Owl Drug Co., which operates retail drug stores all over the Pacific Coast, is also said to be seeking corners in St. Louis. This concern conducts a chain of stores in San Francisco and in Los Angeles, which are a feature of the business life of those cities. The concern, it is reported, is dickering for the southwest corner of Sixth and Olive streets.

Group of Apartments Purchased by Richmond, Va., Man

Harvey L. Denoon of Richmond, Va., has purchased through the Mercantile Trust Co., the Woodstock, Waverly Place, Ivanhoe and Mannering Apartments, at the southeast corner of Waverly place and Lafayette avenue.

There are four buildings, each comprising six apartments. They were owned by a client of the Mercantile Trust Co., which has had their management.

Denoon, who has been in St. Louis for a week or more,, is enthusiastic as to the outlook of this city. The management of the apartments will continue with the Mercantile Trust Co.

The price paid was not made public.

DOWNTOWN REALTY DEALS INDICATIVE OF NEW INTEREST

Several Sales of High-Value Holdings Reported, but Details Await Filing of Papers.

Developments of the week indicate an awakening in the downtown section of the St. Louis realty market, which has been decidedly lethargic transfers of holdings in this area being infrequent.

Several sales of downtown buildings were virtually concluded during the week, but in each instance the precise location and identity of the purchasers have been withheld, pending execution of final papers.

The Goldwasser & Dubinsky Realty Co. has effected the sale of a 30-foot plot on Washington avneue, between Broadway and Sixth street. The price mentioned in this instance is $400,000.

Edward L. Bakewell has closed earnest-money contracts for the control of property in the central district, aggregating in value nearly $500,000.

The tract is situated at the northwest corner of Clayton and Skinker, overlooking Forest Park. It has the best class of surface improvements and all the advantages of the city.

TREATISE ON WILLS FEATURE OF TRUST COMPANY PAPER

Article Cites Cella Deaths as Case of "Simultaneous" Demise and Disposition of Property.

Those contemplating making wills, or those having property, personal or real, subject to distribution after their death according to law, will find information in the March number of "Service," house publication of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

As a prelude to a comprehensive article on wills, the translated text of the will of Uah, the oldest document of its kind in the world, is presented with a fac simile illustration of the instrument itself. "Testing of Wills" is the caption of the article, which discusses every particular of will making and which shows the litigation likely to result from wills drawn by laymen or persons ignorant of the law.

A chapter is devoted to "Simultaneous Deaths," that of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Cella being related as an instance. In this connection the article says: "You see, a person cannot very well make a will disposing of property which he or she does not own, and while you may want to leave certain property absolutely to your wife and give her the power to will it away as suits her best, just as Uah did, you ought to make some provision as to what shall happen if you and your wife be killed in the same railroad accident, or if, as in the Cella case, your wife be unconscious on her deathbed at the time you die."

G. Prather Knapp, manager of publicity of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., is the writer of the article.

AGENCY DOUBLES ITS SPACE

Fidelity Mutual Life Company Adapts Self to Business Increase.

The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia, of which J. M. Bloodworth is the St. Louis district manager, has doubled its space in the Boatmen's Bank Building, at Broadway and Olive streets.

Bloodworth became the local manager of the company a little more than a year ago when it established its offices in this building. He has associated with him his son, Carlton, who has just been released from service in the U. S. navy.

"Our new double indemnity and double disability income for life contracts," declared Bloodworth, "has brought to us a vastly increased business over that of the previous years."

Growth of Banking Described.

The growth of banking, and particularly of trust companies, in the Central West and Southwest, is described in the most recent of the series of historical advertisements of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., prepared by G. Prather Knapp. The brief article explains how this region has "come into its own" through the growth of financial institutions in the control of men whose primary interests are in this territory.

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

If St. Louis Was Your Farm—Where Would You Build Your House?

IF St. Louis was your farm where would you build your house? The farmer has usually a large stretch of open land on any part of which he may build. He has just three things to consider: first, his comfort; second, his access to the outside world; third, his convenience to neighbors.

He always thinks of his comfort first and this makes him build not on a wind-swept summit because that is cold in winter and hot in summer; not in a hollow because that is unhealthy, and not on a flat plain because that has all the undesirable qualities of the summit and the hole put together. When he can do so, the farmer always builds on the southern side of a slope where the summit protects him from the winter's icy blasts, where the sun warms and brightens him in cold weather and where the southern breezes reach him directly in summer. If St. Louis was your farm, you would choose Ames Place for your house.

Next Sunday we will discuss Ames Place from the standpoint of access to the outside world and show you that if St. Louis was your farm you would choose Ames Place for your house from that standpoint.

The Sunday following we will consider Ames Place from the standpoint of convenience to the right sort of neighbors and show you that if St. Louis was your farm you would choose Ames Place for your house from that consideration.

Today we want to emphasize the comfort of a home in Ames Place. We want you to drive out Delmar avenue to Pennsylvania and then turn south to Ames Place, or take the Delmar car to Rosedale and walk south to Ames Place, or if that is more convenient, take the University car to Pennsylvania and get off right in Ames Place.

You will find a competent man in the office at Pershing avenue who will give full information in regard to lots for sale, restrictions, prices per foot, and the possibilities of using this Company's resources in financing the building of a home.

High-class residence property east of Pennsylvania Avenue is limited and the prices on vacant property will advance. The logical time to buy a building lot is now and the logical place to buy it is Ames Place.

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

Building Boom Is Here
Prices Going Up in
HI-POINTE

The housing problem in St. Louis has become acute. Lack of building for the past three years has produced a situation that is causing a great inconvenience to the general public.

There is a real scarcity in residences, flats and apartments of all sizes in almost every section of the city, and, as practically no construction is under way at this time, this problem is going to become serious within the next few months.

Real estate men throughout the city are being besieged day after day by home seekers of all kinds, some to rent, some to buy. The demand has been so great that few agents have anything at all desirable to offer. Most of them have sold everything listed and are advertising for new property to meet the demand.

This condition is going to produce a building boom that will far exceed any this city has ever known—in fact, this boom has already started. Practically every architect in the city is busy with plans for buildings of all kinds. Never were prospects better for building operations. It is not only in St. Louis, but in every large city.

The demand for vacant property in desirable localities is going to be tremendous. It is going to cause a boom in this class of property which will send the prices up in leaps and bounds.

HI-POINTE is absolutely the peer of all subdivisions on the market at this time. The location is the finest in St. Louis—just across the street from Forest Park, and convenient to the finest schools, colleges and churches in the city. It is the highest, as well as the most beautiful, tract of ground in St. Louis, and the prices are rapidly rising to the value of surrounding property.

It has been selling from $20 to $30 per front foot below neighboring subdivisions, when it should have been selling for more than these other properties from the beginning.

HI-POINTE offers a real opportunity to make money. The prices here have gradually but continually increased since the subdivision was opened, even when the Government had stopped all building operations, and now, with the great building boom coming on, there is sure to be a boom in this section.

On Monday, March 24th, every lot in the residence section will be Increased $5.00 Per Front Foot

On Monday, March 31st, every lot in the bungalow section will be increased.

RESIDENCES FOR SALE

A "Truly Wonderful" Maryland Terrace Home for Sale

Owner's business compels him to move to Philadelphia the coming week.

The house is a bargain. It's attractive, thoroughly "livable," every room splendidly arranged, built-in, heated garage, beautiful terraces, both front and rear, having four bedrooms and two baths. The maid's room and her bath are on a floor separate from the main bedroom floor. Note the upstairs glassed-in sleeping porch, or sunroom, and the lower porch, screened in.

House is complete in every detail. Screens, weather stripped, fixtures, walls of rooms water colored, ready to move into.

It is built of four shades of mat brick, producing a tapestry effect; built east to west, on the order of the homes in Brentmoor and Forest Ridge, taking fullest advantage of St. Louis' wonderful eight-months-out-of-the-year climate. This permits a flood of sunshine and air in every room. Think what this means to the hard-working business man, to the wife, to the children. Can the apartment ever take the place of such a home?

This is one of the most attractive homes in West St. Louis, designed and built by Mr. Wright, who created Brentmoor and Forest Ridge. He selected the lot for the house, taking a specially wide lot, 219 feet deep, facing 80-foot wide Westmoreland drive, the lot running back into the Sunken Garden, famed throughout St. Louis as one of the most beautiful spots in the city.

The house ties right in with its yards, grounds and its surroundings. To the east and west are homes and grounds costing $16,500 to $30,000 each.

Maryland Terrace is a 100-ACRE RESIDENCE PARK, adjoining the campus of Washington University. Every lot is 190 to 219 feet deep. Building lines hold the houses back 62 feet from wide drives. The grading and street improvements alone in Maryland Terrace cost more than $250,000.00. All this has been done to give to discriminating St. Louis business and professional men home sites which are attractive now, and will always be attractive, because there can never be any crowding of houses.

In Maryland Terrace you avoid the 140-foot depth lot and the narrow lot. When a home and garage are built on a 140-foot depth lot you can only set the house back 30 feet from the street. And your neighbors must do the same thing. What chance, then, have you for carrying out planting schemes, for yards for the children, for yourself to relax in? That is why you soon tire and want to move, when you live in a crowded section.

In Maryland Terrace there can never be any crowding. The houses, too, are different —none of the square, uninteresting types. Stuccos and bricks are intermingled, producing a beautiful WHOLE. Soon the 5000 shade trees we have planted will be 35 feet high. Picture how the nature green of these 5000 trees and the thousands of shrubs will blend with the soft tones of the stuccos and the warm browns of the brick residences in Maryland Terrace.

These, then, are your surroundings when you buy this home. If you pay $80 a month rent for your apartment and garage, you can afford to live in Maryland Terrace, in this home, and be able to enjoy the freedom of the open and the closed porches, the terraces and grounds. The net price for this home and grounds is $15,900. You couldn't build the house alone for less than $15,000 if you had the wide, deep lot given you FREE. Terms can be arranged to suit you. The grounds alone will go to $150 a front foot.

Drive to Pennsylvania av. (west boundary of campus), then two blocks west on Westmoreland drive. Owner will be home all day Sunday. After Sunday you can get key from Mr. Davis, living at northeast corner Westmoreland and Williams av. Cabany 147W.

WELL-BUILT MARYLAND TERRACE HOME FOR SALE

If you pay $80 a month rent you can afford this home.

This house has great possibilities; lot is 80 feet wide by 219 feet deep; house is strictly colonial-mission; inside and out, designed and supervised by a very prominent St. Louis architect; it gets entirely away from some of the present types of "squatty ceilings," "squatty" windows, "squatty" bungalow houses; it is flooded with light and sunshine. This home can be sold for $14,500. You couldn't build the house alone for $17,000, if you had the wide, deep lot given you FREE. It's a bargain. The lot will be worth $150 a foot in three to five years or $12,000 for the 80 front feet. See it today, place your furniture, go out in the yard and see the many, many planting schemes you, yourself, can carry out. See the beautiful homes all around you. See how values are climbing.

We also have a plan of a beautiful house we can start within two weeks, on any lot in Maryland Terrace you might choose. The house will cost $11,000, the lot extra; can be completed in five months; will have four bedrooms—two large ones, other two smaller —two baths, wonderful Whitney casement windows, large living room, beautiful dining room; everything just right. We have built twelve homes; you can see just how your rooms will look, the size of windows, rooms, closets, stairways, etc.; no guesswork. You can afford a home in Maryland Terrace, with its wonderful surroundings, its sunken garden, its wide, deep lots, over which are scattered 5000 shade trees; its deep building lines, giving the homes the right prospective and vista; its wonderful soft stucco and brick residences.

See or phone Mr. Davis, living at n. e. corner Westmoreland drive and Williams av., in Maryland Terrace. Cabany 147W. Drive to to Pennsylvania av., then block west on Westmoreland drive.

CHAMBERLAIN PREFERS WAR TO A 'SURRENDER'

Senator Discusses Japanese Proposal—Says U. S. Troops Rode in Cattle Cars.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, chairman of the Military Committee of the last Senate, said in an address here tonight before the Mississippi Society that defeat of the treaty of peace and another war would be preferable to the surrender of any fundamental American right. He dwelt particularly upon the proposal of Viscount Ishii, the Japanese Ambassador, that the constitution of the league of nations forbids racial discrimination.

Charges that American soldiers from Western states were moved from an Atlantic port of debarkation to their homes in cattle cars, were made by Senator Chamberlain in his speech.

"The right of racial discrimination is purely a domestic question," said Senator Chamberlan. "It is not an international question. Now, however, Japan wants to make it an international question. If the clause that Viscount Ishii insists shall be in the constitution of the league of nations is permitted to stand it means that we must let down the bars to the admission of orientals. That would mean the ruin of the west.

Might Have Three Outlaw States.

"But if the allies refuse to allow the plea of Japan and that nation declines to join the league, then we will have three outlawed nations—Germany, Russia and Japan. Then what becomes of your world peace? The three outlawed nations could unite and bring on another world war. I think we should very frankly discuss these questions. We should face the perils and be ready to meet them. I am not among those who believe that discussion should be deferred. The danger is present and should be frankly pointed out.

"I believe in a league of nations, but it must be such a league as will not take a single fundamental American right. Rather than see this done I would defeat the treaty and witness another war. I hope our President, whom we all love, respect and revere, will manage to obtain for the world a league of nations that will prove of such power as to bring war to an end. I have told some of my friends in the Senate that they should not be so strong in their opposition to the proposed constitution as to leave the President without power to conclude a treaty which would provide for a perfectly acceptable league."

Story of Troops in Cattle Cars.

In referring to the return of soldiers, the Senator said:

"I will not tell you where these gallant boys debarked, because I propose to investigate the case further with a view to definitely fixing responsibility. But the story told me only today was that these boys, overjoyed at getting back to American shores, were placed in cars used for carrying livestock. They had not lights except that which could be given by lanterns and nothing to eat except canned goods.

"In this way they traveled four days. Do you think that as they proceeded on their journey they cultivated additional love for the country for which they had fought and suffered?

"Of course, I know the head of a great department can't be in constant touch with the details of his officers, but the man immediately in charge should be held responsible and Americans will demand a reckoning at his hands. The problem of taking care of the soldiers is one of the most severe that we will have to face. But it should be faced with candor, with open honesty and with unflinching courage. Nothing can be gained by concealing the truth."

U. S. EMPLOYMENT SERVICE BUREAU HERE TO CONTINUE

Orders to discontinue the St. Louis bureau of the Federal Employment Service on March 22 have been countermanded, it was learned last night from a dispatch from Washington. Director-General Densmore announced that maintenance of more bureaus than the 56 determined upon when the service was ordered reduced because of the lack of funds will be made possible by co-operation of volunteer workers.

Densmore explained that heads of many of the state organizations had offered to continue at nominal salaries and their clerical staffs had arranged to conduct their work during spare hours. Legislatures in some states are considering appropriations to tide over the period until Congress can supply funds needed to enable the service to resume its activities on the present scale.

Other cities besides St. Louis in which bureaus will be continued after March 22 are: Little Rock, Wichita, Louisville, New Orleans, Kansas City, Omaha, Albuquerque, Oklahoma City, Nashville, Memphis, San Antonio and Houston.

EAST INDIANS IN NATIVE SILKS ATTRACT ATTENTION HERE

A party of East Indians, composed of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. H. Readymoney and Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Widier of Bombay, India, arrived here yesterday on their way to New York from San Francisco, where they landed March 1. The women, attired in silks of native fashion, attracted attention at Hotel Jefferson, where they are stopping.

Readymoney, who is the head of a Bombay importing company, dealing in cotton and general merchandise, said he and the members of his party were making their first visit to the United States. Their purpose in coming to the United States, he declared, was partly in search of recreation and partly to transact business in New York on behalf of his Bombay interests.

H.—For bluing gun barrels by staining dissolve 4½ ozs. hyposulphite of soda in 1 qt. of water, also 1¼ oz. acetate of lead in 1 qt. water. Mix the two solutions and bring to a boil in a porcelain dish or stone pot. Clean the barrel free from grease, oil or varnish, warm the barrel and smear the hot solution, using a piece of sponge tied to a stick. When color develops wash and wipe dry; finish with boiled linseed oil.

HEIB.—Angle iron can be obtained from almost any hardware store, and a blacksmith can cut it into suitable lengths and rivet the ends together, taking care to have measurements exact. For an ordinary sized aquarium double thick window glass will answer for the sides; a piece of heavy plate glass or slate for the bottom which should be set on flange, and the whole aquarium placed on a board. Carpenters frequently make wooden frame aquariums, but unless hardwood is used, and it is thoroughly soaked in oil, they will usually swell and spread, so as to cause the aquarium to leak. We have made several aquariums of galvanized sheet iron for the bottom and frame and if properly bound together they make a very cheap tank. It is always well to put a strip of glass about ½ an inch wide, set angling, in each corner of the aquarium, to strengthen it and make a tight joint; this should be filled in behind with aquaria cement. If the bottom of your aquarium is made of wood it should be of some very hard wood, of at least an inch in thickness. This should be grooved to receive the glass, and when the aquarium is complete cover the bottom with a coating of liquid aquarium cement, and imbed a piece of common roofing slate in it, or a piece of glass, which will help keep the water away from the wood and prevent its swelling.—Aquaria.

THANK YOU.—The sudden flash of light known as lightning is due to electricity in the atmosphere and may be caused by the discharge of atmospheric electricity from one cloud to another or from a cloud to the earth. Its general variations are as follows: Forked-lightning, which appears as long flashes passing from cloud to cloud or between clouds and the ground. It gets its name from the apparently sharp bends it makes, though most photographs show it in a wavy or ribbonlike form. The thunder which accompanies this form of lightning is due to the intense and sudden heat developed in the path of the discharge expanding the air with explosive rapidity. Sheet-lightning, sometimes called summer-lightning, is a frequent accompaniment of warm weather in temperate climates, and an almost daily phenomenon in most tropical regions. It is believed to be due to the discharges of feebler intensity than those causing forked-lightning. It may occasionally be merely the reflection on the cloud of a distant thunderstorm invisible to the spectator. Ball-lightning is, as yet, an unexplained phenomenon; nothing resembling the slow-moving, luminous globe described by those who have seen ball-lightning has ever been produced artificially. The ball has been estimated at from a few inches to over a yard in diameter; and, while not affecting anything that it does not directly touch, acts like an explosive shell on any solid body in its track, throwing down walls, making holes several feet deep in the ground or plowing long trenches; sometimes disappearing with a loud report, at others gradually getting smaller till it vanishes. This destructive form of lightning is happily very rare.

ZONTA.—Cistern should be of good hard brick, with walls not less than eight inches in thickness, laid in Portland cement mortar. The bottom should be laid with two courses of brick well bedded in the cement mortar. If the water is to be used for drinking or for cooking, a filter chamber should be added by building an eight-inch partition wall after the bottom has been paved. This wall should be built a little higher than the outlet of the overflow pipe. The walls of both compartments should be plastered with a good coat of cement mortar, composed of one part good Portland cement and two parts clean, sharp sand, excepting 10 or 12 inches of the bottom of the partition wall (4 or 5 courses of brick, which are laid together without cement) for the water to pass through. The water from the roof is collected in one compartment and is pumped from the other, the filtering material being put in the first compartment. An overflow pipe should be provided on the side of the cistern which the water enters, the opening of the overflow pipe being fitted with a fine strainer to exclude insects or vermin. A cut-off should be placed on the rainwater pipe leading to the cistern to divert the flow to the outside when necessary, as, for instance, for a short time at the beginning of the rains to exclude the dirt collected on the roof and in the gutters. The cistern may be built of concrete, and may be either round or rectangular. The round form is more difficult to build, but it is the stronger.

MRS. E. C. T.—Ralph C. Benedict of Brooklyn, communicates to Science the results of some 4 years of experiments with clothes moths in which he used many hundred pounds of old rags and furs and employed boys to pick the larvae from them. Mr. Benedict found that each female moth lays from 30 to 160 eggs, the average being between 40 and 50, and dies as soon as she has laid them. She carefully places the eggs among the threads of the cloth and fastens them with some glutinous substance. The eggs hatch in 7 days, the larvae emerging as translucent white active caterpillars about a millimeter long. They begin feeding at once and take on whatever color the cloth they eat may have. Some of them weave a case or a tunnel several times their own length, in which they live, feeding out of the end. These cases or tunnels are composed of threads or hairs of the stuff on which they are feeding. When they change their feeding place they either extend their gallery or leave it and build a new one. Others graze around promiscuously. The quieter ones do more damage than the roaming kind, and Mr. Benedict suggests that the former may probably be the females—another instance of the application of Kipling's law that the "female of the species is deadlier than the male." "Moth holes," he writes, "usually appear as round holes or as dumbbell shaped slits. The latter are made by the feeding of a stationary larva, the straight slit part being cut out underneath the case, the enlarged ends being at either opening of the case. The single holes are merely the feeding places at the ends of a case without the connecting slit." In about 10 weeks the larvae encase themselves finally and enter the pupa or chrysalis stage. This lasts at least 2 weeks, after which the moth emerges. The moths are active until cold kills them. "Remedies for the flying moth stage are worse than useless," writes Mr. Benedict. Tobacco smoke and cedar do not repel or injure the moths. But camphor and naphthalene in closed places kill the larvae and the eggs. Kerosene and gasoline fumes are not effective. Mr. Benedict tried to find some substance with which garments could be impregnated to make them death to moths but harmless to human beings, for, he writes, "if baby wants to chew mother's dress or its woolen blanket it must be able to do so with impunity." After four years of experimenting he gave up the search as a bad job.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of William Joseph Piskulic, who departed this life one year ago, March 17, 1918:

In silence you suffered,
With patinence you bore,
Till God called you home
To suffer no more.

Sadly missed by
PARENTS, BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Agatha Hefti, who departed this life March 12, 1916:
Just three years ago
Our dearest to our hearts has gone.
The voice we loved is stilled,
The place made vacant in our hearts
Can never more be filled.
Where the sunshine loves to linger
And the raindrops gently fall,
Sleeping there, so peacefully,
Is mother waiting for us all.
Sadly missed by her CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister, Ethel Sandherr, who departed this life March 16, 1918:

A rose that is sweetest and fairest
In the end is killed by the frost,
And the flower that is dearest and rarest
Is the daughter and sister we lost.

Sadly missed by
HER PARENTS AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear husband and father, Peter Glaus, who departed this life one year ago, March 12, 1918:
In his lonely grave he's sleeping as the shadows onward fall,
And my lonely heart is weeping, no more his presence I can call.
Do not ask us if we miss him, O, there's such a vacant place.
Oft I think I hear his footsteps or I see his smiling face.
Not gone from memory, not gone from love,
But gone to a fatherly home above.
Sadly missed by wife,
MRS. ELIZABETH GLAUS AND FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear wife, devoted mother and beloved sister, daughter and sister-in-law, Anna Corder, who departed this life one year ago, March 14, 1918:
The month of March is here—
To us the saddest of the year,
Because it took from us away
Our dear one, just one year ago today.
God called her home—it was His will—
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For us she tried to do her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER, BROTHER, SISTER, DAUGHTER-IN-LAW AND SISTER-IN-LAW.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dearly beloved daughter and sister, Leona Still, who departed this life two years ago, March 15:

The month of March again is here,
To us the saddest of the year,
Because it took from us away
Our dear darling, two years ago today.
God called her home; it was His will;
But in our hearts she lingers still.

Gone but not forgotten. Sadly missed by PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Peter A. Dagne, who departed this life one year ago, March 14, 1918:
A rose that is sweetest and fairest
In the end is killed by the frost,
And the flower that is dearest and rarest
Is the son and brother we have lost.
Sadly missed by
MRS. ELIZABETH DAGNE, mother; MRS. E. BANGE, BROTHERS AND SISTER.

In Memoriam.

In loving, but sad memory of our beloved brother, Oscar Heitz, who entered into rest at Camp Pike, Ark., March 14, 1918:
You are not forgotten, brother, dear,
Nor ever will you be,
As long as our lives and memory lasts
We will remember thee.
Sadly missed by
SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our darling son, Geo. Kranz, who departed this life March 18, 1917:
A shadow fell upon our lives
When Death, the reaper, came
And took our darling George
Away from earthly care and pain.
But some day our eyes shall see
The face we love so well;
Our hands shall press in his
And never say farewell.
Asleep in Jesus, O, how sweet
To worship at the Shepherd's feet.
Sadly missed by his parents,
MR. AND MRS. GEO. KRANZ.

CORRESPONDENT AND ASSISTANT TO SALES MANAGER.

We want an exceptionally bright young man, 22 to 25 years old, to handle our collections, complaints, sales and general correspondence and act as assistant to sales manager; actual experience as correspondent with a commercial house is essential and order department experience is also desirable. We prefer a correspondent accustomed to using the dictaphone. Applicant must be clean-cut, full of "pep" and anxious to familiarize himself with every detail of his work—of the caliber to develop into a responsible executive. This position holds an assured future to the right man, with a large and continually growing concern. Starting salary is $20 per week, with advancement immediate; same is merited. To obtain an interview, applicant must state fullest possible details of experience, giving names and dates, all of which will be held in strictest confidence. Sell us your services in your letter. Box O-136, Post-Dispatch.

WERE YOU EVER OFFERED A GROCERY STORE? OUR PROPOSITION IS BETTER.

Let us tell you how you can handle flour, canned goods, provisions, an entire line of groceries, as well as paints, roofing, stock foods, automobile and machinery oils and greases; no rent to pay; no investment in stock. Large orders taken from samples. Goods of guaranteed and proven quality. Selling experience not necessary; very profitable work for "workers." Address Hitchcock Hill Co., Dept. 112, Chicago, Ill. Reference, any bank or express company.

SALESMEN

Middle Western manufacturer has just enlarged plant and facilities, and therefore has unusual opportunity to offer several more salesmen on a salary and bonus basis.

If you have ability to handle a general line of staples, sold to the exclusive jobbing trade, and are interested in a general line, which means building up a permanent and profitable business for yourself instead of the uncertainties of the specialty business, our proposition will appeal to you.

Our territories require little traveling; men of family who want to get into a line that will be permanent on account of living conditions, as well as possibilities of permanently satisfactory income, should be especially interested.

Give age and present income and other details by which we may determine whether you are the caliber of man we want; reply cannot be intelligently considered otherwise.

This instrument is a much better bargain, costs a little more money but well worth it.

For only $298, an exceptional player-piano with a good supply of music rolls, a very fine cabinet that could not be told from new, a selection of music rolls that have not been played enough to tell that they are secondhand rolls.

For only $875, a reproducing piano that originally cost $2500. Please do not confuse this with the so-called player-piano, as it is entirely different, reproducing the playing of the great artists.

For only $695, a $3000 Baldwin, beautiful mahogany baby grand piano can be had. A truly wonderful instrument.

For only $72, we have an upright piano, left on sale by a party who for financial troubles has been forced to sell it, he leaving the city, and has just written us to cut it to this price for immediate sale.

For only $133, we have a beautiful upright piano, exceptional value, could hardly be told from new and originally cost $350.

TERMS:

You can pay for almost any of these instruments any way that you like. Nearly anyone we will give two years' time, or even three years, if you need that much. This means payments for only $1 or $2 per week, but on the player-pianos some folks rather pay $8 or $10 a month, some wish to pay $12 or $15, but we will sell you an instrument as you prefer paying for it.

Two autopianos, one $225, the other $285, neither one of them could be told from new. Wonderful condition, and just as good as the day they came out of the factory and just as durable.

World's largest dealers. Stores in all important cities. Many factories. Our great organization is anxious to please you, and you will find, quality taken into consideration, it's the best place to buy any kind of pianos and player-pianos. For over 200 years we have been musical instrument manufacturers. World's oldest and best.

New Method Makes Music Amazingly Easy to Learn

Learn to Play or Sing in Spare Time at Home —Every Step Made Simple as A B C by Print-and-Picture Lessons That You Can't Go Wrong On

TRY IT ON APPROVAL

Entire Cost Only a Few Cents a Lesson—and Nothing Whatever to Pay Unless You are Satisfied

How often have you wished that you knew how to play the violin or piano—or whatever your favorite instrument may be—or that you could take part in singing?

How many an evening's pleasure has been utterly spoiled and ruined by the admission "I can't sing," or "No, I am sorry, but I can't play."

At all social gatherings, some one is sooner or later sure to suggest music. When others gather around for the fun, the one who can take no part feels hopelessly out of it—a wall flower—a mere listener and looker on!

Or those long and lonesome evenings at home, when minutes seem like hours—how quickly the time would pass if you could spend it at the piano or organ—or in making a violin "talk," or in enjoying some other instrument.

And now—at last—this pleasure and satisfaction that you have so often wished for can easily be added to your daily life.

No need to join a class or pin yourself down to certain hours for lessons or practice. No need to pay a dollar or more per lesson to a private teacher. Neither the question of time nor expense is any longer a bar—every one of the obstacles that have been confining your enjoyment to mere listening have now been removed.

My method of teaching music by mail—in your spare time at home, with no strangers around to embarrass you—makes it amazingly easy to learn to sing by note or to play any instrument.

You don't need to know the first thing about music to begin—don't need to know one note from another. My method takes out all the hard part—overcomes all the difficulties—makes your progress easy, rapid and sure.

Whether for an advanced pupil or a beginner, my method is a revolutionary improvement over the old methods used by private teachers. The lessons I send you explain every point and show every step in simple print-and-picture form that you can't go wrong on—every step is made as clear as A B C. My method makes each step so easy to understand and practice that even children only 7 to 10 years old have quickly become accomplished players or singers under my direction by mail. Also thousands of men and women 50 to 70 years old—including many who had never before tried to play any instrument or taken a lesson of any kind—have found my method equally easy. My method is as thorough as it is easy. I teach you the only right way—teach you to play or sing by note. No "trick" music, no "numbers," no makeshifts of any kind. I call my method "new"—simply because it is so radically different from the old and hard-to-understand ways of teaching music. But my method is thoroughly time-tried and proven. Over 225,000 successful pupils—in all parts of the world, and including all ages from boys and girls of 7 to 8 to men and women of 70—are the proof. Read the enthusiastic letters from some of them, which you will find printed at the right—samples of the kind of letters I am receiving in practically every mail. My files contain thousands of such letters. Largely through the recommendations of satisfied pupils, I have built up the largest school of music in the world.

A Few Letters From Among the Thousands I Have Received

"Since I've been taking your lessons I've made over $60 with my violin. Your lessons surely are fine."—Melvin Freeland, Macoupin, N. J.

"When I started with you I knew nothing about the cornet or music, but now I can play almost any piece of music."—Kasson Swan Denmark, Col. Co., Nova Scotia.

"I want to extend the heartiest approval of your Piano Course. It has done more for me than years of other lessons."—Moxie N. Lewis, 319 Jefferson, Neosha, Mo.

"The folks at home are delighted to hear me play the organ so well. You have a wonderful system of teaching music."—M. F. Allard, Caraquet, N. B.

But I don't ask you to judge my methods by what others say or by what I myself say. You can take any course on trial—singing or any instrument you prefer—and judge entirely by your own progress. If for any reason you are not satisfied with the course or with what you learn from it, then it won't cost you a single penny. I guarantee satisfaction. On the other hand, if you are pleased with the course, the total cost amounts to only a few cents a lesson, with your music and everything also included. When learning to play or sing is so easy, why continue to confine your enjoyment of music to mere listening? Why not at least let me send you my free book that tells you all about my methods? I know you will find this book absorbingly interesting, simply because it shows you how easy it is to turn your wish to play or sing into an actual fact. Just now I am making a special short-time offer that cuts the cost per lesson in two—send your name now, before this special offer is withdrawn. No obligation—simply use the coupon or send your name and address in a letter or on a postcard.

H. S. Whittmack, New York, writes: "I compliment you on your wonderful system. Did not know one note from another, but in a short time have mastered the piano and am now composing music."

Louise Cowles, Epworth, Va., writes: "Received my teacher's certificate. I highly recommend your school and wouldn't take anything for the help it has given me."

C. N. Pitts, Macon, Ga., writes: "Have completed your course on violin—now have 15 students."

THE DEATH PENALTY IN THE ARMY -- AS SECRETARY BAKER SEES IT --

Head of War Department discusses practice in reviewing cases of four privates condemned to be shot for violating military duty — What happened in Lincoln's time :: ::

PUBLIC interest has grown considerably in recent weeks in the matter of enforcing the death penalty in the army for grave offenses. The subject aroused some debate in the last days of Congress, but no definite action was taken towards revising the army regulations.

In view of this public interest in the question, the following, written to President Wilson by Secretary of War Baker, and hitherto unpublished in the newspapers, throws much light on the whole matter. His summary of the offenses of four soldiers in France, found guilty by courtmartial and condemned to be shot, provide a particularly gripping illustration of the problem now being discussed. The communication follows:

MY Dear Mr. President:

I present you herewith the courtmartial proceedings in four cases occurring in the American expeditionary forces in France, each of which involves the imposition of the death penalty by shooting to death with musketry.

These cases have attracted widespread public interest, and with the papers are numerous letters and petitions urging clemency, most of which are of that spontaneous kind which are stirred by the natural aversion to the death penalty which human people feel. Many of them are from mothers of soldiers whose general anxiety for the welfare of their sons is increased by apprehension lest exhaustion or thoughtlessness may lead their boys to weaknesses like those involved in these cases which the newspapers have described as trivial and involving no moral guilt, with the consequence that sons whose lives they are willing to forfeit in their country's defense may be ingloriously taken for disciplinary reasons in an excess of severity. Many of the letters are from serious and thoughtful men who argue that these cases do not involve disloyalty or conscious wrongdoing, and that whatever may have been the necessities of military discipline at other times and in other armies, the progress of a humane and intelligent civilization among us has advanced us beyond the helpful exercise of so stern a discipline in our army in the present war.

I examined these cases personally and had reached a conclusion with regard to the advice which I am herein giving before I had seen any of the letters or criticisms.

The record discloses the fact that the Divisional Commander, the Commander in Chief, Gen. Pershing, the Chief of Staff, Gen. March, and the Judge Advocate-General concur in recommending the execution of the penalties imposed. The Judge Advocate-General limits his concurrence to the technical statement that the proceedings in the cases are regular, and expressing regret that a more adequate conduct of the defense of the several men concerned was not provided, concurs in the recommendation of Gen. Pershing. As I find myself reaching an entirely different conclusion, and disagreeing with the entire and authoritative military opinion in the case, I beg leave to set out at some length the reasons which move me in the matter.

The cases must be divided into two classes, and I will deal first with the two young men convicted of sleeping while on duty, namely, Private Jeff Cook and Private D. Sebastian, both of Company G, Sixteenth Infantry.

These cases are substantially identical in their facts. The accusations were laid under the eighty-sixth article of war, which reads: "Any sentinel who is found * * * sleeping upon his post * * * shall, if the offense be committed in time of war, suffer death or such other punishment as a courtmartial may direct."

In both cases a Corporal inspecting along a frontline trench found these young men standing in the proper military position, leaning against the trench, with their rifles lying on the parapet of the trench within easy reach of their hands. Each man had his head resting on his arm, and his arm resting on the parapet. The offenses were committed in the Sebastian case on the night of Nov. 3 and 4, and in the Cook case on or about Nov. 5. In both cases the testimony was exceedingly brief, and showed that the night was dark and cold, that the soldiers had their ponchos and other equipment on, and in one case it was a fair inference that the poncho was drawn over the ears and trench helmet in such a way as to make it difficult for the soldier to hear the approaching Corporal. In each case the Corporal laid his own rifle upon the parapet and took that of the soldier, carrying it away with him, and instructed the other sentinel, the men being posted on this outpost duty in twos, to shake the soldier and tell him to report to the Corporal for his gun. In each case the Corporal shames the soldier for his neglect of duty, and pointed out to him the fact that not only his own life but those of others were at stake, and that he should be more zealous and alert. In neither case does either the Corporal or the fellow sentinel swear positively that the accused was asleep; I confess that on all reasonable grounds, taking the circumstances into consideration, it seems to me entirely likely that both men were asleep; but it is important to note that in neither case had the accused stepped away from his proper military post to sit down or lie down; both being found standing at their post of duty in what is admitted to have been a correct military position, and if they were asleep their heads literally nodded over onto their arms without any intentional relaxation of attention to their duty so far as can be gathered from any of the surrounding circumstances.

These soldiers are both young. Sebastian enlisted in the regular army by volunteering on April 18, 1917, having had no previous military experience, his age at that time being 19 years and 6 months. He was, therefore, slightly more than 20 at the time of the alleged offense. Cook enlisted on May 11, 1917, without previous military experience, his age at that time being 18 years and 11 months. He was, therefore, at the time of the alleged offense, slightly under 20 years of age.

From the testimony, it appears that both of these young men had been posted as sentinels doing what is called double sentry duty, going on duty at 4 p. m. and remaining on duty until 6 a. m., with relief at intervals by other sentinels during the night, but with no opportunity to sleep during the night because of there being no place where they could procure sleep. It further appeared that neither of them had slept during the day before, after having spent the previous night on gas sentinel duty, although both had tried to sleep during the day preceding the night of the alleged offenses, but found it impossible because of the noise. In both cases the commanding officer of the soldiers who forwarded the charges and recommended trials by general courtsmartial added to his indorsement as extenuating circumstances the youth and failure of the soldiers to take the necessary rest when off duty on the first occupation of trenches.

It is difficult to picture to the eye which has not seen it the situation in which these young soldiers were placed. In the month of November the section of France in which these soldiers were stationed was cold, wet and uncomfortable in the extreme. No sort of shelter of any comfortable kind could be provided near the trenches, because it attracts enemy observation and fire. Throughout one long night they performed duty as gas sentinels, during the next day, when they perhaps ought to have sought more rest than they did seek, they found it difficult to secure any sleep because of the noise and discomfort of their surroundings. As a consequence on the night of the alleged offenses they had reached the place at which exhausted nature apparently refused to go further, and, without any intentional relaxation of vigilance on their parts, they dozed in standing positions at their posts of duty.

I am quite aware of the gravity of this offense and of the fact that the safety of others, perhaps the safety of an army and of a cause, may depend upon such disciplinary enforcement of this regulation as will prevent soldiers from sleeping on sentinel duty, and yet I cannot believe that youths of so little military experience, placed for the first time under circumstances so exhausting, can be held to deserve the death penalty, nor can I believe that discipline of the death sentence ought to be imposed in cases which do not involve a bad heart, or so flagrant a disregard of the welfare of others and of the obligation of a soldier as to be evidence of conscious disloyalty.

In both of these cases the reviewing Judge Advocate quotes with approval some observations of Gen. Upton, who in his work on military policy, points out that action taken by President Lincoln in the early days of the Civil War, pardoning or commuting sentences in cases of death penalty led to the need of greater severity at a later period in the interest of discipline; but the cases which Gen. Upton had in mind were cases of desertion in the face of the enemy involving cowardice, and cases of substantially treasonable betrayal of the nation, and I can see no persuasion in them as an example. Rather, it would seem to indicate that the invocation of this opinion of Gen. Upton indicates a feeling on the part of the reviewing Judge Advocate that while these particular cases might not be deemed on their own merits to justify the death sentence, that, nevertheless, as a disciplinary example such action would be justified. I am not, of course, suggesting that any of the military officers who have reviewed these cases would be willing to sacrifice the lives of these soldiers even though innocent; but I do think that if these cases stood alone no one of the reviewing officers would have recommended the execution of these sentences; their recommendations being, in my judgment, soldierly and in accordance with the traditions of their profession, and based upon a very earnest desire on their part to save the safety of their commands, and the lives of other soldiers; but, nevertheless, to some extent influenced by the value to the discipline of the army of the examples which their execution would afford.

I have not sought to examine the learning of this subject, and, therefore, have not prepared a history of the death penalty as a military punishment; but I think it fair to assume that it arose in times and under circumstances quite different from these, when men were impressed into armies to fight for causes in which they had little interest and of which they had little knowledge, and when their conduct was controlled without their consent by those who assumed to have more or less arbitrary power over them. Our army, however, is the army of a democratic nation, fighting for a cause which the people themselves understand and approve, and I had happy and abundant evidence when I was in France that the plain soldiers of our expeditionary forces are aware of the fact that they are really defending principles in which they have as direct an interest as anybody, principles which they understand, approve and are willing to die for.

I venture, therefore, to believe that the President can with perfect safety to military discipline pardon these two young men; and I have prepared and attached hereto an order which, if it meets with your approval, will accomplish that purpose, and at the same time, I believe, upon its publication, further stimulate the already fine spirit of our army in France. Such an order as I have here drawn would be read by every soldier in France and in the United States, and coming from the Commander in Chief would be a challenge to the performance of duty, quite as stimulating as any disciplinary terror proceeding from the execution of these sentences. In the meantime, public opinion in this country would, I believe, with practical unanimity approve such action on your part.

In the cases of Stanley G. Fishback and Olon Ledoyen, the charges are substantially identical in that each of them is accused under the sixty-fourth article of war of having "willfully disobeyed any lawful command of his superior officer." The facts show that on Jan. 3, 1918, these two young men in broad daylight, in the theater of war, at a place back of the actual line, were directed to bring their equipment and fall in for drill. Each refused, whereupon they were warned by the Lieutenant who gave the order not to persist in their refusal on the ground that grave consequences would ensue. They were not warned that the penalty of disobedience was death; but were advised earnestly to comply. Both persisted in their refusal. Each gave as his reason for refusing that he had been drilled extensively the day before, that they had gotten cold, the weather being extremely severe, and that they had not yet recovered from the effects of that exposure.

Both plead guilty at the trial.

It is perfectly obvious that this order ought to have been obeyed. It was a proper military order, and it seems to me inconceivable that such obstinate refusal on so trivial a matter could have been made with any dertaken at once to solve the mystery of this phenomenon did not appear; for Drake checked any such proceedings before it could be begun by hurriedly whispering at his superior's ear:

"Don't seem to attach any importance to that paper; treat it as though it didn't amount to anything."

Therefore, after contemplating it incuriously a moment, Callahan abruptly resumed his interrogation of Chancellor Druse, seeming to dismiss from his mind a detail which he considered of no particular consequence. Pretty soon the bit of paper was forgotten, and when he covertly slipped it into his pocket, nobody except Drake noticed the act.

"Now then, Mr. Druse," the inspector addressed Chancellor, "go ahead with your story; give your own version. Don't omit details just because they may seem to you not to bear on the matter."

Since the conference with his parents in the downstairs smoking room, the young man had been afforded ample time to recover his poise, and it was evident that he had decided upon precisely what he would say, and had mentally rehearsed the manner in which he would say it.

So he plunged into his interrupted recital without hesitation, though the narrative didn't proceed far until it collided against what promised for a time to be an impasse.

"I didn't dine with the family this evening, but arrived at the house from downtown shortly after 8 o'clock. Demar and I went to my sister's apartments to discuss a family matter."

Young Druse had got no further than this when a trifling thing occurred that caught Drake's vigilant attention. Despite the father's firm self-control, the phrase "family matter" drew a swift, keen, questioning look from him; a look denoting that he was ignorant of the conference and its subject matter, and profoundly curious respecting it. So for some moments, while Drake prompted the inspector, Mr. Druse eyed his son with questioning doubt.

Callahan resumed:

"Be a little more definite, Mr. Druse. How did it happen that you and Lord Demar went to your sister's apartments so soon after your arrival?"

"As soon as I got here I sent Lord Demar word that I wanted to see him as soon as possible. He sent the servant back with word for me to come up to his room. I did so; we talked a while; then came here—to Jeanette's boudoir, where the body is."

"Were your sister and his lordship dressed for the night's reception?"

"Naturally," he replied; "they had dressed before dinner. I suppose, though, everyone wanted to do some additional primping before the guests began to arrive. Besides, it was not till after dinner that Jeanette found an opportunity to let her sister see her new gown."

Again the attentive Drake whispered to his superior, and Callahan's next interrogation banished the smile from Chancellor's thin countenance. Repression was shown in the sudden tightening of his lips.

"Hum!" Callahan seemed to muse aloud. "The subject of that conference appears to have been mighty pressing. What was it about?"

"I must refuse to go into that," returned Chancellor, quietly but firmly.

Interest quickened. Callahan's eyes glinted between contracted lids.

Here, at last, was something definite; something from which the police could begin to draw inferences, though it was no more than a candid declaration of reserve. There was something about this death, it suggested, that Druse wanted to hush up.

Well, they would quickly find that they were up against a man who had a way of breaking through the most stubborn barriers of reticence. The inspector was big and burly; his set jaws suggested a bulldog's tenacity.

"See here, Mr. Druse," he harshly warned the young man, "you don't want to get in bad right at the start of this thing. You're smart enough to realize that we're bound to be suspicious of any deliberate concealment on your part. This is a bad business, one where your social position and money can't do much good. Now, you want to get me straight—the only thing for you and your people to do is lay all your cards on the table, face up.

Chancellor met this attack without flinching.

"I'm sorry," said he, "but that doesn't alter my determination."

"All right!" Callahan suddenly stormed, shaking an emphatic finger under the young man's nose. "Don't forget that everybody in this house is going to be questioned until I satisfy myself of one of two things—either that they honestly don't know anything about the case, or, like you, are trying to hide something. I mean to find a motive for this crime; I mean to find out who did it. I'm not going to be too particular as to how I go about it, either, if I'm to have obstacles deliberately put in my way by the very people who ought to be anxious to help me. I want to respect your father's request to leave your sisters alone tonight; but, believe me, if you don't come through, Jeanette Druse is going to be grilled, doctor or no doctor!"

An angry flush mounted to Chancellor's cheeks, while his father's eye gleamed threateningly. But the old gentleman kept himself in hand; he interposed calmly, but with determination:

"You shall do nothing that exceeds your authority, Mr. Officer."

"Don't try to tell me my business," he roared. "Murder has been done. If your son, or your daughter or you, or anybody else flatly refuses to answer questions about it, whoever it is is going to be pinched without beating about the bush. Think it over!" He turned again to Chancellor. "It's up to you, young fellow."

Marshall Druse, outwardly unmoved, addressed his son.

"You had better be open, Chancellor," he advised. "Concealment is more likely to be dangerous than helpful in a situation so grave."

But Chancellor doggedly shook his head.

"The subject of the conversation with Lord Demar is one of the utmost privacy," he said. "I give you my solemn word that it had nothing whatever to do with his death."

Callahan uttered a short, scornful laugh.

"Sure!" he sneered. "I'll bet it hadn't! Your testimony on that score is prejudiced, young fellow. I'll be the judge of whether it had anything or nothing to do with this killing."

When Chancellor still sat silent, Callahan went and stood menacingly over him.

"See here, Mr. Druse," he went on, after a silent pause. "I'll take a minute's trouble to set you straight about this; I'll show you not only where you are hurting yourself, but your sister and anybody else that may be dragged in before we get through. Hasn't it occurred to you that I'll put my own construction upon your silence? And my conclusions may have consequences a whole lot worse than what you're trying to avoid now. Look here," and he began checking off the points on his fingers:

"First, you're in a fidget to see Demar without your family being next; second, the matter involves your sister Jeanette, and you bring her into it; third, your sister and Demar are about to be married; fourth, the talk is ended with Demar's murder"——

A horrified exclamation from Chancellor Druse interrupted this relentless summing up.

"No, no—not that!" he cried.

Callahan shrugged his shoulders and sat down.

"Then what?" he retorted bluntly. "The quicker you realize that you're up against it the better it will be for you. No, no, son. You can't keep anything back that you know of what happened just prior to the killing."

Young Druse was indeed "up against it," and that he found the situation anything but agreeable was manifest to all. He was nervous, restive, gave every sign that he was in an agony of uncertainty, but could not yet bring himself to decisive speech.

After a few moments of silent waiting the inspector moderated his aggressiveness and went on in a milder tone:

"I've got a pretty fair idea of what happened; I haven't been in my business 30-odd years without getting wise to a thing or two. You heard something about Demar that didn't set well with his role of prospective brother-in-law. You threw it up to him. And then, when he denied it, you passed the buck to Miss Jeanette. I'll bet a hat you had a row. Now that the smoke is clearing away you have a dead man on your hands that you're finding it mighty hard to account for."

Before this acute reasoning Chancellor surrendered, but not without every manifestation of reluctance and fear as to the consequence.

"For God's sake," he burst out, "keep this among ourselves! A girl's reputation is at stake!"

"Jeannette's?" shot from Marshall Druse.

"No no! I'll explain," said the son, nervously. "It's true that Demar and I did have words. I learned today that he had done a certain girl a grievous wrong, and I gave him an opportunity to disprove it. He denied the charge in a way that failed to satisfy me. I persuaded him to go with me to my sister's room, not to see her, as I've given the impression, but to confront him while he was all prepared for the encounter, with the girl herself."

Mr. Druse, his face set and stern, hung upon the young man's words. When Chancellor paused the father harshly ordered:

"Go on; don't stop."

"He came with me willingly enough, not suspecting what was in store for him."

"I should think not!" Mr. Druse sardonically interrupted; and Chancellor, with a sudden access of nervousness, made haste to express himself more clearly.

"Oh, I wasn't referring to the wretched outcome of our talk; nobody had a thought of anything so awful. I mean about the girl—he had no idea that he was about to face her. It caught him completely unawares. And, of course, Jeanette couldn't be kept in the dark; she saw and heard. She already knew, anyway"——

Mr. Druse could not longer contain himself.

"Of whom are you speaking?" he impatiently demanded.

Inspector Callahan favored Coroner Curtis with a little aside grimace of triumph; matters were progressing very much to his satisfaction. He added a persuasive word when Chancellor sat tonguetied.

"Who is the girl?"

"Effie Tritt."

NEW SOLUTION OF BAFFLING MURDER MYSTERY

Hau. But the state went ahead with orderly arrangements for the execution.

In Baden and some others of the South German states the penalty of death was at that time imposed in the old feudal manner. The condemned were beheaded with the ax, like many better men in the spacious past. This was to be the fate of Karl Hau. The fact that the man was an American citizen gave this country a particularly grewsome shiver at the idea, for beheading has never been in order here save among the autochthonous red men. Whether Hau would have preferred the langours of the Sing Sing deathhouse and the electric chair is in doubt. But, as things happened, the man and the public were spared this horror. The throne of Baden was vacant at the moment and the incumbent Duke, accepting the coronet during Hau's imprisonment, included the convicted murderer in the customary amnesty. Prof. Hau was thereby committed to prison for life.

The tragedy predicted by Frau Molitor's friends at the time of her daughter's elopement had been direly accomplished, proving that mesalliance will sometimes misally. How fully the forecast of disaster had come true needs to be remarked. The widow was dead of an assassin's ball; the son-in-law was a lifelong prisoner for the crime; the unmarried daughter, Olga, had been sadly besmirched in the trial. And, to crown the catastrophe, Mrs. Lena Hau, the girl whose elopement had been the seed of all this misfortune, had found the burden too heavy and thrown herself into a Swiss lake.

Now, it appears, fresh evidence has been found which may upset the rationale of all this misery. Perchance it will be shown that a brilliant young professor has been branded murderer and spent 12 years in prison in vain, that a woman's name and honor have been needlessly questioned, and another been driven to destruction by errors.

How cynical a stuff is life!

Over One Million American Women Are Now Using La-May Face Powder

There are actually three thousand different brands of face powder now sold in America, some on the market as long as fifty years. A new face powder has become the most popular among all of these other three thousand powders, and it is only a few months old. Yet it is now selling faster than many on the market for fifty years. Why did this new powder become famous so quickly? For two reasons: First, it is guaranteed absolutely pure. It does not contain rice powder, white lead or any injurious substance. Second, it stays on better than any other powder. This improved formula is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). The large size is fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. When you see how wonderfully it beautifies your complexion you will understand why La-may is now used by over a million American women.

A Modern Mystery-Detective Story

CHAPTER I.

THE MAN IN THE CONSERVATORY.

THE immense ballroom of the Druse mansion was a veritable bower of flowers, ferns and boxed palms. Amid the banks and festoons of bloom and green foliage hundreds of tiny electric bulbs were cunningly concealed. The air was langorous with cloying exotic perfumes that wafted in from the conservatory and mingled with the fragrance of cut roses and orchids.

On one hand, under a wide arch, a semicircle of marble steps led down to a fountain, where, symbolical of the sylvan delights to be found in the conservatory beyond, a gleaming white nymph balanced airily upon one toe, with arms and hands tossed wantonly aloft and face ecstatically upturned to the spraying water diamonds that canopied over her. On the other hand lay the spacious entrance hall, where a knot of liveried footmen stood stoically waiting.

Indeed, liveried servants were posted everywhere that a liveried servant might combine the two functions of ministering to the guests presently to arrive and lending impressiveness to sumptuous surroundings.

Mistress of all this pomp and lustre, tall, stately, white-haired, cold, and unapproachably haughty, Mrs. Druse herself, as the moment drew near for the evening's guests to appear, studied the lavish and costly decorations with a critical eye; her final survey was complete. No particular had been overlooked to add to the perfection of the reception and dance to be given tonight in honor of her daughter Jeanette's titled fiance.

Elizabeth was the older daughter; but there were reasons why she might never have a fiance, titled or otherwise.

This was a rare hour for Mrs. Druse, one to be set apart forever as distinguished and memorable. All that unlimited wealth could provide in the way of making the evening a success had been hers to command; and the affair was planned to go down in Society's annals—Society with a capital, please observe!—as one of unrivaled brilliancy and magnificence, a crowning achievement to her long and undisputed reign as leader and arbiter in the world of fashion.

Shortly Jeanette's marriage to Lord Demar was to be celebrated with befitting pomp and ceremony. Assuredly it would have been odd if any unpleasant reflections had obtruded tonight to tincture the complacency and satisfaction with which she contemplated the future.

Into this scene of opulent splendor, what note could strike more discordantly than a woman's sudden, agonized scream?

As if this brief interval of restful tranquility had been deliberately chosen as the one most apt to magnify the nerve-racking shock, such a scream all at once shrilled forth and went shuddering through the great house, chilling the blood and blanching the cheeks of all who heard it. The piercing note of terror cut the stillness like a herald of tragedy and disaster.

A little gasping cry was startled from Mrs. Druse, who froze where she halted, almost in the center of the waxed and polished dancing floor. One hand flew mechanically to her bosom to still the sudden leaping of her heart. Just then her rigid immobility vied with that of the joyous fountain nymph.

Singularly enough, it was in the direction of the statue that her first startled glance darted, and not toward the stairs, whither the footmen in the hall instinctively turned before covertly exchanging looks of curious wonder; for it was from an upper region of the house that the scream had issued.

The scream ended in a smothered hush. A silence followed that was particularly ominous to excited senses strained to detect some signs of disturbance, or any sound that might account for the thrilling cry.

But the silence remained unbroken.

Mrs. Druse's terrified look in the direction of the fountain nymph, before giving her attention to the source of the scream, was not without cause. While yet dazed and motionless with the shock, she was roused by a stirring among the palms and boxed plants of the conservatory. It was less an unwonted sound that caught her attention than a sense of some alien, clandestine presence.

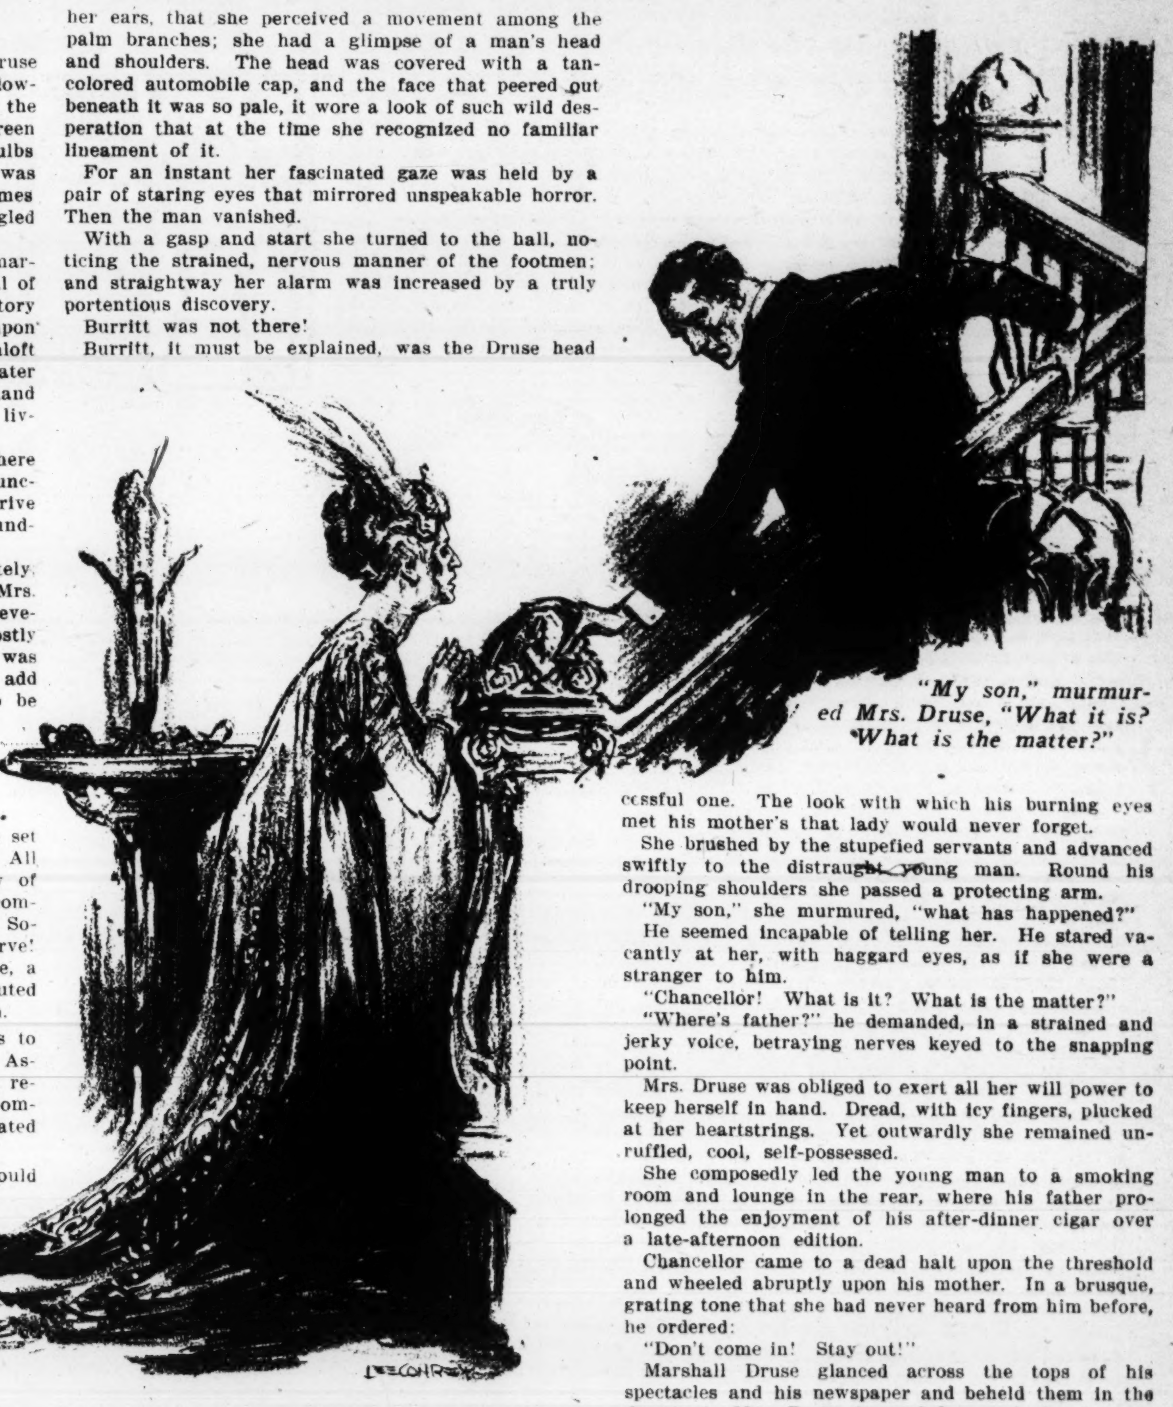
Thus it happened, as her regard flashed past the nymph, even while the frenzied cry still echoed in her ears, that she perceived a movement among the palm branches; she had a glimpse of a man's head and shoulders. The head was covered with a tan-colored automobile cap, and the face that peered out beneath it was so pale, it wore a look of such wild desperation that at the time she recognized no familiar lineament of it.

For an instant her fascinated gaze was held by a pair of staring eyes that mirrored unspeakable horror. Then the man vanished.

With a gasp and start she turned to the hall, noticing the strained, nervous manner of the footmen; and straightway her alarm was increased by a truly portentious discovery.

Burritt was not there!

Burritt, it must be explained, was the Druse head butler and major-domo, as perfect a mechanical contrivance as was ever imported from England to serve in the homes of our own gilded aristocracy.



"My son," murmured Mrs. Druse, "What it is? What is the matter?"

Stranger yet, neither was Jeanette Druse anywhere to be seen. Nor Chancellor Druse, the son of the house. Nor even the guest of honor himself, Lord Frederick Demar. And the guests would begin arriving any minute now!

Here was a state of affairs that augured catastrophe.

But the frightened lady was not left long in suspense. Before she had time to recover her poise and make inquiry about the strange man in the conservatory or the cause of the scream she was subjected to another and yet more violent shock.

All at once she espied Chancellor, her son, reeling down the broad, carved stairway.

Once again, as she watched his unsteady descent of the stairs, she was fascinated by an unwonted occurrence. He clung to the balusters like a man stricken, his naturally pale, ascetic features quivering and twitching with some overmastering emotion of horror. The mere sight of him, who usually was self-possessed and capable in emergencies, now so dazed that he could scarcely keep his feet, rendered the mother speechless and paralyzed with a dread that clutched at the very roots of her being.

At the foot of the stairs the young man made a final effort to pull himself together, but not a very successful one. The look with which his burning eyes met his mother's that lady would never forget.

She brushed by the stupefied servants and advanced swiftly to the distraught young man. Round his drooping shoulders she passed a protecting arm.

"My son," she murmured, "what has happened?"

He seemed incapable of telling her. He stared vacantly at her, with haggard eyes, as if she were a stranger to him.

"Chancellor! What is it? What is the matter?"

"Where's father?" he demanded, in a strained and jerky voice, betraying nerves keyed to the snapping point.

Mrs. Druse was obliged to exert all her will power to keep herself in hand. Dread, with icy fingers, plucked at her heartstrings. Yet outwardly she remained unruffled, cool, self-possessed.

She composedly led the young man to a smoking room and lounge in the rear, where his father prolonged the enjoyment of his after-dinner cigar over a late-afternoon edition.

Chancellor came to a dead halt upon the threshold and wheeled abruptly upon his mother. In a brusque, grating tone that she had never heard from him before, he ordered:

"Don't come in! Stay out!"

Marshall Druse glanced across the tops of his spectacles and his newspaper and beheld them in the doorway. Mrs. Druse ignored her son's harsh command to stay out and urged him into the room, where she turned with a sudden movement and shut the door. The father was quick to detect the tension under which they labored; his keen eyes narrowed, and the paper lowered to his crossed knees. Then he echoed his wife's alarmed question.

Chancellor, trembling with irrepressible excitement, turned to his mother with a final appeal.

"Leave me alone with father!" His voice was shrill. "Won't you? Won't you? Go—go! Get out and close the door!"

This surprising outburst made her stare, but she did not move. Chancellor fell to beating his hands together in an excess of uncurbed impatience.

"Good Lord!" he groaned. "Make her go away, father! I—I—I can't! You've got to break the news to her!"

The lady was touched now; she cowered away from this ominous speech. She contemplated her son with horrified eyes and gasped:

"Has anything happened to Jeanette?"

To which his ill-chosen reply was anything but reassuring.

"Jeanette wasn't hurt," he stammered. "Don't—don't be frightened by—by the blood."

Mrs. Druse's apprehension betrayed itself only by publican and Democratic Senators, but the bill was finally passed. President Harrison signed the measure and the news was sent by wire to Susan B. Anthony, who received it while she was addressing an audience at Madison, Wis. She saw to it that this first great victory at Washington was duly commemorated by the suffragists throughout the country. But the old citizens still tell of the celebration that followed at Cheyenne and other Wyoming towns and villages. It lasted a week or more, and when the national organization proceeds to revive the festive spirit it will have little trouble getting a proper rise out of the Wyoming delegation.

There have been several stories told of the beginning of suffrage in Wyoming, but the outstanding fact remains that it began there 50 years ago, and has been preserved deep in the heart of the Constitution. Everyone in the State is so accustomed to it now that the propriety or impropriety of its being there is never even discussed. Most of the narratives give the bulk of the credit of its inception to Mrs. Esther Morris, and in her book Susan B. Anthony takes the same view.

Mrs. Morris, it appears, was a very womanly woman, and showed it by helping her neighbors any time there was sickness or trouble. Her main accomplishment was in furnishing timely and gentle care when the stork was active in her neighborhood and in some cases far remote from her home town. If she was needed she always turned up at the right time, and there was a tradition that the stork kept her informed of his engagements. One of the stories has it that a member of the Territorial Assembly whose wife had been greatly assisted on one of these occasions, was so grateful that he promised her, out of his feeling of appreciation, that he would support any bill that she thought proper for the women of Wyoming. This was just the kind of a promise Mrs. Morris wanted, as she had been a pioneer in the suffrage movement before she began to act as an orderly for the stork. At any rate, she told the grateful legislator that a woman suffrage bill would amply repay her for the service she had rendered.

Be this as it may, the record shows that the measure was introduced by William H. Bright, and his praises have often been eloquently sounded in suffragette gatherings. It is said that his wife supported him in the matter. It has been related that she was much better educated than her spouse and that she used her knowledge in advancing him in his career. It is also told that on one occasion, after she had helped him in some difficulty, he told her that it was a shame that he was in the Legislature of the Territory, while she had to stay at home. Then she unfolded her plan of giving the women an equal share in the voting and office holding rights, which he followed with the utmost unction.

It is also related that the Democrats and Republicans who passed the measure were sure the Republican executive would withhold his approval, and that a number who treated the whole matter as a joke woke up with some heart-burnings when they learned that Gov. John A. Campbell had signed it. The record also shows that he was at first disposed to balk, fearing that it was "loaded," but his indecision speedily vanished when a delegation of Cheyenne women, headed by Mrs. Amalia Post, wife of the then delegate to Congress, went to his residence and announced their intention of remaining there until he gave the measure his approval. They looked so thoroughly in earnest that the Governor took no chances, and he delayed no longer.

When the politicians who passed the bill, not thinking that it would get by the executive, recovered from their shock, they received another. There was a vacancy in the office of Justice of the Peace at South Pass and the appointment was tendered to and accepted by Mrs. Morris, the originator of the whole movement, making her the first woman Justice in the United States. She made a praiseworthy record in the office and the suffrage question soon ceased to be a joke in Wyoming. In 1871 an attempt was made to repeal the act, but Gov. Campbell, still on the job and knowing something of the ways of the Wyoming women, promptly vetoed it, and the attempt to pass it over his approval failed.

It was in 1899 that Wyoming formally adopted its Constitution and applied for the statehood granted a year later. Written in that Constitution are these words: "The right of citizens of the State of Wyoming to vote and hold office shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex." Wyoming even when threatened with rejection of its prayer for admission to the Union resolutely stuck to its declaration and found vindication in the end. In view of all this, the promoters of the suffrage movement, who have 15 states emblazoned on their banner and hope to get them all in time, feel that they are entitled to some jubilation.

circumstances. (His sanity had previously been attested by the clinic at Freiburg, his own university.)

Hau's master subtlety, however, was his explanation of his disguised presence in Baden-Baden. He said that a wild and uncontrollable passion had sprung up in him for his sister-in-law, Olga Molitor, and that he had been drawn back to her by this impulsion. He did not dare to visit the house of his mother-in-law, from which he had so recently departed with his wife, so he returned incognito, to lay in wait for the young woman. When she indignantly denied the existence of any love between her and her brother-in-law he plausibly explained that the chance to declare himself to her had never been given him, and that this very fact had lured him back and forced the disguise upon him.

The sensation created by such a revelation and its concomitant suspicions can best be imagined. The people of Baden where the snobbish and close-fisted Frau Molitor was far from popular, accepted the statement of the professor with eager belief, and the family linen was washed both in court and in gossip.

Finally, a titled woman neighbor of the Molitors testified that on the evening of the shooting she had left her villa to mail an important letter. As she was standing at the post box, she said, a man wearing a palpable false beard had passed her. Despite the disguise she recognized Dr. Hau. She had wondered about the incident, but was aware of the family's troubles and merely asked herself what was happening. As she walked back to her home, she said, she passed Frau Molitor and her daughter, Olga, going in the direction taken by the disguised Hau. This seemed natural but interesting to her. But, said she, she had also noticed a second bearded man, wearing an iron-gray natural beard, instead of the black disguise of Hau, skulking after the Molitors. It was probably this man, she said, who had shot the widow in the back a few moments later.

The defense then set up a theoretical explanation of the murder. The claim was made that either this second bearded man or Fraulein Olga Molitor had fired the fatal bullet. The widow had been killed by a ball from a revolver held close to her body. Likely enough, said the defense, Fraulein Olga had noticed the man skulking behind her mother and had drawn a revolver to defend herself. In her nervousness she had accidentally fired the fatal shot. The young woman passionately denied this story. Nevertheless, it was a possibility which the friendly public accepted.

But the jury made short work of convicting Hau, and the Court immediately imposed the death penalty.

A riot followed, the reserves had to be called, and the capital city of Baden was in an uproar for a night. Petitions began to pour in, demanding a retrial for

New Hair Growth After BALDNESS

HAIR GROWN ON MR. BRITTAIN'S BALD HEAD BY INDIANS' MYSTERIOUS HAIR GROWER

My head at the top and back was absolutely bald. The scalp was shiny. An expert said that as he thought the hair roots were extinct, and there was no hope of my ever having a new hair growth.

Yet now, at an age over 66, I have a luxuriant growth of soft strong, lustrous hair! No trace of baldness. The pictures shown here are from my photographs.

Indians' Secret of Hair Growth Free

At a time when I had become discouraged at trying various hair lotions, tonics, specialists' treatments, etc., I came across, in my travels, a Cherokee Indian "medicine man" who had an elixir that he asseverated would grow my hair. Although I had but little faith, I gave it a trial. To my amazement a light fuzz soon appeared. It developed, day by day, into a healthy growth, and ere long my hair was as prolific as in my youthful days.

That I was astonished and happy is expressing my state of mind mildly.

Obviously, the hair roots had not been dead, but were dormant in the scalp, awaiting the fertilising potency of the mysterious pomade.

I negotiated for and came into possession of the principle for preparing this mysterious elixir, now called Kotalko, and later had the recipe put into practical form by a chemist.

That my own hair growth was permanent has been amply proved. Many men and women, also children, have reported satisfactory results from Kotalko.

How YOU May Grow YOUR Hair

For women's hair.

My honest belief is that hair roots rarely die even when the hair falls out through dandruff, fever, excessive dryness or other disorders. I have been told by experts that often when hair falls out the roots become imbedded within the scalp, covered by hard skin, so that they remain for a time like bulbs or seeds in a bottle which will grow when fertilized. Shampoos (which contain alkalis) and hair lotions which contain alcohol are enemies to the hair, as they dry it, making it brittle. Kotalko contains those elements of nature which give new vitality to the scalp and hair. To prove the GENUINENESS of Kotalko, I will send the recipe FREE on request. Or I will mail a testing box of Kotalko with the recipe for 10 cents, silver or stamps. Satisfy yourself. You want to stop falling hair, eliminate dandruff or cover that bald spot with healthy hair. Get the testing box, apply once or twice daily—watch in your mirror! Address:

How Determined Women Won the Right to Vote in Wyoming Fifty Years Ago

Big celebration of first victory for "the cause" to be staged in St. Louis at the National Suffrage Convention this month — Territorial Legislature passed bill that the Governor was expected to veto and why he didn't—It then worked its way into the Constitution where it remains—The way of women in convincing an executive Miss Louisa Swain, of Wyoming, first woman voter in the United States. She cast her first ballot in Wyoming 50 years ago.

"THE Winning of Wyoming," the first State in the United States to give women the freest and broadest use of the ballot will be specially featured at the convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which opens in St. Louis one week from tomorrow at the Hotel Statler.

On that occasion Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the president of the national body, and all the other distinguished leaders in the long-drawn-out battle for the rights of women will be here. There will be resolutions adopted for the information of certain of the United States Senators who have not yet shown any evidence of conversion to the doctrine that their wives and daughters are entitled to the same voting privilege as themselves. But the feature of the convention is focused on the Far Western State which showed the way and bore the brunt of the first battle. It will be the fiftieth anniversary of the victory.

Mrs. Esther Morris, of Wyoming, the first woman Justice of the Peace in the United States.

Mrs. Sarah W. Pease, of Wyoming, first woman to serve on an American Grand Jury.

For many years—dating back to the time when some of the present advocates of women's enlarged sphere were wearing pinafores and finding real enjoyment in the caressing of dolls—Wyoming has been celebrating this same event, and having gotten accustomed to it, will be on hand to put real zest into the program. And none of the women from the other states, who have since gotten what Wyoming secured so neatly just a half-hundred years back, will feel a bit "put out" by the glad acclaim extended the Commonwealth that boasts of many other things besides large flocks of sheep and Senator Francis E. Warren.

But Wyoming, which settled the question of woman's place in its public affairs way back in its territorial days, had no easy sailing when it came to taking its place in the Union with the other states. On the contrary, it struck a snag and had very rough sledding, just because it did essay to enter with all of its Constitution. It was not disposed to come in and leave the concession granted the women hitched on the outside. Statehood was what it wanted, but not at the price of proving itself an "Indian giver." It had enacted the provision giving the women of the territory the right to vote and hold office when it was plain Wyoming Territory, and it would not for a second heed the objections of some of the foremost men of the nation who were then holding down seats in the Senate and the House of Representatives at Washington. These exponents of the higher thought in politics and administration saw grave danger in recognizing as a state right what had been given under territorial auspices, and they hurled eloquent objections in the direction of the Wyomingites, male and female, who went on to handle the campaign.

But objections did not keep Wyoming out of the Union; neither did they deal a knock-out blow to the great cause of the late Susan B. Anthony and her sister crusaders in the campaign. Congress was Republican, a Republican was holding down the White House and there was Wyoming, ready and willing to deliver some additional electoral votes that might be needed in a pinch. So, in the last analysis, it was the Democrats only who did the thundering, and as they were in the minority they had to sit calmly by and see Wyoming enter, petticoats and all. Some of the speeches made during that debate back in 1890, and it ran over a period of six days, have been heard many times since in suffrage discussions in other states. Many of the objections were trite and of the time-serving class; but others were added to the ammunition of the antis, and used in succeeding campaigns to suppress or discourage the demands of the women.

In the minority report made to the House of Representatives by William M. Springer of Illinois against admission there were 23 pages of reasons, but 21 of the number were directed against the article dealing with woman's right to vote and hold office. Joseph M. Carey, then the Territorial Delegate, championed the bill and told how Wyoming could not afford, even at the price of statehood, to take away from the women what it had given in good faith. The same Carey was later elected to the United States Senate with the help of the votes of the women whose cause he so eloquently pleaded on that occasion. He had been through the entire transaction back home, and he told Congress what the sentiment was in that far-remote country and that it was to deal fairly with the women.

The principal speech in opposition made in the House was that of Joseph E. Washington of Tennessee, and though he made the women of Wyoming very mad, he did not succeed in changing the result. He said in part:

"My chief objection to the admission of Wyoming is the suffrage article in its Constitution. I am unalterably opposed to female suffrage in any form. It can only result in the end in unsexing and degrading the womanhood of America. It is emphatically a reform against nature. I have no doubt that in Wyoming today women vote in as many different precincts as they can reach on horseback or on foot after changing their frocks and bustles. Tennessee has not yet adopted any of these new-fangled ideas, not that we are lacking in respect for true and exalted womanhood."

William C. Oates of Alabama, then one of the foremost leaders in his State, used even stronger language. He said in part: "I like a woman who is a woman and appreciates the sphere to which God and the Bible have assigned to her. I do not like a man-woman. She may be intelligent and full of learning, but when she assumes the performance of the duties and functions assigned by nature to man, she becomes rough and tough and can no longer be the object of affection."

The Senate battle developed such a fury of opposition that it looked for a while like Wyoming could only save herself by yielding to the demand that she change her Constitution and eliminate the women. It was then that the Wyoming Territorial Legislature, sitting in session in Cheyenne, wired its defiance in this style:

"We will remain out of the Union a hundred years rather than come in without woman suffrage."

This answer was made known after the bill had passed the House and was taken up in the Senate. Senator George Graham Vest of Missouri, then regarded as one of the most eloquent men in either branch of Congress, was violent in his denunciation of the suffrage plan embodied in the organic law of this aspirant to statehood. He said:

"I shall never vote to admit any state into the Union that adopts woman suffrage. I do not propose to discuss the sentimental side of the question. In my judgment woman suffrage is antagonistic to the spirit and to the institutions of the United States. If there were no other reason with me, I would vote against the admission of Wyoming because it has that feature in its Constitution. I will not take the responsibility as a Senator of indorsing in any way, directly or indirectly, woman suffrage. I repeat that in my judgment it would be not only a calamity, but an absolute crime against the institutions of the people of the United States."

In the protracted debate in the Senate John H. Reagan of Texas, regarded as the father of the interstate commerce act, chose to become satirical. Among other things he said: "But what are we going to do, and what are the people of this Territory going to do, by the adoption of this Constitution? They are going to make men of women, and when they do that the correlative must take place that men must become women. So I suppose we are to have women for public officers, women to do military duty, women to work the roads and men to wash the dishes, men to nurse the children, men to stay at home while the ladies go out and make stump speeches in the canvasses. Mr. President, when the Almighty created men and women He made them for different purposes, and 6000 years of experience have recognized the wisdom and justice of the Almighty in this arrangement. It is only latterly that people have got wiser than their Creator and wiser than all the generations which have preceded them."

Concluding his long attack on the bill, Senator Reagan made this forecast in a most solemn manner: "In my judgment the day that the floodgate of female suffrage is opened upon this country, the social organism will have reached the point at which decay and ruin begin."

There were other notable speeches by Re-

There was an instant when he hung in the wind; then he shook his head. "Sorry! Engagement with an unfeeling railroad train."

"My loss!" I purred, and watched him saunter the length of the room. Passing the end table, he gave a barely perceptible jerk of the head. A moment later the two young men who had been sitting there rose and lounged out. One was Allen, star reporter of the Record; Henshaw, the other, was on the staff for the Day.

Now, both the Record and the Day were hostile to the administration. Shawley was going somewhere on a train, and was taking a newspaper escort; he had shipped a fast car and a crook chauffeur ahead of him. I put two and two together, and got five or six, perhaps—enough to worry me, anyway.

I found a telephone booth, and called up the executive mansion. The Governor's wife was at home. Had she any news about anything? Nothing except that she had persuaded the Governor to go about more, meet more people, accept more invitations. Tonight, for instance, he was to dine at the Highland Country Club, near the city of Enderbury.

"You going, too?" I demanded.

Her voice had come cheerily over the wire, and now she laughed. "Didn't I know that the dinner was most rigidly a stag affair?" Then there was a little pause, and after it a query, not quite so cheerful: "Was there still talk about—about?"

"Yes," I said curtly. "Friends not keeping you posted?"

If I had been curt, she was crisp. "There be limits of cruelty even in friendship."

I left the booth, thinking harder than ever. The Highland Club had the sportiest links and sportiest membership in the State; its stag dinners were corkers—or uncorkers. Of course, the Governor could cut out before the fun grew too fast and furious; probably that was his plan.

One of those walking Who's Who's came along, and him I waylaid. Shawley a member of the Highland Club? No, said the authority.

"Quite so," said I, lazily. "Well, less favored mortals can read all about it in the morning papers."

"'Deed you won't! No press seats at that banquet, Carling. They hang up a big paper flower to show its all under the rose. Better that way. Vaudeville after the feed—singing, dancing, joy unconfined. Least said in the papers, soonest mended at the domestic fireside, eh?"

When in a fog of doubt, you grope. There had been mention of vaudeville; Enderbury might call upon a larger center of civilization for talent. I drifted into the office of our most promising theater. I knew the head man—acquaintance, you remember, is what I do business on.

We smoked and talked bromide till he was properly soothed; then I suggested the Old Man might like to see the show. The manager was pleased.

"Don't bring him tonight, though," said he. "We're supplying the artists for that country club jubilee and filling in here with subs."

"Who are sent over," I inquired.

He ran off a list of singers and dancers, then began to laugh. "Te, he! Say, Carling, the Palometta puts it out she's on the club bill too. She ain't in my contract, though. I've got a reputation to save. Bad actor? We use her as a recessional—she drives one crowd out of the house so another crowd can get in—see? That's the Palometta professionally. Personally"——

There he dropped his voice, and no wonder! If he was correct, she'd cloud any company in which she was found—drop of ink in a quart of water idea, you understand.

Here was more food for thought, along with a hint that I'd best be hearing from the scout. It was 6 o'clock before he found me. He had picked up Shawley's trail, had seen him take a train, but could not say that anybody was traveling with him.

Shawley, going by rail to Enderbury—a 50-mile run—would find plenty of cars shuttling between town and club, which was about five miles out. The Governor, undoubtedly, had taken an earlier train. The next express left at 8 o'clock. There was time for dinner and a few preparations, including an invitation to a handy chap to come along. I won't pretend that I had a definite plan; but, if trouble broke loose, I hoped to be not far away.

At 7, having dined, and still having an hour to kill, I bundled the ally into a taxi. "Executive mansion—side door," said I to the driver, and sprang into the cab.

The Governor's wife was glad to see me, and a bit surprised. The Governor was coming home on the midnight train, his car was to meet him at the station.

"Maybe I'll beg him for a lift uptown," said I incautiously.

"What are you going to do?" she asked, very quietly.

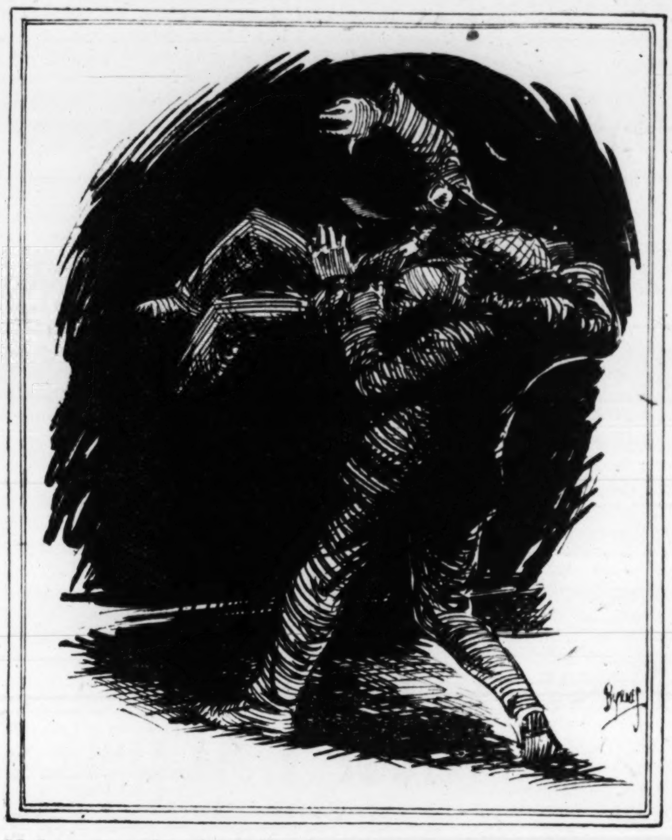
"That depends," said I. "I've set my heart on a little trip Enderbury way and—— Beg pardon, ma'am, but what are you about?"

She calmly swept across the room and pressed a button. "Tell Winters I wish the closed car—at once," was her order to the maid.

The Governor's limousine is up to date. It was no trick at all to cover the 55 miles to the Highland Club in the limit set.

A hundred yards or so from the house there was a black blur among the shadows of the shrubbery beside the drive. I pulled Malone's sleeve, and edged that way. The blur was the big, rebuilt car. Bleekers wasn't idling or gossiping. His lights were out, but he was sitting at his wheel as if waiting for a call.

Malone caught the fellow's collar, dragged him over the foredoor, smashed him between the eyes, dropped on him and frisked him for weapons—in handling a thug one must thug him first. He was packing a gun, a big one. Malone stuffed it in his pocket. Save for a grunt when he was struck, the fellow had been silent. Now he swore at us, but kept his voice low. He was no more anxious to draw a crowd than we were, and by the same token. That, too, was the frame of mind of the lady who opened the door of the car and hopped out. She squealed, but softly—a mere concession to nerves. I put her back in the car, and bade her stay put. Then I bent over the man.



Malone caught the fellow's collar, dragged him over the foredoor, smashed him between the eyes, dropped on him and frisked him for weapons.

"What's the game?" said I. "Show-down—all cards on the table!"

He told me where I could go to find out, but the place is no bureau of information. I bent lower and whispered two words—a man's name. They had a wonderful effect—happened to be his own name, you see—name any court in the State would honor on a fat time draft. He stopped swearing. Trust a professional to distinguish the real thing from bluff. In 50 words he gave me all I wished to learn—all but the name of his principal. There he balked, but I fancied I could find out for myself. As for the frame-up, it was simple, but clever; it fired imagination and emulation.

"Malone," said I, "put Bleekers back on his throne. He's going to run this machine to the gate. If the motor snorts, choke him."

Then I climbed in beside the lady. The interior of the car was reeking with whisky, but she was sober. There was more suggestion of a bottle emptied on the floor, for advertising effect, so to speak.

"Say, Qilly, where do I get off?" She was brazening it out, but was frightened, for all that.

"You're the Palometta, I believe?"

"Oh, then you've heard of me?" said she, and giggled nervously.

"It's not a selfishly rare privilege, I reckon," I told her. "But where do you get off?" Why right here. No more work or worry on this job for you—if you're good, that is. And, being good, tell me, who's the charterer?"

I did not press the point; somehow that idea that I was to learn for myself still held me. "If you'll take a well-wisher's tip," said I, "it is that this affair is breaking so that it ought to be worth a steady income to you—to keep still. There ought to be plenty of money: Go to it!"

"I'm hep!" said she promptly. "Thanky, Solomon! You're reading right out of my dream book. Will I be good? Watch my smoke!"

The machine had drawn alongside the Governor's car. "'Ladies change!" cried I, and helped her to alight. Then I turned to Mrs. Forrest.

"Excuse me, ma'am, but I wish you'd swap cars. You see, kindly hands have arranged a little surprise party for the Governor. Between here and Enderbury there's an auto trap, aching to catch big game. If we can't dodge it, you'll be the most perfect protectress of a gubernatorial reputation we can ask for."

"Twenty-five minutes after 10," said Mrs. Forrest evenly. Almost as she spoke there came the sound of a peculiar whistle. Bleekers gave a little start. So the signal was meant for him, eh?

I switched on the lights, and contriving to turn the big car without capsizing, steered up the drive to the clubhouse. Within, the tide of joy was swelling; a roaring chorus was vieing with the band. A straggling, flushed and hurried committee escorted the Governor across the wide piazza. I opened the door of the car; his wife shrank as far in a corner as she could. Still, I fancied he caught a glimpse of a woman's figure, and he could hardly miss the alcoholic bouquet.

"Hope you don't mind, sir; steward's wife's sister—promised her a lift to town," said I, delivering the message in which Bleekers had been schooled.

I don't know what passed in the tonneau. I was busy, keeping the machine well within the legal speed; for I was uncertain where the trap was set.

An arc light showed a rope stretched across the way and a group of men, some in uniform, some in plain clothes. Yes, there was Allen of the Record and there was Henshaw of the Day, to say nothing of a couple of chaps I set down as from the Enderbury papers.

"You don't want to stop me," said I. "I've got the Governor along. He's making a train."

"Governor—hades! Why don't you call him the President?" He pulled open the door and caught a whiff of the whisky. "That's it—president of a distillery, more like!"

"Gas tank leaking, maybe," I growled; but Forrest, bending forward, intervened. "Why are we detained?" he demanded sharply. "Overspeeding? Sergeant, I assure you our pace has been very moderate."

The newspaper men closed in. Allen caught Forrest's eye, and bowed. The Governor turned to the officer.

"This gentleman can identify me. Like me, he seems to have traveled far from home."

"Sergeant, this is Gov. Forrest." Allen's tone was dogged, his manner betokened no pleasure in his assignment.

"Well, Gov'nor or no Gov'nor, I gotta take the names of the party!"

"Certainly," said the Governor. "My wife is with me."

Then my lady, too, bent forward. I could picture her smile and the dancing light in her eyes. "Good evening, Mr. Henshaw," she exclaimed.

It worked out beautifully. We sent the corn to mill, and the opposition papers had to grind our grist. Then our papers took up the case, and every corner of the State heard of the devotion of the gubernatorial couple. Why, when the Governor filled an engagement out of town, his wife went visiting in the same neighborhood for the pleasure of riding home with him. Those ugly, whispered stories lost point and interest; this new story did not have to be whispered. It could be shouted from the housetops. Truth to tell, the Old Man saw to it that it was megaphoned.

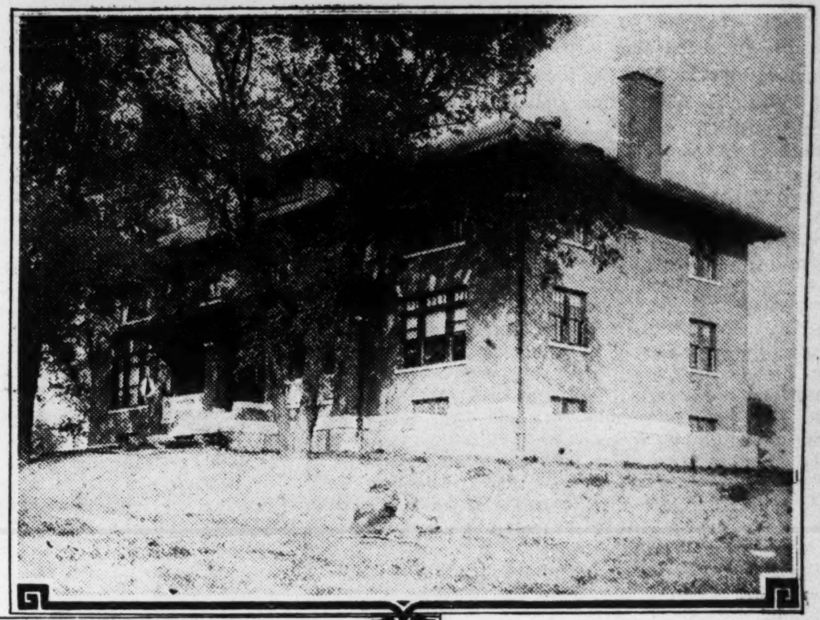
COLORED SNOW IN WISCONSIN

A STUDY has been made by Messrs. A. N. Winchell and E. R. Miller of the University of Wisconsin of a shower of dust which discolored falling snow at Madison and elsewhere. According to somewhat scanty reports, this colored snow covered an area of at least 100,000 square miles and probably much more. The total quantity of dust is estimated to have been at least a million tons, and may have greatly exceeded this, perhaps even amounting to hundreds of millions of tons. A study of the character of the dust and of the attendant meteorological conditions leads to the belief that the dust was blown all the way from arid regions in the far Southwestern United States, and was therefore transported a thousand miles or more.

ST. LOUIS SOLVES PROBLEM OF CARING FOR CITY WAIFS

Instead of herding them in a barracks until old enough to turn loose, then to become delinquents, most of them now live in private homes with foster parents to bring them up—Handsome group of homes replacing the old Industrial Institution :: :: :: ::

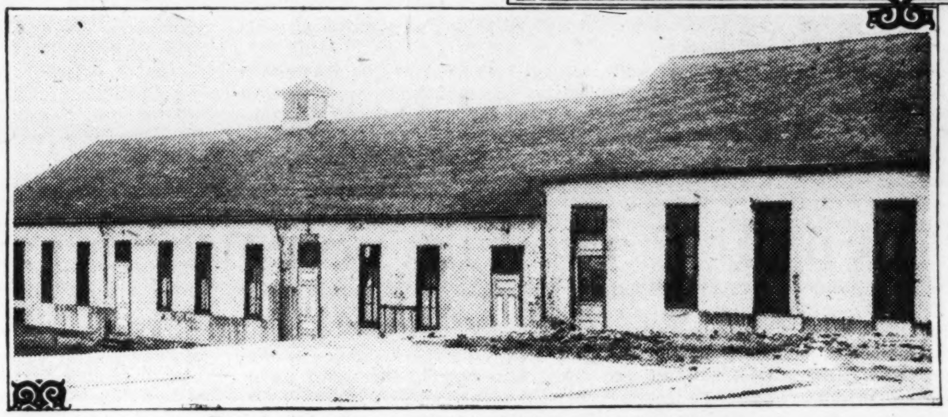


Five buildings like this, and four more soon to be completed, will replace the ugly building shown below.

WHEN the Municipal Board of Children's Guardians was placed in charge of the delinquent neglected and dependent children of St. Louis five years ago, all of the charges were housed in institutions, and two-thirds of them belonged to the delinquent class. Today only one-fourth of the city's young charges are delinquents. The other three-fourths, made up of neglected and dependent children, are now living in private homes and protected from the faults of "institutionalism."

Another outstanding accomplishment of the board has been reduction in the number of "repeaters" at the Industrial School from approximately 50 per cent to about 24 per cent. "Repeaters" are delinquents returned to the school by the Juvenile Court for second or third commitments. With the completion of the Bellefontaine Farms, on the Missouri River, north of St. Louis, the old Industrial School at 4035 Virginia avenue, South St. Louis, will be abandoned. When that is accomplished and the Bellefontaine Farms have been in existence a few more years, the board believes the number of "repeaters" can be lowered to 10 per cent or less. Three-fifths of the 250 delinquents now on hand are at Bellefontaine Farms, the remainder at the old Industrial School.

The Post-Dispatch actively advocated the creation of the Board of Children's Guardians in 1912, and agents of the board last week invited a reporter to inspect the work as it is now conducted, to prove that the new system had "made good" the claims of its advocates. The work of all departments were explained and a trip was made to Bellefontaine Farms.



Boys' dormitory of the Old Industrial Home.

The board came to the conclusion early in its work that the normal way to care for neglected and dependent children was to rear them in private homes. This decision led to the creation of what is known as the Placing Out Department of the board. Going still further, the board resolved to keep dependent children under the care of their own mothers as far as possible, the city contributing to their support. Already the wisdom of this policy has been demonstrated in many instances, both the child and the mother benefiting from the arrangement.

A child may be placed with its own mother if she is a widow or if her husband is confined in the St. Louis Sanitarium or any other public institution in the United States, after the board has determined that the mother has been a resident of St. Louis for two years and is competent, morally, mentally and physically, to rear and train the child properly. If the requirements are met, the child is declared dependent upon the public and is boarded by the city with its mother. The mother's home then becomes one of the city's "institutions."

One of the board's visitors calls on the mother from time to time to advise with her concerning the proper feeding of the children, matters of housekeeping, economic purchases, sanitation and health. The visitor also calls at the school attended by the child to ascertain its progress from the teacher. The mother is encouraged to work in her home, or if the children are in school, she may be employed away from home during school hours. This adds to the family income, and helps preserve a spirit of at least some independence.

As the children grow older and graduate from grammar school, employment is secured for them and a reduction is made in the allowance to the family. Only in exceptional cases does the city have to extend aid to a family for more than three to five years. During this time the mother and children are enabled to live together and strengthen their family ties, instead of perhaps becoming total strangers as they sometimes did under the old institutional plan.

The city is now caring for 95 such families, comprising 253 children and their mothers. During the past five years the board has cared for 149 families. During that period 490 applications were received, 341 of them being rejected.

Up to a few years ago, when a child between the ages of 3 and 14 was adjudged neglected it was committed to the maintenance department of the St. Louis Industrial School. When the child reached the age of 14 it as thrown upon its own resources. The result was, usually, a delinquent child. Under the new system, when a neglected child is placed in the board's care it is at once put in a private home. The board has the power to pay a nominal sum for its care in the foster home. The home in which the child's board is paid by the city is considered only a temporary or receiving home, however. The policy is to eventually place all normal children in free homes, decreasing the city's expenditure. During the past year 145 children were placed in free homes.

During the past year seven children that had been placed in foster homes were legally adopted. Foster homes and the children placed therein remain under the board's close supervision for at least two years before the children may be legally adopted.

Types of children now in the care of foster parents—at left, a former public charge now the pet of a private home; right, a boy who jumped from second to fifth grade in a year and a half after being placed in a private home.

The board at present has 895 children under its care. Two hundred and fifty-three are living with their own mothers, 392 are in foster homes and 250 delinquents are living at Bellefontaine Farms and in the old Industrial School.

The founding or abandoned children of the city are also placed in private homes. Formerly these babies were taken to foundling institutions, and the City of St. Louis paid their board indefinitely. There was an annual appropriation of about $7000 for this purpose. Now the foundlings are costing the city not more than $1000 annually. Last year they cost $941.45. Foundlings' mothers are traced whenever possible.

The Placing Out Department has three healthy, attractive foundlings under its care at present for whom good adoption homes are wanted. Two are girl babies and the other a boy.

All homes in which children are placed are thoroughly investigated by the board. They must have the indorsement of a physician, the pastor of the church which the family attends, and at least two other reputable citizens. There is close supervision of these homes at all times.

The board has had many surprises in the replacement of neglected children, especially those who had been in the maintenance department of the Industrial School for several years. Some of them had become so "institutionalized" that they are still great problems. They have difficulty adjusting themselves to normal homes and schools. One boy, placed in a foster home in December, 1917, was then 12 years old and was in the second grade. By December, 1918, he was in the fourth grade, and he is now doing fifth grade work. A mutual affection had sprung up between him and his foster parents at once, and the effects of home life and paternal love and care were very gratifying.

Physically and mentally abnormal children form another problem the board has to face. In several instances private individuals of wealth and skilled specialists have become interested in such cases through the board's efforts and have helped them to partial or entire self-support.

During the fiscal year 1918-1919 the Placing Out Department has had an appropriation of $70,440, of which $56,000 is for the care of children and $14,440 for salaries and administrative expenses. Therefore, the cost per capita per day is 30 1-2 cents, which the board asserts is less than half the cost in any children's institution.

Improvement in the manner of handling delinquent children has been no less marked under the plan of management used at Bellefontaine Farms, which were established by the Board of Children's Guardians something over three years ago. The institution is run on the cottage plan,

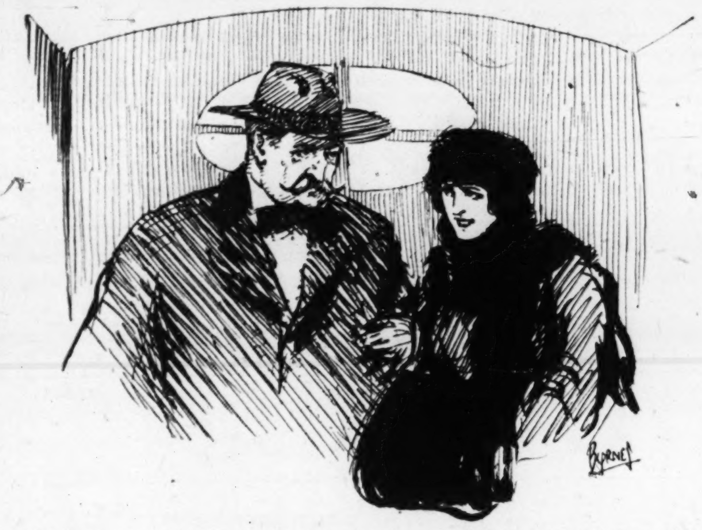
His Excellency's Good Name

By W. T. NICHOLS



"They count us, then, a reform administration? Good! I'm proud of it."

A BIG car rolled up to the curb, and a gloved hand beckoned.

"How are we doing? Tell me frankly," said the Governor's wife, and made room on the seat beside her.

"As you always do—your prettiest," said I, as the car smoothly gathered headway.

"But is it pretty enough—politically, you know?"

I chuckled inwardly. Reform Governors, machine Governors and accidents—it's the same with all of them. The first thought after delivering an inaugural is, "I can do a lot better—next time." And that thought, once in, won't out. And as a Governor thinks, so thinks a Governor's wife. One good term deserves another. Besides, it's a Christian duty to keep ambitious upstarts and self-seekers out of office.

"The question," my lady went on, "really isn't are we making good? It is, do people think we are?"

I threw back my head and laughed. Truly, this charming friend of mine was learning things. She had married Forrest within a year, just before he took office, in fact; but she had gone to the executive mansion with no more notion of the political game than an angel has of a flathouse furnace.

Still, if it hadn't been for politics, she'd never have come to be a friend of mine; outside of that we play in different leagues. I hate to waste time on myself, but I'll explain that my trade is attending to campaign odds and ends nobody else happens to look after. In that way I made her acquaintance. We were coworkers in a little scene that saved Forrest from defeat at the polls—and, incidentally, set wedding bells ringing before the echoes of the election cheering had fairly died away.

I laughed, as I say; and she laid a hand on my arm. "You haven't answered my question, Mr. Carling."

"Well," said I, not too eagerly, "there's only one thing harder than electing a reform Governor, and that's re-electing him. People demand too much of him. 'T isn't as if he traveled on popularity, or regularity, or cut of whiskers; or had a nickname to hold the popular fancy. Why, I knew 'Honest Jerry,' who pulled through on a square-deal reputation, when every scale in his store called 15 ounces a pound."

"What a disgraceful imposition!"

"Oh, I don't know. All the other grocers in his town were on a 14-ounce basis."

Her lips twitched, but she would not suffer me to divert her from her line of inquiry. "They count us, then, a reform administration? Good! I'm proud of it. If much is demanded, much will be given willingly. But—but is there faith in us?"

I shrugged my shoulders. "The Governor's no machine man, but he is a party man. Still, he classes as a reformer, and a lot of good folks expect him to work miracles. At the other end, the sporty crowd look askance at him. He isn't much of a mixer, you know—that hurts with the in-betweens."

"And more than all, I'm hurting him, lessening his popularity!"

I stared at her. She was in earnest. Why, of a sudden she was almost tragic.

"You! You hurt him—his popularity? Nonsense! You're his best asset"——

She stopped me. "Listen, please! There is gossip that rises to the indignity of scandal; gossip that George and I have disagreed, quarreled—even that I left him for a time."

"And somebody dared bring that yarn to you?"

"There is a variety of friendship which halts at nothing—perhaps I should be thankful for the warning it has given me. But, first of all, I seek your advice."

"Forgive me," said I; "but—well, how could such a story start?"

She told me. Forrest had a younger brother, a bounder of a Benjamin of the flock; weak, wild, rattle-brained; who married in folly, if in honor, and was shipped West to make a man of himself. He and his wife squabbled, kissed and made up; went broke, fell sick, sent out the S O S call. The Governor was under oath to stick to his job. So his wife went West, played banker, nurse and referee, brought a semblance of order out of chaos, and devoted three months to the task. Trying for a bride and mistress of an executive mansion? Verily. She deserved sympathy instead of criticism, but how was she to get it? One prefers to keep one's own counsel about family skeletons. The official statement was that Mrs. Forrest had been visiting relatives; and it had been made foundation for amazing fabrication.

It was news to me—a little off my social beat, as it were—but I recognized danger signals.

"Put me down at the next corner, please," said I. "I'd like to talk to the Old Man about this."

People who don't like the Old Man—and some who do—call him a boss. We'll let it pass.

He listened to me, and chewed on his unlighted cigar. Little gossip starts that he doesn't get wind of, but I was giving him light on the spread of the poison.

"Umph! Back to her, is it?" he commented. Wonder if she knows (party unnamed) is quoted as seeing her looking over the ground—in Reno."

I said one of the things nobody should say.

"Amen!" quoth the Old Man. "Next week they'll be describing the whip he beats her with. But she's right; it's hurting the Governor—that's the intention. The thing cuts ice."

Both of us, I fancy, had in mind the same case, one in which a good man was defeated by stories which never were referred to in print or from the stump, but which spread State-wide, from whispering lip to straining ear. The Old Man is broad-minded; a millionaire's or a deacon's vote counts as much as a coal heaver's or a barkeep's; he'd take as much pains to save one as the other.

"Somebody's fathering the business—or motherin it," he went on. "Take it up, Carling. Go see!"

Well, I put myself in circulation. I drifted in the currents of the life of the town with all feelers out. They touched widely scattered spots—it's my stock in trade to know all sorts of people. I gathered a hint here, and a tip there, and a bit over the way. A Y. M. C. A. boy gave me something which fitted into a contribution from a poolroom; a flash of light traveled over an area railing, from a cook to a copper, on its way to me; the swellest club in the city supplied a twin twinkle. It was not evidence to satisfy a law court, much of it was negative; the best of it was hearsay. Yet upon it I based a report to the Old Man.

"I smell high-class work—method. There's a Shawley person—somehow I think he's mixed up in it, though I can't fairly explain to myself why I think so. I can't figure him the brains of the scheme."

"Umph! Shawley?" said the Old Man. "Retired list Johnny—gloves and swagger stick—tame 4-o'clock tea cat. He's out of his class in this game. Man, he'd no more vote than black his own boots! Say, though! If you're hunting for brains and malice, don't overlook Mrs. Harne."

And now just a word about Mrs. Harne. Some years back she had married the richest man in town—married him in a fit of spite, because Kate Starrett had become engaged to George Forrest. Then, having a long memory for the injury to her pride, and being clever, Mrs. Harne contrived to break the Forrest-Starrett engagement. Moreover, she kept on hating the two; and when Forrest ran for Governor she all but turned the little trick that would have wrecked his chance of election, had it not been for the slight cooperation of Miss Starrett and Jim Carling, to which I made reference. As it was, the parted pair were brought together again—and Mrs. Harne was left to grit her teeth until she could use them to better advantage. Maybe she thought the time for that had arrived. She had money; she was as shrewd as a fox, and if she read the dictionary she never got as far as forgiveness." So, of course, she was pages and pages short of "quit."

I began to keep tabs on Mrs. Harne. A friend of a friend of mine was a friend of her maid, and I didn't have to turn in itemized expense accounts. There were other sources of information, too; but, all together, they yielded little. The lady's meetings with Shawley seemed to happen naturally, accidentally, in the run of social things in their set.

As for Shawley, he was a tall chap, well-built, always groomed to the last hair. His teeth were the most striking thing about him, big, white, strong teeth, and a good deal in evidence. First impressions might not rate his intelligence highly, but the more I studied him the less sure of him I was; it takes more than a plain fool to carry out orders.

As for Mrs. Harne's hold on him—well, she was a power and the good things she could throw his way were more than drink and the breath of life to an old buck butterfly that couldn't be happy out of the social sunshine. Besides, I don't doubt she'd put him on her payroll, if need be. Fact is, there were not many things she'd stop at, I fancy, in trying to even accounts with George Forrest and his wife.

Meanwhile the busy bees were buzzing—and stinging. The average man likes to have the rulers he sets over himself clean and kindly in the family relations. The worst of it was that Forrest was of the sort to suffer most from such slanders and be least capable of dealing with them. He was a fine, honest, patriotic fellow; dignified—yes, a bit stiff, reserved; lacking demagogic arts and graces. It is a queer twist of human nature, but it is the truth in such a man the public won't pardon what it will forgive and forgive, and then forget, in some panhandler with a contagious chuckle, or a trick of impassioned piffle, or a tear big enough to show from the body of the house.

We didn't even go to the Governor with our suspicions and theories; it would have been useless. He wouldn't know what to do or how to do it.

"Let him alone," the Old Man advised. "His wife's taking care to be seen with him in public. And you don't want him to lick Shawley, do you? I don't. Fact is, we can elect Forrest again, if we can kill this faked scandal without starting a real one. By the way, though, I've a hunch some flare-up's about due—something for which all this other busines is preparatory—something that'll seem to end the Governor at one smash. Get me?"

When the Old Man talks about a hunch he is not joking, though he may mean anything from an affidavit filed away in his strong box to a ward heeler's brag in a groggery squabble. He winnows wheat from chaff.

"Then it's up to us to keep awake," said I.

"You take the words out of my mouth," said the Old Man dryly.

I went out, nerved up and a mite savage. Mind you, here was a case in which my reputation was at stake, and in which a deal of hard work had yielded nothing but guess and surmise.

A striker slouched across the street and fell into step. It was his job to shadow Shawley. His man had been hiring an automobile. I knew the garage—its reputation was shady—and the car, a big limousine, a rebuilt affair with a racer's engine.

"Bleeker's took the machine out," the striker added.

At that I whistled. The few things the chauffeur known as Bleeker wouldn't do for $5 he would do for $50.

"Word passed the car was going to the lake, but they filled her tank chuck full."

The lake was only 10 miles out. "Shawley got in her?" I asked.

"No; he walked off, swingin' that cane of his and grinnin'. Say, them teeth of his is winners!"

" See how quick you can be admiring them again," said I. "Hustle!"

I dropped into a life-saving station, where the johnny boys, past and present, call of an afternoon. Shawley was not there; but he soon entered.

"Join me!" said I. We were on terms for that sort of thing.

St. Louis Solves Problem of Caring for Waifs

the residents of each cottage being separated from the others as much as possible in their classrooms, farm work and recreation. The first cottages were opened in the fall of 1915. The present five are occupied by 150 boys, and four others will be completed this year. They will furnish accommodations for the 100 boys still quartered at the old Industrial School, and the latter institution will then be closed.

Each of the cottages accommodates 30 boys, who are separated into two groups. Fifteen of them attend classes in the morning while the others are engaged in farm work, and in the afternoon they take up outside work while the other group attends classes. The dormitories of each cottage are likewise divided into two rooms accommodating 15 boys each.

The cottages are marvels of neatness, cleanliness and attractiveness, inside and out. They are handsome colored mat brick buildings of modern residential design, with red-tiled roofs, hardwood floors and handsome woodwork. They are well furnished. The boys do all the household work and most of the cooking—and they have become fine housekeepers, too. The sleeping rooms are large, light and airy, being practically inclosed sleeping porches. The bed linens are kept fresh and spotless and the beds are neatly made each morning by their respective occupants.

There is a school teacher for each cottage and a principal for the group, all of whom are employed by the Board of Education. They stay at their respective cottages constantly, except from Saturday until Monday morning, when they may return to their homes in the city. Their board and lodging is given by the institution in exchange for their assistance as matrons of the cottages. They tell the boys stories in the evenings and otherwise plan for their recreation.

To further create the atmosphere of home, as opposed to the spirit of institutionalism, the dining room has been furnished with round pedestal tables, seating four, instead of one or two long tables for the entire group of 30. Food is served "family style," and each boy may help himself to all he wants of each dish.

Before visiting Bellefontaine Farms the reporter was told he would find the boys cheerful, bright, contented and polite, with nothing of the sullen, forlorn spirit that pervades many correctional institutions. He found this to be entirely true. The boys appeared to be well fed, and those who had been there for as much as a few months had a good color in their cheeks as a result of their outdoor work, nutritious food and the healthful, sanitary conditions of their home. Their teachers say most of them are making good progress in their studies.

The boys are no longer kept under constant guard and quartered behind bars, screened windows and high fences. It is not necessary.

The farms comprise 360 acres, of which about 230 are in cultivation, and were purchased in 1913 by the Board of Children's Guardians for $67,500, out of an appropriation of $150,000 available for the purpose. There are several adult farm employes and instructors, but the boys do the bulk of the farm work, dairying and caring for the livestock. They are also utilized in building silos, barns, etc.

The boys are taught scientific breeding, dairy management and cultivating of crops. They are also taught how to can fruits and vegetables. Bellefontaine Farms entered 76 exhibits of fruits, vegetables, flowers and canned goods at the war garden exhibit held by the Board of Education and the United States Department of Agriculture last September, and won 67 ribbons. The boys were all delighted at the recognition of their skill.

The hogs and dairy cows raised at the institution are of pure-bred strains. Enough hogs are raised to utilize all the garbage from the cottages, and the management has been enabled to sell a few in addition to providing meat for the institution. All the milk, butter, eggs, poultry and vegetables used are produced on the farm. It is hoped to make the institution practically self-supporting in a few years. A large part of the acreage was planted in wheat last fall. Eighteen hundred gallons of canned goods was put up on the farm and at the Industrial School last summer. Eleven thousand dollars' worth of products were sold off the farm last year.

Vocational training is given only to a very limited extent, except for farm vocations, at the Bellefontaine Farms. It is hoped, however, to have the shops at the Industrial School dismantled when that institution is abandoned and removed to the farm. Several useful trades are taught at the Industrial School. The board particularly desires to have the laundry removed to the farm, as it will make possible a considerable saving in the institution's expenses.

The grounds surrounding the cottages are attractive and have been improved by means of the boys' labor. The slope down to the river has been cleared up, and all dead trees cut up for firewood. Terraces have been built in front of some of the cottages, and the earth leveled wherever needed.

The compulsory attendance officers who convened in St. Louis the latter part of the year were invited to inspect Bellefontaine Farms, and at their final business session the superintendent of a similar institution in the East placed a motion before the convention that declared Bellefontaine Farms the nearest approach to the ideal institution for delinquent boys.

The seven members of the Board of Children's Guardians are appointed by the Mayor and serve without compensation. They are: C. G. Rathmann, chairman; George H. Williams, Francis G. Eaton, Irvin V. Barth, Ferd P. Meyer, Philip C. Scanlon and Forrest C. Donnel. The agent in charge of the Placing Out Department is Miss E. C. Puschner, and the Bellefontaine Farms and Industrial School are under the supervision of the board's superintendent, Carl H. Soest.

The Death Penalty in the Army

consciousness that the death penalty was the alternative. Nevertheless, the disobedience was willful, undisciplined and inexcusable, and it ought to be punished with a suitable punishment.

The Judge Advocate-General, in reviewing these cases, limits himself again to the technical correctness of the proceedings; but in a subsequent memorandum he called the attention of the Chief of Staff to the fact that four cases of sleeping on post arising in the same regiment at approximately the same time resulted in acquittal of the accused on substantially the same evidence as that recited in the Sebastian and Cook cases above reviewed, and that in six cases similar offenses committed elsewhere in France had led to very moderate penalties. The Judge Advocate-General says in this memorandum: "In addition to the foregoing the study in this office reveals a number of cases which have come in from France where men have been convicted of willful disobedience of orders under circumstances which do not distinguish them as to the locus of the offense from the cases of Fishback and Ledoyen, who were sentenced to death. The sentences in the cases referred to run from a few months' to several years' confinement."

In other words, the Judge Advocate-General reviewing generally the state of discipline in the army in France, and the steps taken to enforce it, reaches the conclusion that up to the time of the trial of these cases the offenses of which these soldiers were convicted has been regarded as quite minor in their gravity. The Chief of Staff, in commenting upon this memorandum of the Judge Advocate-General, is able from his own recollection to add that the willful disobedience cases lately tried in France did not occur in the actual theater of war, making at least that much distinction. But the case still remains one in which suddenly a new and severe attitude is taken without the record disclosing that any special order had been made notifying soldiers that the requirements of discipline would call upon courtsmartial thereafter to resort to extreme penalties to restore discipline.

Both Ledoyen and Fishback are young. The record shows that Ledoyen enlisted on Feb. 3, 1917, without previous military experience, his age at that time being 18 years and 1 month. Fishback enlisted on Feb. 17, 1917, without previous military experience, his age being 19 years and 2 months. Each of them at the time of the commission of the alleged offenses was, therefore, less than 20 years of age.

The record in the Fishback case shows that there had been previous shortcomings on his part in the matter of obedience. That is to say, he had once failed to report for drill, for which he was required to forfeit 15 days' pay; a second time failed to report for drill, penalty not stated; and a third time failed to report for fatigue duty, for which he was sentenced to one month at hard labor and to forfeit two-thirds of his pay for two months. He seems, therefore, to have found it difficult to accommodate himself to the discipline of the life of a soldier, and his offense hereunder reviewed is aggravated by this previous record.

By a very extraordinary coincidence this record discloses the fact that these two soldiers were members of a company commanded by Capt. D. A. Henckes. It is from the Captain of his company that the soldier most immediately learns discipline and obedience. The Captain sets the example and inculcates the principles upon which the soldier is built. Now, this particular Capt. Henckes, although for many years an officer in the regular army, was himself so undisciplined and disloyal that when he was ordered to France with his command he sought to resign, because he did not want to fight the Germans. Born in this country, and for 20 years an officer in its army, under sworn obligation to defend the United States against all her enemies, domestic and foreign, he still sought to resign; and, when the resignation was not accepted, and he went to France, the Commander in Chief was obliged to return him to this country because of his improper attitude toward the military service and his country's cause in this war. He was thereupon courtmartialed and is now serving a sentence of 25 years in the penitentiary for his lack of loyalty and lack of discipline.

I confess I do not see how any soldiers in his company could have been expected to learn the proper attitude toward the military service from such a commander. I do not suggest that the shortcomings of Capt. Henckes be made an excuse for their disobedience, but these mere youths can hardly be put to death under these circumstances, and, therefore, recommend that the sentence in each case be commuted to one involving penal servitude under circumstances which will enable them, by confinement in the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, to acquire under better conditions a wholesomer attitude toward the duty of a soldier. Orders accompany this letter are drawn for your approval which will carry out the recommendation here made.

In view of the fact that both Fishback and Ledoyen had been previously guilty of minor offenses as disclosed by the record, the penalty suggestion is three years' confinement. Respectfully submitted,

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

A Million-Dollar Stamp Collection

IT took Henry J. Duveen, noted art connoisseur, of New York less than thirty years to assemble a postage stamp collection estimated to be worth $1,000,000.

Now that death has removed in Mr. Duveen one of the world's foremost philatelists, collectors are conjecturing as to what is to be the disposition of his stamps. Will the collection be broken up and sold in lot at auction, as was the famous Worthington collection? Or will it be sold entire to another philatelist? Or will it be kept intact in the Duveen family?

While it is understood on good authority that Mr. Duveen did not bequeath his stamps to a public intitution, no anouncement has been made as to what will be done with them. The possibility they would be left to an institution was suggested in connection with the status today of the noted Ferrari stamps. Count Ferrari upon his death abroad about two years ago bequeathed his stamps to the Postal Museum in Berlin—although it is doubtful if the Government of France, where the collection now is, will ever consent to allow the collection to reach Germany.

An interesting story is told of how Mr. Duveen came to collect stamps. A little later than 1890 Mr. Duveen recognizing the educational value of collecting, although he knew little about stamps himself, decided to try to have his son, Geoffrey E. Duveen, take up the hobby. Young Duveen, who recently returned as an army officer from Russia and France, evinced no interest in stamps. The father, having purchased a packet, himself became fascinated, and bought a second packet, so it is declared. His interest grew and he acquired other adhesives—and presently he became recognized as one of the leading "stamp fiends." It is reported that the late J. Pierpont Morgan at one time tried to purchase the Duveen collection but without success.

The love for his stamps which Mr. Duveen displayed may be judged by the care he took of them. It is told in this connection that he maintained his collection, during the latter years of his life, in a room especially prepared for them, in one of the fashionable hotels in New York City; this room cost him $10 a day, or more than $3500 a year, and he employed a secretary to look after the collection, which ranks among the four or five finest in the world today.

Ancient Dentistry

IN the former villa of Pope Julius III., in Rome, which is now used as an Etruscan museum, there is exhibited an excellent specimen of a gold dental bridge in proper position in a skull taken from an Etruscan tomb in Civita Castellana, a town in Etruria, situated upon the proposed site of Veji. The latter town was utterly destroyed before the time of Christ, so a conservative estimate would put the age of this dental bridge at over 2000 years.

direction. From the unruffled conditions of the immaculate shirt, the carefully pressed outer garments and precisely combed light hair, it was obvious that nc struggle nor violence had preceded the attack. The blow must have been administered from the front; and the inference that he had been taken completely by surprise, before he had had the slightest opportunity to attempt to defend himself, was irresistible.

Except for the blood-stained knife, the immediate vicinity of the body yielded up nothing to which the detectives seemed to attach any particular importance. For the present, the room beyond the open door and the body was in obscurity.

Callahan abruptly demanded:

"Well, who croaked him?" He bent upon Mr. Druse a searching look. "How did it happen?"

"So far as I know," Mr. Druse quietly responded, "not a soul beneath this roof can tell that."

The inspector's face gathered in a scowl.

"Can't, eh?" he said roughly. "Why isn't somebody here that does know about it? Where have they got to? This man hasn't been dead very long."

The master of the house returned, unruffled:

"I suppose you want to conduct your examination in a methodical manner. Allow me, then, to suggest that you first finish looking about; then you may question my son. It was he and Jeanette who seem to have discovered the deed."

Callahan glared at the cool presumption which told him how to go about his business; but he moderated the harshness of his manner. He had encountered Chancellor Druse belowstairs; but of Jeanette he now asked:

"Where is the young lady?"

"Her mother has conducted her to a room in another part of the house. I trust you will not insist on bothering her tonight; she is under a physician's care."

Callahan was used to this sort of delay, so he merely nodded a jerky understanding and muttered: "Mebbe we won't have to bother her at all." After which he turned to the open door with an inquisitiveness which Mr. Druse at once correctly interpreted.

"That is Jeanette's bedroom," he informed the inspector. "If you deem it necessary to go in there let me request that you be as quiet and expeditious as possible. It is close to the room of my other daughter, Elizabeth. She is a bedfast invalid, and her condition has been seriously aggravated by this wretched business."

"I see. We won't be noisy. Andy, you and Drake move the body out of the way; the undertaker can take charge of it now whenever you're ready, Mr. Druse."

The last-named led the way, found the light button, and switched on the lights in the ceiling drop. At once the officers hit upon the same feature.

Perhaps two paces inside the bedroom from the door was a drop or two of blood, which seemed to be the beginning of a plain trail of blood drops that led thence straight across the threshold to the body. Detective Drake kneeled down in order to examine it more closely; but he did not speak at once.

"Huh!" grunted Callahan, eyeing the trail. His intent regard ran along it to the doorsill then back again to its beginning. "Here or hereabouts is where he got stuck." His narrowed eyes once more probed Mr. Druse as he asked:

"How do you account for Lord Demar being in this room at a time when your family were supposed to be getting ready for the ball?"

"I'm not trying to account for it," was the laconic response. "I've heard no explanation of his presence here."

"I reckon your daughter can tell us that, or mebbe your son. His being here wasn't secret, of course."

"It couldn't have been. Chancellor must have been present, besides the two maids, Elizabeth's and Jeanette's. And, come to think of it, Burritt was upstairs at the time."

"Who's Burritt?" asked Callahan.

"My butler."

At this juncture Drake rose from his survey of the blood trail and quietly beckoned Dr. Frye aside. Said he, in a hushed voice.

"This is important, Doc; consider before you answer. Suppose Demar had been running, or only walking fast, how far could he have gone, after being stabbed, before falling?"

The young doctor, with slow deliberation, estimated the room's dimensions.

"Possibly," he said, after a while, "the length of this room."

Drake turned this answer over in his mind before pursuing.

"Then," said he at length, "if he'd been stabbed while on the opposite side of the room, near one or the other of those doors there, he might have made his way to where the body is now, is that right?"

"Yep. He might have got that far under his own power. But a puncture like that, you know, jimmied the works in a jiffy."

During the next few minutes the detectives subjected the two rooms to a thorough inspection, returning at last to the bedroom, and taking care to close the door into the boudoir. It was neither pleasant nor necessary to have what lay there constantly under one's eyes.

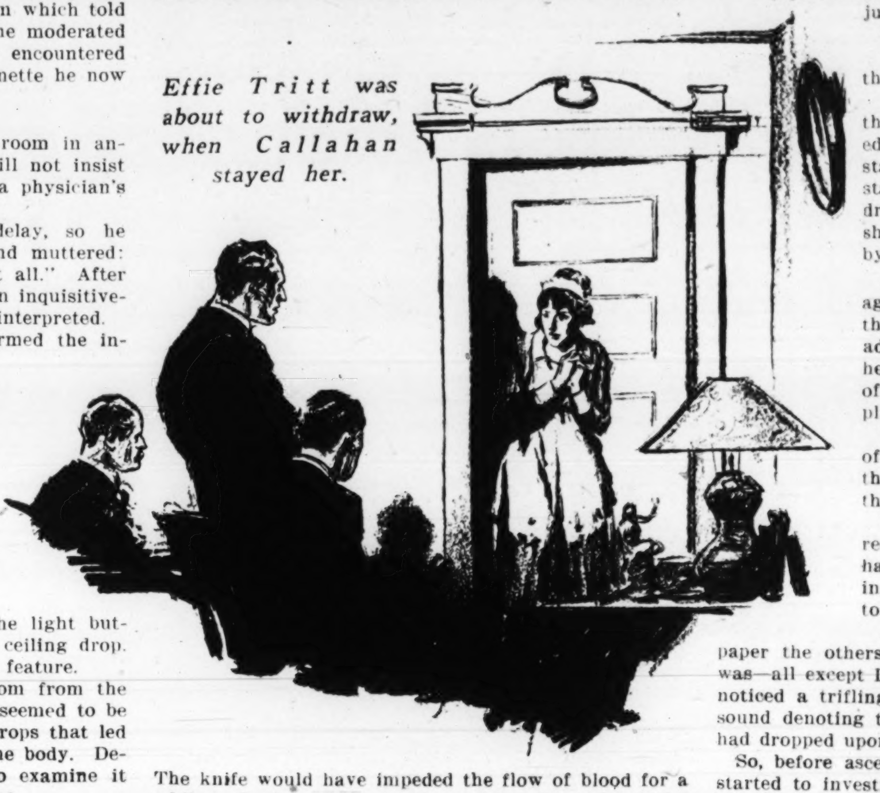
It was Drake who shut the door. As he did so he beckoned Callahan with a motion of his head. The inspector went over to him, and Drake silently indicated several ominous stains and splashes on the panels, beginning at about the height of a man's shoulder and thence slanting in diagonal streaks toward the lower and outer corner of the door.

"What do you make of it?" growled Callahan, after a moment's silent inspection.

"That Demar fell against this door just as it was being opened," the young man explained, in a low tone.

"Here's the way I size up all these obvious details: The knife began to loosen in the wound where the trail of blood begins, and at about the same point Delmar began to pitch headlong forward against the door. It would look as if someone had opened it for him at that instant so he could fall through into the room beyond. If so, that person must have been pretty well splattered with blood himself."

"But here's the point, inspector. We've seen nothing to indicate where the man was when he was stabbed; that circumstance may mean everything. The knife would have impeded the flow of blood for a while. During the second or two after the knife thrust he probably retained some control over his actions; but it swiftely ebbed away and he began to totter and fall."



Effie Tritt was about to withdraw, when Callahan stayed her.

"I see," said Callahan. "But what's the answer?"

"Why, he might not have been in either of these rooms when he was stabbed; he could have been 50 feet away from where the body is now. That's a feature that may determine the person who had the best opportunity to knife him—see?"

"I get you."

Inspector Callahan now directed Mr. Druse to summon his son.

Druse departed. In a minute or so he returned with Chancellor, now composed, but pale and acutely sensible of the situation's gravity. Furthermore, there was a furtiveness in his bearing, a repression, as if he had been steeling himself to face an ordeal. Callahan seemed to sense something of this, for the look with which he surveyed the young man was cold, probing and uncompromising.

"This is my son, Chancellor Druse," the father briefly stated.

The inspector took his time about speaking. At length he gruffly demanded:

"What do you know about this?"

For a few minutes Chancellor met the forceful gaze. There was an elusive, fugitive light behind his rimless noseglasses. But in a little while he lowered his gaze and returned, in a subdued, even tone:

"If you mean to ask whether I know how the dreadful thing happened, I must answer no."

"You discovered the crime, didn't you?" Callahan felt a subtle hostility, and his manner threatened violence.

The young man's mien grew even more guarded; he replied cautiously:

"Three of us seemed to come upon the ghastly scene at practically the same time—myself, Burritt and Effie Tritt."

"Who is Effie Tritt?"

"She is both companion and maid to my sister Elizabeth—but here she is now."

While young Druse was speaking a door on the side of the room opposite the boudoir had opened, and an extremely pretty, fair-haired girl stood framed in the aperture. Like the others of the household, she was profoundly affected by the tragedy, as was evidenced by her colorless, drawn cheeks and the pained, distressed look of her uncommonly beautiful blue eyes, which first directed at young Druse a swift, peculiarly intense glance, then singled out his father.

"Mr. Druse," she said, in a gentle voice that was unmistakably English, "the nurse has come. She says Miss Elizabeth should have the doctor again right away."

"Dr. Lovinger is with Miss Jeanette," Mr. Druse acknowledged her message. "Ring for one of the servants; see that he keeps himself at your disposal for as long as you may need him."

The girl's eyes once more wandered over the group with a, timid, apprehensive glance, but lighting strangely as they again momentarily lingered upon Chancellor Druse. She was about to withdraw when Callahan stayed her.

She fell to trembling violently and stammered as she replied:

"Y-y-yes, s-s-sir. But I can't leave Miss Elizabeth just now."

Callahan waved her away.

"Come back here as soon as you can, then," he curtly directed.

A sudden, surprising change came over the pretty countenance. It was so marked and impressive that the others were startled. The eyes widened into a fixed stare; the jaw dropped; one arm was drawn up in a defensive position, as if she had been unexpectedly menaced by some dreadful peril.

It was not difficult to follow her agonized look; but the object that met the eyes of all seemed so absurdly inadequate to account for the violence of her emotion that even the experienced officers for the moment were nonplussed.

What they saw was a small oblong of very thin white paper fluttering through the air from the direction of the ceiling and toward the floor.

The girl stifled a terrific cry and reeled back into the room whence she had emerged—a bathroom it was—pushing the door shut after her. It went to with a bang.

As Callahan scooped up the bit of paper the others crowded round him to see what it was—all except Drake. Apparently the others had not noticed a trifling sound that caught his attention: a sound denoting that something else besides the paper had dropped upon the floor.

So, before ascertaining the nature of the paper, he started to investigate the tiny object that had struck the floor ahead of the fluttering leaf; but his movement in that direction was arrested by a click from the bathroom doorknob, toward which he bent an attentive ear.

In the bathroom Effie Tritt clung to the doorknob as if it alone saved her from crumpling upon the tiled floor. With the unconsciousness of desperation she beat her mouth with the back of her free hand and moaned:

"Oh, why did you do it—why did you do it! This will be the death of the one who loves you best in all the world!"

There was a peculiar gleam in Drake's eyes when he straightened up. The drooping lids masked it, however, as he went over to one side of the room and picked up a small object that lay close to the baseboard. A moment's scrutiny of it led him to glance upward at the ceiling, in an instinctive effort to discover whence it had come.

He beheld a fresh white scar on the picture molding where a small fragment of the plaster had been recently chipped off. It was the fragment that he had picked up from the floor.

He slipped it into a pocket and joined the group pressed eagerly around his superior. Now, looking across Curtis' shoulder, he could see what it was that had so terrified the girl.

It was only a cigarette paper.

CHAPTER III.

UNCOVERING A MOTIVE.

WHILE it is most unusual that a cigarette paper should float of its own accord down from the ceiling of a lady's bedroom through air that is undisturbed, yet, unless the circumstance may be attributed to a preternatural agency, it is difficult to comprehend why even a timid girl should be frightened out of her wits by the occurrence.

Whether or not Inspector Callahan would have un-

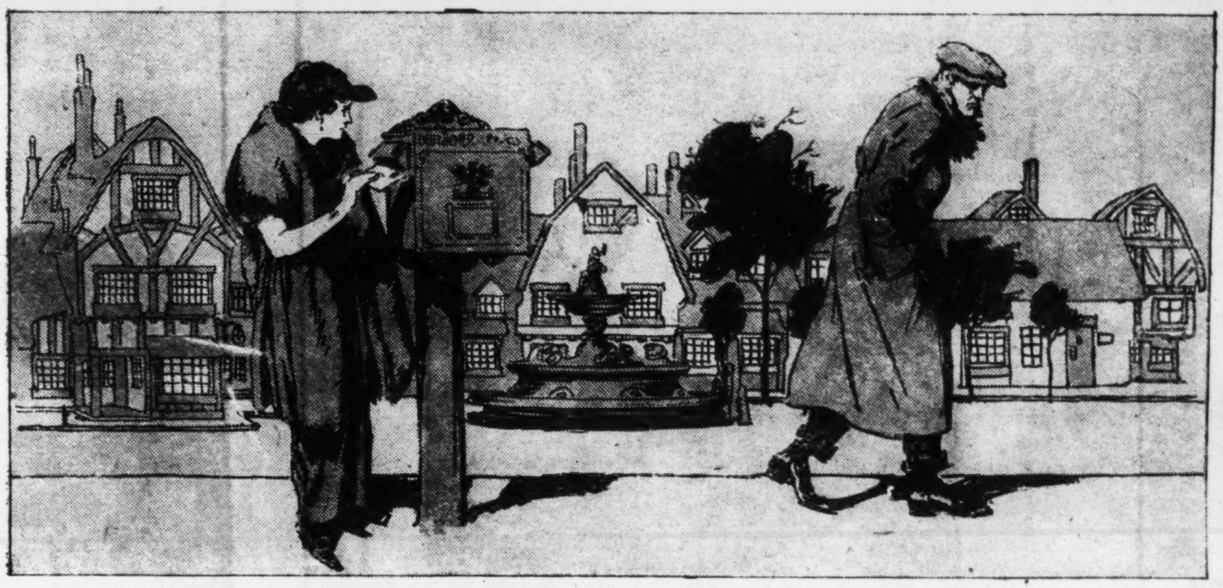
New Solution of Baffling Murder Mystery May Free German-American Professor After 12 Years

Astounding series of tragedies that followed the elopement of Dr. Karl Hau and the wealthy Lena Molitor at Baden-Baden — Impecunious but brilliant student makes good in American universities only to return to Germany and a death sentence, which is commuted to life imprisonment :: :: ::



"A man wearing a palpably false beard had passed her."

BERLIN—New evidence having been discovered, the courts of Baden have ordered the release from prison of Dr. Karl Hau, pending a retrial of his case. Hau was sentenced to death twelve years ago for the murder of his mother-in-law.

NEARLY 20 years ago the summer gemuetlichkeit of Baden-Baden was a little ruffled by an elopement. Lena Molitor, daughter of the late Herr Doktor Medizinartz Molitor; private physician to the Grand Duke and prime pundit of the local chirurgical brotherhood, had fled to Paris with a young and none too circumspect student at the neighboring university of Freiburg. The name of this brash schoolboy was Karl Hau. His parents had been excellent, even distinguished, persons, but they had left their young son neither title nor entail, and the boy had not improved his lack of opportunity. He was, indeed, a lady killer and blade, whereas the girl who had fled with him was both respectable and prospectively wealthy—entirely aside from being the daughter of a medizinarzt and body physician. Worse yet, she was five or six years older than her gallant, who had just touched the febrility of 20.

Such episodes disturb the orderly life of small communities everywhere. The stiff formalism and ludicrous petty rank precedence of a small German town were convulsed. To the thousands of visitors crowding this ancient watering place, sacred to the therapeutic bath since Roman times, the elopement of the late doctor's girl with a recreant student was perhaps only a topic for indolent jest. But to the citizens of the Baden summer capital, more especially the trivial aristocracy, with whom Lena Molitor and her family had a place, the elopement was a scandal portentious of disaster. Frau Molitor, the widowed mother, was prostrated.

In Paris and other parts, where they were celebrating their freedom, the young man and his young woman were quite oblivious of all this hullabaloo until money got to be short, as money will. From Paris they were finally forced to open negotiations with the bride's wealthy mother.

Now for the first time they discovered the true heinousness of natural attraction and instinctive mating. The cowardice and caddishness of the man and the ingratitude of the unnatural daughter were made clear. In the surge of penitent feeling Karl Hau and his bride pacted suicide and set out to commit it. The boy was first to kill his wife, then himself. He wasn't used to such things at the time, fumbled his aim and only superficially wounded the girl. She begged for a second and lethal pellet, but the tint of her blood had undone him. Their emotional volcanics died away and there was no suicide.

Soon afterward there was a surface reconciliation with the iron-souled, outraged mother. The daughter was given a dowry of about $50,000, and the information that she and her husband were not recognizable in the Molitor set.

Karl Hau and his wife set out for America. The young man entered George Washington University in Washington, D. C., as a student, acquitted himself brilliantly, won his M. A. and LL. D., and was offered the chair in Roman law in his school, which he at once occupied. The young man who had been too much of a blade for Freiburg and Baden-Baden had evidently settled down and began to show his high cerebral gifts. Those who knew him at Washington University recognized him as a scholar of genuine attainment. His knowledge of antique and modern law are said to have been remarkable, and it was believed a career of distinction lay before him. And, directly to the point, he was now himself a professor and thus of suitable rank to be the husband of a medizinartzt's daughter.

As so often in this ungrateful world, the dark forebodings of Frau Molitor and her friends appeared to have been absurdly confuted. The despised son-in-law was on the road to success and station.

Then Prof. Karl Hau suddenly resigned his place at George Washington University, bundled up his wife and their young child and sailed for Europe. His wife was sent to the maternal home in Baden-Baden. The professor proceeded to Constantinople, where he intended to bespeak of the Sublime Porte an oil concession at Tshibukli. He spent some time in the Ottoman lands, and later developments proved that time was not his sole spending. But, in the end, the Turks decided not to turn over the prospective oil claim at Tshibukli, and Dr. Hau, out of pocket and discomfited, had to make his way back to Germany.

The Haus visited some time with the Molitors in Baden-Baden before they set out again, ostensibly at least, for America. It developed later that Hau had on this visit vainly besought his mother-in-law for more money. It seems this excellent and forehanded lady not only refused more cash but demanded information as to her daughter's dowry. The professor said it was intact with a Washington trust company. The mother-in-law appears to have doubted. She sent a cabled inquiry to Washington and was informed that Dr. Hau had withdrawn all of the money. Apparently a family schism resulted.

Karl Hau, LL. D., the young German professor whose career in America, England, France and Turkey, lends wide interest to the retrial on the murder charge on which he was convicted twelve years ago.

Thus, late in 1906, the relations between Dr. Hau and his wife's family had returned to as bad a footing as that whereon they stood in 1900, at the time of the elopement. The professor and his wife left the maternal roof, and the wife proceeded to London, where she put up at the Cecil and awaited her husband. Some days afterward, about Nov. 8, 1906, the doctor arrived, not many hours ahead of the news that Frau Molitor had been shot through the heart in Baden-Baden. She had been summoned to the local post-office by telephone to receive in person an important package. Walking along a residential street in the dusk with an unmarried daughter, Olga Molitor, she had been shot from behind by a bearded man, who disappeared in the shadows and escaped.

The next day Dr. Karl Hau was arrested on information from Germany and held in London to await extradition. After some delays he was returned to Baden, incarcerated in the jail at Karlsruhe, the capital of the duchy, and prepared for trial.

Some months later the trial of Dr. Hau developed into one of the most remarkable homicide actions in decades. The progress of the case was watched from America, from England, from France and Turkey, since each of these countries had a connection with the man's history. Hau had, in fact, become an American citizen, a fact of whose protective benefits he declined to avail himself. In Germany the trial was a sensation of genuine magnitude, leading to sharp local division of sentiment and even to riots.

The case of the prosecution was a clear-cut structure of circumstance. The motive was established through Frau Molitor's wealth, her penurious treatment of the son-in-law, his waste of his wife's dower, his extravagant tastes and his loose handling of money. It was shown that the death of the widow was calculated to cause a division of the estate among half a dozen children, thus bringing about $100,000 to Mrs. Lena Hau. Hau's appeals to the widow for funds in the course of his recent visit to Baden-Baden were proven.

It was shown that the large watchdog belonging to Frau Molitor had been poisoned a day or two before the woman's death. Also, a hoax telegram had been sent a few days earlier, apprising the mother of her daughter's perilous illness in Paris. It was the contention of the state that this telegram had been sent by Hau in the hope that the shock of the news would kill his mother-in-law, that lady having long suffered from organic heart trouble. The fact that the daughter was not in Paris and was not ill, reinforced by a vague identification of Hau as the sender of the telegram, seemed to establish some such motive.

But Frau Molitor had not died of heart attack. The state contended that the son-in-law had then realized the need of open murder. It was shown that he had been in Baden-Baden at the time of the murder and had fled from the town immediately afterward, leaving part of his baggage behind. It was also demonstrated that he had bought a false beard and wig of a loacl barber, and another similar set of disguising hair from one in Frankfort. Finally, it was brought out that Hau had bought a gray overcoat like the one worn by the assasin. He admitted that he had bought such a coat and had afterward thrown it overboard in crossing the English Channel.

In the face of this uncontroverted evidence the conviction of the man appeared certain. Yet a large part of Germany had its doubts of the result, and in Karlsruhe the mob appeared to be strongly sympathetic with Dr. Hau.

The man's defense was subtle and Machiavellian. No one but a fellow of fine mental powers and marvelous self-control could have put up so splendid a fight against such insuperable circumstantialities. Hau admitted, in view of the certain proof, that he had been in Baden-Baden and that he had bought and worn the disguise described, but he denied categorically all the circumstances of the shooting. He said his wife had stood to benefit to the extent of only about $17,500 by the death of her mother, whose estate was greatly overvalued. He pointed out that he had won a place for himself in America and that his prospects there were good, intimating that he must have been mad to commit murder under such a stiffening of her entire body. Then a sharp cry was wrung from her:

"What do you make of it?" growled Callahan. "That Demar fell against this door," the young man explained.

"Good Lord! Elizabeth?"

Miserable, ready to break down, Chancellor shook his head.

"No—no—no!" he replied distractedly. "For heaven's sake, give me a chance to pull myself together! I'm so upset—so unnerved"——

Then Marshall Druse peremptorily took command of the situation.

"Look here! Your mother is no child; bad news isn't going to kill her. She'll have to hear it sooner or later, anyhow, so out with it! What's the matter?"

He flung the newspaper from him and jerked off his glasses and laid them upon the table at his elbow. The inherent compelling force of the man in a measure steadied his son.

"It's Demar," the young man said. "He's dead."

"Dead!" echoed father and mother together, their voices ringing with incredulous amazement.

Chancellor could only nod affiramtion.

"An appaling thing has happened." He searched vainly for words to soften a disclosure that could not be mitigated. "Unless he met with a most extraordinary and inexplicable accident, it looks as if he had—as if—as if"——

"Out with it!" snapped his father.

"As if he had been murdered," Chancellor concluded.

Both parents stared at him, too stunned to grasp the full import of this staggering announcement. The young man slumped into the nearest chair, propped his elbows upon his knees and buried his face in his hands.

The glances of the dumbfounded parents met. It was then that Mrs. Druse remembered the man in the conservatory. With a sinking heart, she realized his identity; the significance of his presence there at the time overwhelmed her faculties and threw her into a moment of panic.

She rushed over to Chancellor and roughly shook him by the shoulder.

"Was it Raymond Sears did it?" she excitedly demanded.

He met her look with one of wonder and dismay.

"Sears!" he repeated, with bated breath. "Great heaven! What put that notion into your head?"

Mrs. Druse did not say. Instead, her horrified regard held her son's while certain frightful possibilities forced themselves upon her mind.

With a gesture of irritation, Mr. Druse sprang from his chair.

"Whoever is responsible," he announced firmly, "we must avoid an appearance of secrecy and reticence. It mustn't look as though we were trying to shield anybody."

"What do you intend doing?" his wife asked, in a frightened voice.

"Why, notify the police immediately, of course."

Mrs. Druse shuddered. Her eyes closed, then opened again and glanced furtively around, as if seeking a way of escape from a trap.

"Tonight!" she moaned miserably. "Tonight of all nights! Oh, how awful—how awful! Some of our guests must be here even now! What shall we do—what shall we say!"

Her husband's grim mien abruptly softened; he addressed her in a gentle tone of encouragement:

"Don't let that worry you, mother. They must be met at the door with some sort of explanation. They'll go away without any fuss; they're not the sort that will try to question the servants."

But the tragic overthrow of the evening's entertainment was too intolerable for words, too hideous to contemplate. It presented phases which, now that they crowded upon her, fairly sickened her; she was so shocked as to be almost stunned. The lurid sensationalism—the vulgar publicity, insufferable to her sensitive nature—the swift disaster that had sent her house of cards crashing about her ears—the abrupt defeat of her cherished ambitions—she could only wring her hands in an excess of grief and wretchedness.

Chancellor now interposed more collectedly:

"Mother, you ought to go to Johnny; she's in her room. She mustn't stay there—it's too ghastly!"

Mrs. Druse regarded him dumbly, too distressed and shaken to find her voice. She sat trembling until an interruption mercifully relieved the stress. Somebody rapped at the door.

"Come in," Marshall Druse grimly uttered. Whereupon the door opened sufficiently to reveal the wooden visage of one of the footmen.

"Mrs. Druse," he blurted, "Col. and Mrs. Seagraves are here, Mrs. and Miss Bollinger and Dr. Lovinger. Burritt has not come downstairs"——

But at that very instant Burritt's voice could be heard in the hall; his smooth urbanity appeared undisturbed.

Mr. Druse stayed the footman.

"Detain Dr. Lovinger—privately," he curtly directed. "Fetch him in here."

The door closed upon the bowing servant.

White-faced and haggard, but by a miracle of self-control holding together some shreds and patches of his habitual dignity and impressiveness, all that evening Burritt clung to his post in the front hall and with rare tact and wisdom turned away the guests as they came.

And not one of them learned what really had happened, but each acquired the idea that a calamity had befallen the house of Druse, and carried away a conviction that Burritt had not been the one least to feel the blow.

CHAPTER II.

A CIGARETTE PAPER.

THE Druse home was in charge of the police. Where an hour ago it had been a scene of brilliancy, now, save here and there where a solitary, subdued lamp glowed, it was shrouded in darkness. Voices manifested a tendency to drop to whispers. When there was occasion for going from one place to another, it was done with a muffled footfall.

In the second story, however, there were several adjoining rooms that were more brightly lighted up than the rest of the house.

Two of these comprised the domain of the eldest of the Druse children, Elizabeth, touching whom very little was known by the world of fashion that was wont to gather in the showier spaces of the great house.

Inquire of any one of these favored individuals, and more than likely he would have to devote some seconds to an effort at recalling just what he had heard about Elizabeth Druse. In the end he might inform you that the later 11 of her 28 years had been spent upon her back in bed; that she was the victim of a spinal malady which made her, from the waist down, a helpless paralytic. Nobody outside the family could—or would—tell you more than this. As for the family themselves, they were never known to discuss her at all.

The remainder of these second-story rooms were sacred to the youngest and flower of the family, Jeanette.

Chancellor Druse, who was 26 and next to Elizabeth in point of years, did not live at home; he maintained apartments down in the city, where he could be in close touch with his affairs. Inheriting much of his father's executive ability, if not strength of character, he devoted his time, money and talents to the saving of unfortunate women. As head of the Magdalene Rescue League, his work in his respect is well enough known.

A number of police officers were upon the premises, both uniformed and in plain clothes, some of whom patrolled the extensive grounds and guarded the entrances and exits, while two or three remained in the second-story hall near the scene of the crime.

In Jeanette Druse's boudoir an inspector in uniform and two plain-clothes men were putting their heads together in an effort to find a starting point from which to solve the enigma presented by Lord Demar's death; for here it was that the lifeless body lay.

The spot presented a grewsome enough sight, too. An edge of the heavy velvet rug was literally soaked with blood, and on the adjoining border of parquetry blood stood in a widespread, dark pool. A stab wound in the victim's throat accounted for this. It required no expert eye to determine that the jugular vein had been severed and the body entirely drained of its life fluid.

Of the family, Marshall Druse was the sole member present at the preliminary proceedings, until they had progressed to a point where the presence of Chancellor was demanded. The father stood at one side, for the most part motionless, following every word and act with the closest attention.

It was characteristic of him that he had not attempted to shirk the ordeal of this dreadful situation but had met it squarely. As soon as he had satisfied himself that a desperate crime actually had been committed in his home, he accomplished his declared determination of immediately apprising the police of what happened.

Inspector Callahan and his two subordinates, Detective Fergus Drake and Andy Moorehouse, had just begun their examination of the body and its surroundings when the Coroner, James Curtis, and Dr. Frye, his young physician, were shown in by Burritt. The butler at once withdrew, deliberately keeping his head and eyes averted from the shocking sight inside the room. Only one of the group assembled there appeared to notice this—Drake, the younger of the two detectives, who continued to gaze speculatively at the door for fully a minute after it had closed upon Burritt.

Callahan nodded perfunctorily when the newcomers entered.

"Glad you've come," he gruffly greeted Curtis, then lowered his voice to add: "A messy business, this. Better stick around till we're through."

Curtis silently assented. His physician was stooping over the body, to which Dr. Frank Lovinger had accorded the only professional attention that a doctor could give—the verdict that life was extinct.

The Coroner's and the inspector's glances met across the young doctor's back. Curtis raised his brows interrogatively, to which Callahan responded by screwing his heavy features into an expression intended to counsel caution, and giving his head a short negative shake.

Curtis drew a long breath, and his look rested speculatively upon the impassive figure of Marshall Druse, whose calm alertness denoted unknown reserves of strength and virility. A thought flitted through the Coroner's mind of the strangeness of a man of his prominence in the financial world being entangled in a deed so sensational. He had a feeling of sympathy for the many-times millionaire.

But, in a decisive manner, Curtis stooped opposite his physician and intently examined the wound in the dead man's throat, then instinctively glanced round as if for the weapon that had caused it.

Inspector Callahan, with the toe of one shoe silently pointed to an object upon the floor, close by where he was standing and perhaps four feet from the body.

Curtis was thus attracted to an old stag-handled pocketknife, the largest blade of which, perhaps three inches in length, was open. Despite the bloodstains that nearly covered it, it was plain to be seen that the knife had been for a long time subjected to the roughest kind of usage. The edge was dull and serrated. Clinging to the nicks were several blood-soaked strands of threads of some sort of cloth fiber.

Curtis bluntly addressed the doctor:

"Suicide?"

"Not a chance!" was the emphatic reply. "Somebody stuck the knife into him up to the handle and left it there. It came out only when he fell."

Drake looked keenly at the knife, without touching it, then asked Dr. Frye a question:

"Wouldn't it have been held pretty tightly by the wound?"

"Under the circumstances, I should say it would; yes."

"Death wouldn't have been instantaneous?"

"No-o-o," the doctor answered, hesitatingly; "but death followed that jab so suddenly that the victim didn't more than have time to pick out a place to fall."

The body, garbed in faultless evening dress, which testified that Lord Demar was in readiness for the evening's reception when the fatal blow was struck, lay across an open door and perhaps two feet distant from it. The sill had stayed the flow of blood in that

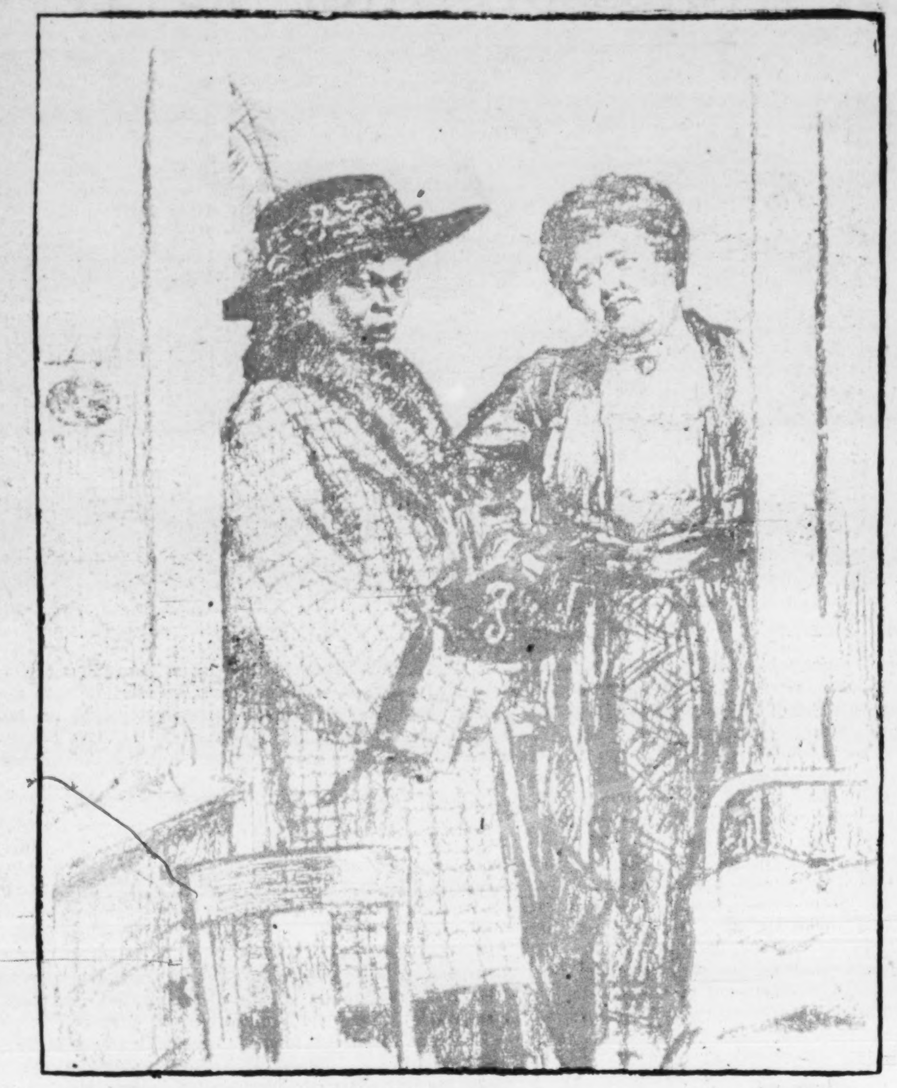
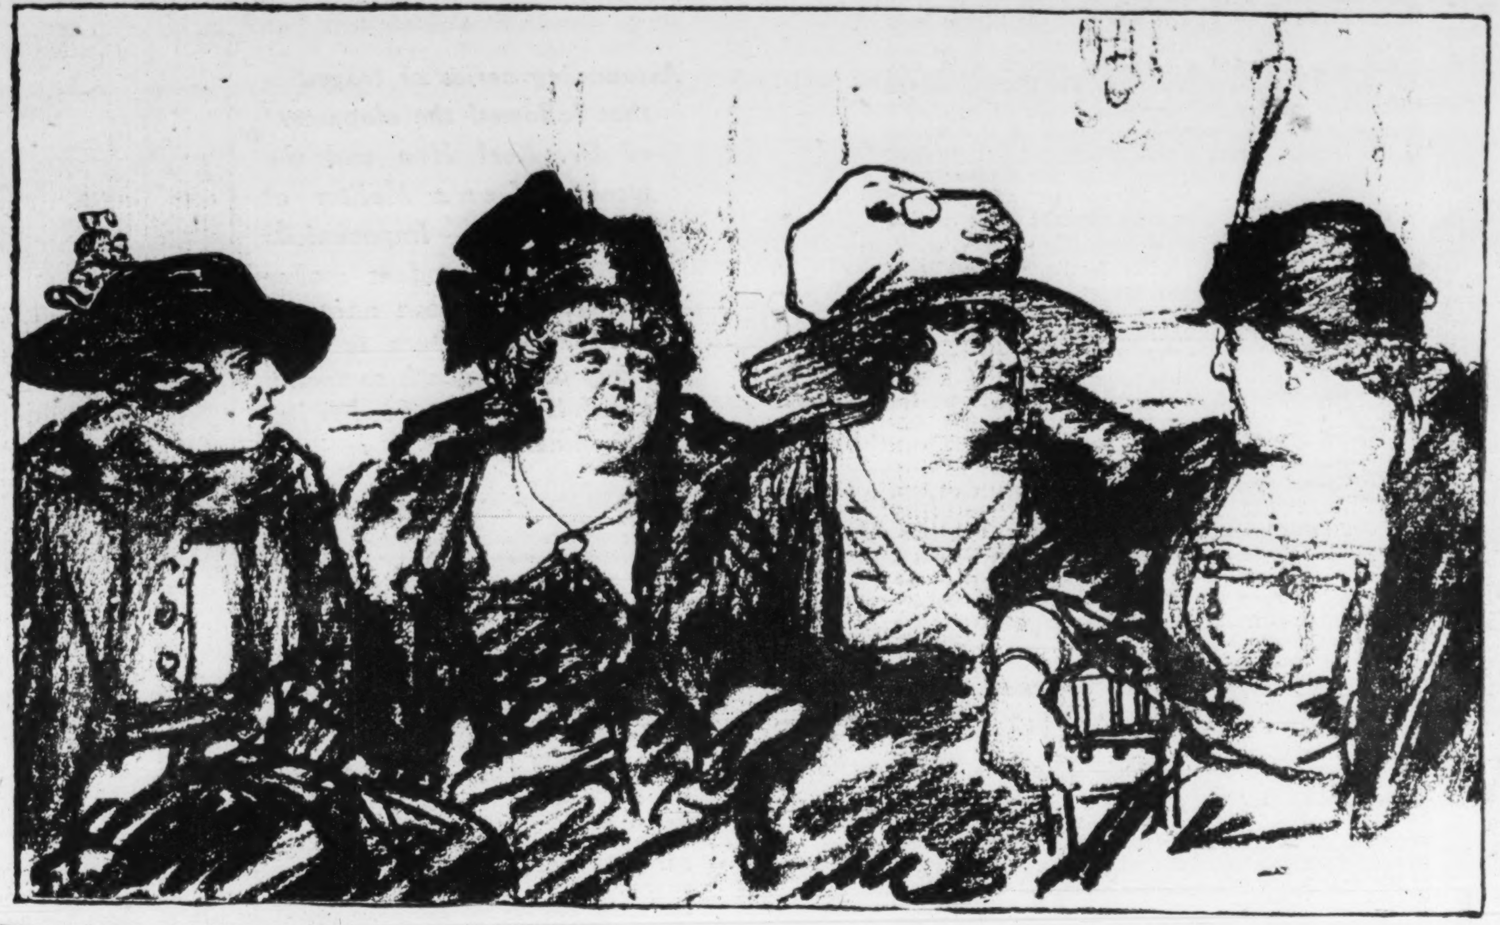
THE HOUSEHOLD HELP PROBLEM

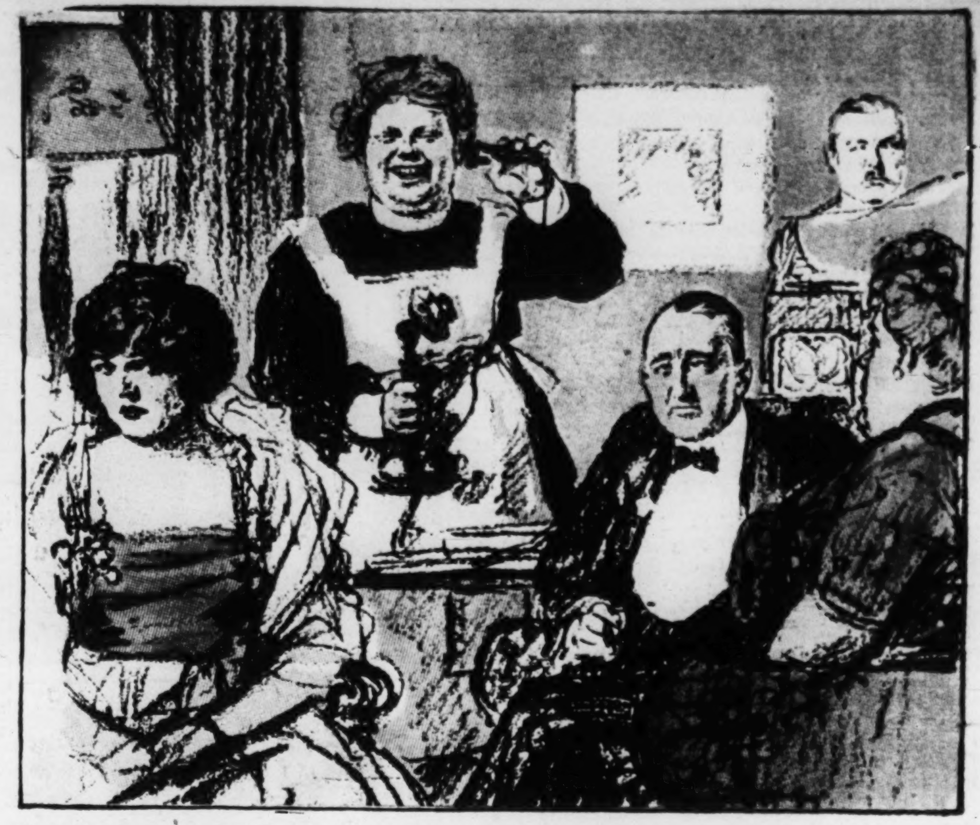
Character Sketchs by W. E. HILL



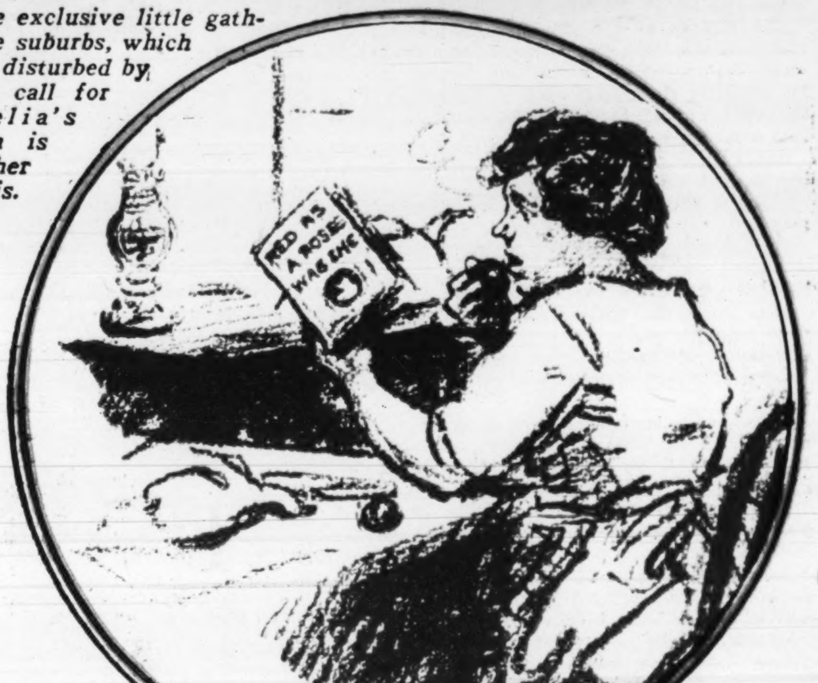
"I often tell my husband I'd like to have this dear little room myself!" Showing Mattie, the prospective maid of all work, around the apartment, and as a grand climax, the maid's room. Mattie has made up her mind not to appear on Monday.



"She drinks, and I just know she is wearing my silk stockings; but, my dear, what can you do!" Four ladies, attending a lecture on "The Social Degradation of the Eighteenth Century Classicists," have reached the really important topic of the hour.

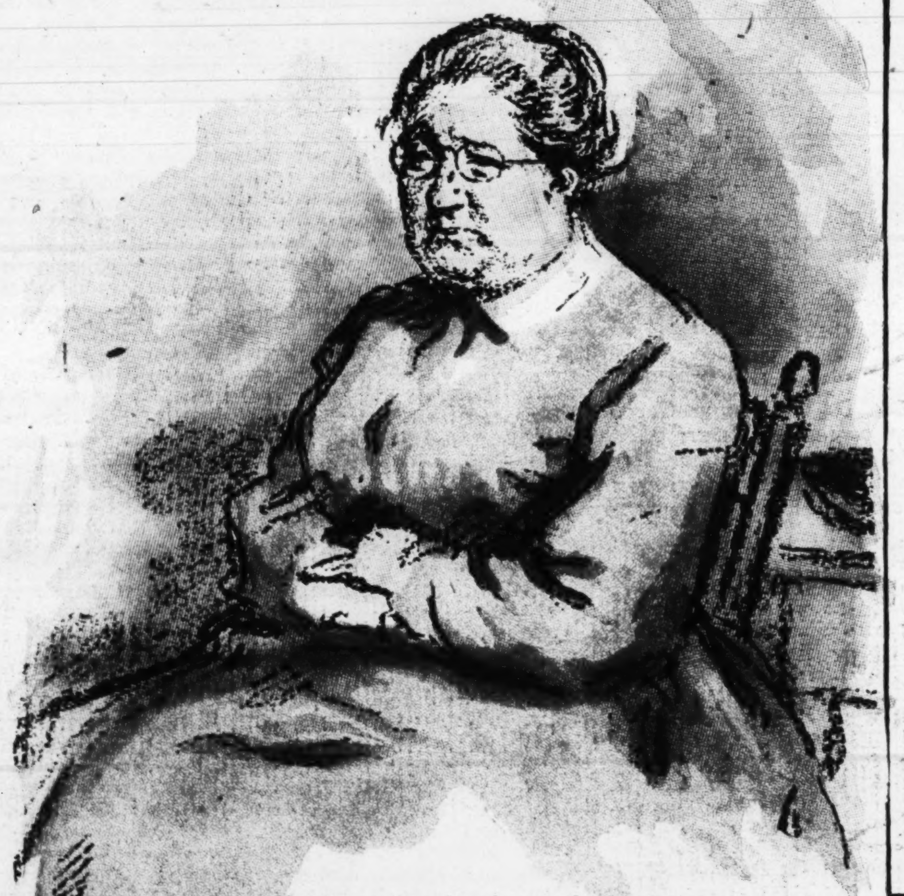


One of those exclusive little gatherings in the suburbs, which is somewhat disturbed by a telephone call for Delia. Delia's young man is making her guess who it is.

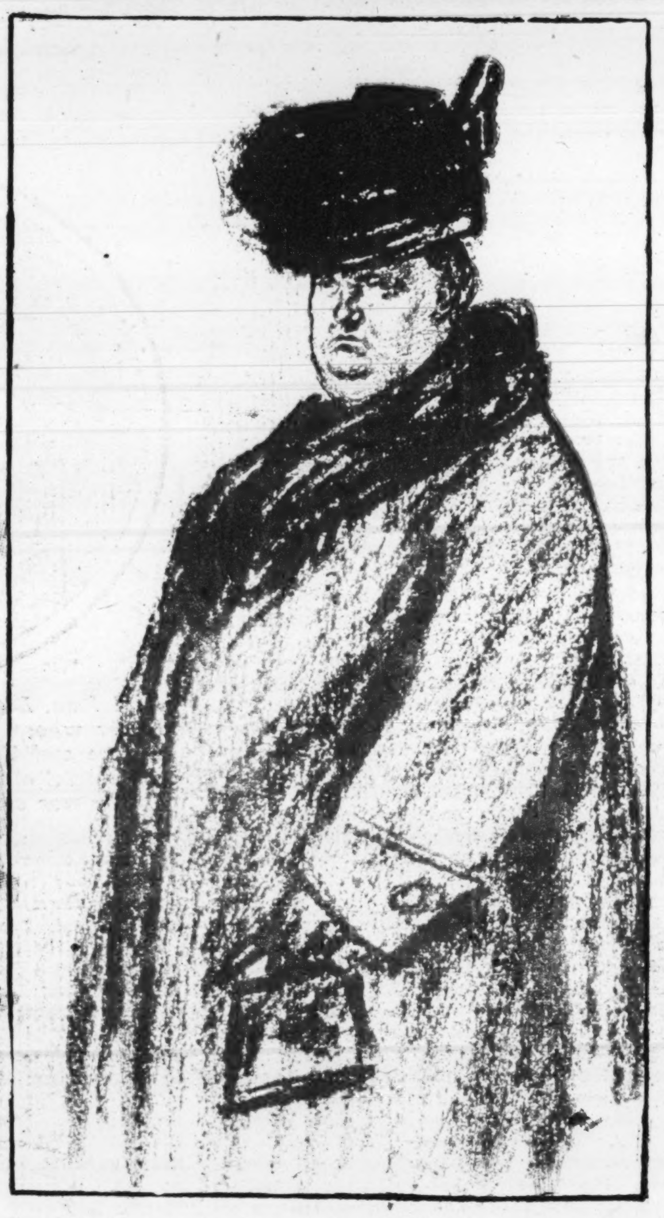


RED AS A ROSE WAS SHE

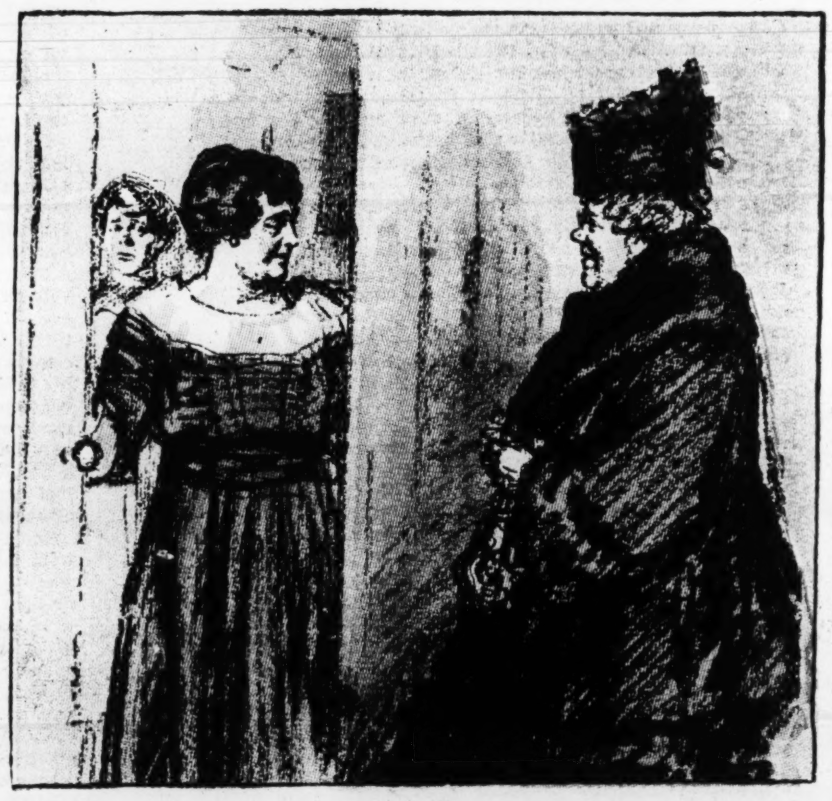
Nellie is a great reader. She has set the oil lamp on the stove, for convenience' sake, and is breathlessly following the astonishing career of Lady Maude, as told in the pages of "He Who Loves Must Dare." Whether or not the chicken will be cleaned in time for dinner is problematical.



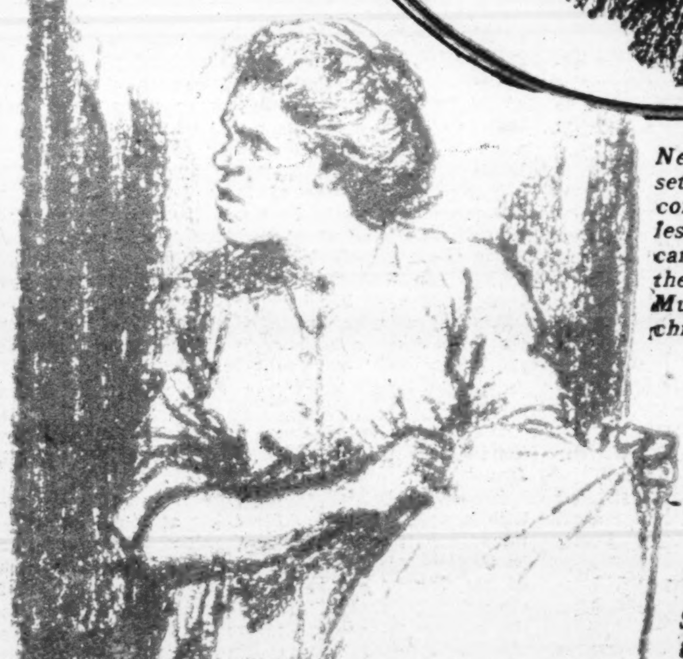
Mrs. Hanley, who, in times of stress, occasionally accomodates by coming in for the day, at $3.50 an hour. "An optimist," relates Mrs. Hanley, "says I got astagmatasms, and I can't see the dirt around, like I useter."



Josie, the cook, has been insulted and is leaving on the spot. Her employers tried to send her to church "in a jitney—the noive of 'em!"



"I simply had to run over and see how you were!" Tense moment in the Versailles Court apartments, when the lady across the way, who had run over for the purpose of enticing Annice, Mrs. Jellie's maid, into her own service, finds the door opened by Mrs. Jellie herself.



Shaking a dustcloth slowly and gently out of the window for several minutes gives Helga an opportunity to keep in touch with the outside world.

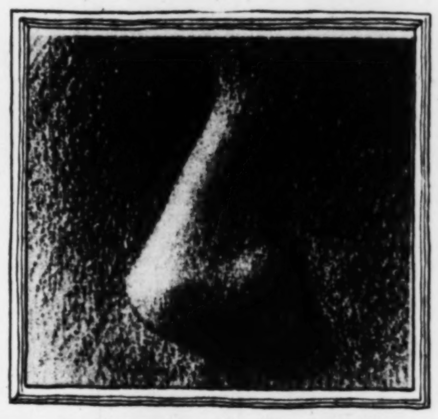
Conspicuous nose pores

How to reduce them



Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

The pores of the face are not as fine as on other parts of the body. On the nose, especially, there are more fat glands than elsewhere and there is more activity of the pores. These pores, if not properly stimulated and kept free from dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged nose pores: Wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Notice the improvement the very first treatment makes—a promise of what the steady use of Woodbury's Facial Soap will do. But do not expect to change completely in a week a condition resulting from long-continued exposure and neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores and make them inconspicuous.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25c cake will last a month or six weeks.

Write today for a week's size cake

For 6c we will send you a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough to last for a week of any Woodbury treatment, together with the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," giving the famous Woodbury skin treatments. Or for 15c we will send samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., 32 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.
